Harper names new head

by Ed Buckman

The man imports the impression that if Harper College were crumbling into sand, the budget would only of empty chairs, and enrollment was down to 17 students—he would still smile optimistically that he could turn things around.

His name is James McGrath, and while he is a type of being president, his background indicates that he is prepared to meet any challenge the position here could offer.

He has been an instructor in accounting, a department chairman and the dean of faculty at the City University of New York (CUNY).

He was still at that position last spring when he saw an advertisement in the Chronicle of Higher Education, offering the job of president at a community college in Palatine.

Robert Lahti, Harper's president since the school first opened in 1965, had resigned because of pressure from Harper's board of trustees. Lahti had taken Harper from being a baby to what it is now—a 15-year-old with a few thousands, but still growing and maturing.

McGrath, 47, will face a few problems right from the start. "Building A falling apart is a problem," he said. "We have a responsibility to make sure we have a preventive maintenance program so that the buildings can be kept in fine order."

McGrath said he is looking into recourse for liability and insurance for the problem. "At this point we don't know if the problem is material or plan," he added.

A company in Pittsburgh, Pa., is looking at the materials to determine the cause, according to McGrath.

McGrath also admits to Harper having budget problems.

The referendum to raise area residents' taxes to help Harper get back on its feet is crucial to the future of the college.

"I'm optimistic about the passing of the referendum," McGrath said.

"I think that the staff, the community, the students, everyone will work together to see it through.

The community realizes the value of Harper to the district."

He displays hope for the budget now, with the vote counting, but while considering the failure of the referendum, he said, "if it's not passed, we're definitely going to run into problems."

The problems would be changed in the course of efforts, according to McGrath, but he still shows confidence by saying, "I don't think that the community or the students want to see a diminished Harper."

Despite budget problems, the salary paid to the president is appealing, at the least. When McGrath left CUNY, he departed a salary of $41,800 per year. Lahti resigned a position then worth $45,700 per year. McGrath will earn a salary of $48,000 per year. For the non-math majors, that breaks down to approximately $100 per week.

McGrath signed a three-year contract, but said he'd like to stay at Harper "for a long period. As long as I can do an effective and productive job."

One characteristic of Harper that McGrath likes is the high enrollment of, as he puts it, "more mature students."

He believes that the older area residents are the key to Harper's future success.

As high school enrollment declines, we must encourage older people to come here," he said.

At the very least, we can maintain our enrollment," he added.

McGrath, a Shakespeareophile (he read all his plays in three years), hopes to "motivate and maintain the outstanding reputation Harper has."

He added that he'll "try to insure that future students will have the best education available."

James McGrath, who was formerly dean of faculty at City University of New York, was named as Harper's president this past summer.

Building A brings problems

by Terri Rutledge

An earthquake is an unlikely way to explain the falling of the spandrel from the roof of 306. A June 26, 1978, better solution is the failure of the spandrel to notice the weakening of the beam.

Although the beam has been weakened, the entrance over which it is still supported for safety's sake made the building, the corridor and stairway near the bookstore are also kept off. While the details are uncovered, the administration hopes everyone will stay the night for their own protection. Additional signs are being made to direct students and faculty to their destinations with little trouble.

Hours after the spandrel fell, the insurance company, the Illinois Building Authority, the Capital Development Board, and the architectural firm of Cassidy, Hewitt, and Scott were called in to view the situation. CNS is now conducting tests into why the spandrel fell. Pittsburgh Laboratories in Chicago is conducting tests on concrete and metal samples for stress.

Until all test results are completed and turned over in live administration, there will be no blame put on anyone. There will also be no net amount of funds for repairs, although estimates are running into the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The sudden falling of the spandrel has brought to light other repairs and needs for replacements either forgotten or ignored up to now. Problems such as water leaks, building supports, sidewalks, curbing, the heating and cooling system, plumbing, and the electric transformer.

After the reports are filed, the question in mind, to paraphrase a famous inquiry rhyme, is whether the Administration can put Harper back together again.

New tax rate could provide quality classes

Harper College has scheduled a referendum Oct. 19 to increase the tax rate for the Educational Fund by 7.5 cents per $100 equalized assessed valuation.

The outcome of the vote that day will determine the scope of programs and services the college will be able to offer and the quality of education available to residents of the district. Polls will be open from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m. Information regarding precinct polling places is available from the township clerks' offices.

At the current time, Harper College is operating on the basis of the original 1955 referendum which provided an Educational Fund rate of 11 cents per $100 assessed valuation. This rate, in combination with state aid and student tuition has allowed the college to provide a successful program which has been utilized by many district residents. During that time, however, three major factors have combined to create the need for additional monies. The factors are 1) growth; 2) inflation; and 3) limited state aid. State appropriations have not kept pace with the inflationary costs community colleges have experienced. As inflationary pressures have increased, more and more per capita have turned to their community colleges for quality higher education. Funds the individual college receives from the state are subject to conditions which limit an individual district's control.

Before authorizing the current referendum, the Board of Trustees carefully examined alternative courses of action. The alternatives and their effects are as follows:

Sell the second site. The Board could authorize the sale of the site, but proceeds from any such sale must be used to pay the outstanding principal and interest on the bonds used to purchase the land. Any balance of principal must be placed in the Site and Construction Fund. Illinois state law prohibits the use of these funds to alleviate the financial problems relating to operational expenses of the college on the main campus.

Tuition. Students' tuition has been increased to $17 per credit hour, giving Harper, along with two

The collapse of the current spandrel above this entrance to 306. A this summer, brought to light many other problems in the building. (photo by Mike Wenden)

Who's to blame for Building A's problems?

Rusting hairline cracks, damage in roof beams, water running in the transformer in Building "A," and extensive leakages through-out the campus are the latest additions to Harper College over the summer.

Because of these damages, anyone who tried going into "A" Building over the summer found it was an obstacle course.

If anyone did figure out where he could get into the building he noticed he could use one door, one stairwell, and perhaps the bookstore, if it was a dry day.

Everyone has figured out what happened, why it happened and even how to repair the damages; the only thing left to decide is who is to blame for these problems.

Is it former President Robert Lahti?

His administration, it was learned in July, did not have any form of preventive maintenance, and it did not even have any allowances in the budget for emergency campus repairs.

Is it the contractors?

In order to keep within the limits of a budget could they have used non-durable short-term materials as substitutes for stronger more expensive long-term materials?

Perhaps in their efforts to design a modern, attractive campus, their plans were impractical, or again, less expensive.

Is it the Harper students?

Do they put too much wear and tear on the building? Is the over-populated campus too much for the structure to handle?

We may never be able to point a finger at just one person; but someone is responsible and should make amends. And soon.

Harper referendum set for Sept. 6

others, the highest tuition among the 39 Illinois community colleges. The individual student pays a third of the cost of his or her education at Harper, or the maximum share allowed by law.

Tax Anticipation Warrants: These warrants do not solve an established long-term financial need, but serve only to 1) forestall dealing with the problem 2) incur substantial interest cost; and 3) cost the public agency using these warrants more money and when that limit is reached, the local financial problem remains.

Working Cash Bond: An alternative to Tax Anticipation Warrants, the Working Cash Bond provides only a short-term solution. A district is limited as to the amount which can be generated through the bonds and if that limit is reached before a rate increase is realized through a referendum, the institution will no longer be able to meet its costs.

After consideration of the alternatives, Harper's Board of Trustees determined that the responsible course of action was to seek additional local tax support.

Anyone who is 18 years of age on or before the date of the election, a United States Citizen, and has lived in the Harper College district for at least 30 days is eligible to vote. Voter registration may be done as late as the day before the referendum. A recruitment drive will be conducted at Harper Aug. 28 and 31 from 8 a.m.-3 p.m. in the Lounge, Bldg. A. Further information about the referendum is available at 397-3000, ext. 381.

Harper looks ahead to brighter days

Harper starts another new school year. It looks to be a productive one, too. With a new president to start us off in the right direction, Harper can look forward to a fresh start, putting behind us the mistakes and problems of the past.

There are several new faculty members and club advisors this year which will help aim the school toward a more successful future.

There are more clubs and projects getting underway to help get the students involved, and participating in Harper activities.

When Building "M" is completed a new gym and many recreational facilities will add to Harper's fast growing campus.

We hope that everyone who is returning to Harper will help in making this school year a better one, and that everyone who is new this year will try to be a positive addition to Harper College.

Referendum discussion Sept. 6

There will be an information meeting on the Harper College tax referendum, Sept. 6 at 7:30 p.m. at the Palestine Public Library at 380 N. Benton St.

The information meeting is sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Palestine, and is being held with their League policy, representatives from both sides of the issue will be present. Mr. Jim McGrath, new President of Harper College, will speak for the referendum, and John Walker, from the National Taxpayers United of Illinois, will speak against the referendum. Gail Peterson, League member from Wheaton will act as moderator for the evening. Each side will be given 20 minutes for its presentation. At the conclusion of the presentation, each side will be given five minutes for a rebuttal. Then the moderator will entertain questions from the public.

Senators plan fall elections

by Lynne Brown

Representing the student body and balancing the student activity fee funds budget of $100,000 are just two of the duties assumed by the representatives to the student senate.

The senate, which will be conducting elections for the upcoming year on Sept. 11 and 12, is composed of one representative from each of the following academic divisions: business, engineering, math, physical science, fine arts and dentistry, liberal arts, life and health sciences, and social science and public service plus three representatives from the Club and Organization Council and one each from peer counseling and student trustees.

The senate has the power of approving club and organization charters, recommending students for college committees, and reviewing and recommending changes in college policy, according to a student senate newsletter.

To be eligible for candidacy in the fall election a representative must enroll and successfully complete a minimum of three credit hours each semester of his office term, and must have declared a major or have completed for a majority of hours in the academic division he represents.

The duties of a representative include: attendance at all student senate meetings as well as all committee meetings of which he is a member, verbal and written reports on all projects in process and completed; five hours a week during senate approved ideas with the student body; serve at least as one senate or institutional committee each semester; and assume all duties assigned by officers of the senate.

Any student interested in petitioning for candidacy is required to sign a Declaration of Candidacy stating his intent to run for office.

Campaigning is not allowed until a candidate's petition has been received by the Student Activities Office and then campaigning is under certain restrictions which such candidate is notified of.

All registered, credit certified Harper students are allowed to vote. Any questions regarding the election procedures should be directed to the Election Committee or the director of student activities.

Elections for student senate will be held Sept. 11 and 12. Petitions are now available in the Student Activities Office, A336. Last year's senate was headed up by Paul Johnson, center.

Meet Program Board

We would like to introduce ourselves to all Harper students. We are the Program Board. We are the student organization that sponsors most of the popular entertainment on campus, including concerts, movies, afternoon programs, and special events.

No doubt while you are attending Harper, you will also attend many Program Board activities, simply for your social and cultural enjoyment. But there is always a core group of students who appreciate these programs on another level as well. These students are the ones who decide on and organize the programs. They gain an understanding of budgeting money, decision-making, leadership styles when working with people, and business acumen from dealing with entertainers and booking agents. This is a unique learning experience which will be felt all through life.

These students, Program Board members, may also learn how to run a spotlight or sound system, how to write an effective press release, and how to have a good time working toward worthwhile objectives. Participation on the Program Board guarantees an opportunity to become involved in campus life.

In addition to these personal benefits, tuition related and travel to conventions are available to students who make a significant contribution to student activities.

There are still several chairmanship positions open on the 1978-79 Program Board, as well as openings on the committee level. If you think you might be interested in participating and would like to discuss it, please bring your questions to a meeting on Wednesday and/or Thursday, at 3 p.m. in the Student Activities Office, A336. We hope you will want to meet us, too.

Peer counselors needed

Students interested in being employed as Peer Counselors should pick up an application in the Student Development Center A347 and return it there by Sept. 1. Peer Counselors are paid according to the Harper College Student Aide wage scale and work approximately 18 hours per week. There is also a possibility that students will receive academic credit in lieu of wages.

A Peer Counselor is a student who assists the Student Development staff in a variety of counseling-related functions and who serves as a liaison between the Student Development staff and Harper students. Before assuming that responsibility, Peer Counselors experience a short term training session which is conducted by the Peer Counseling coordinator, Bruce Buhner.

Former Peer Counselors have found peer counseling to be a very rewarding experience. Students who enjoy talking, listening, and working with people are encouraged to apply.

"Oh God," "Heroes" and "The Deep" coming to Harper this fall

Program Board will present the best office hit "Oh God" at 8 p.m. Friday in E108. The film stars George Burns and John Denver.

A fanciful adventure in humor and humanity, "Oh God" tells of God coming to Earth in the cool, sharp form of Burns and selecting Denver, an assistant manager of a supermarket, to help him straighten out mankind. This funny and touching comedy, rated PG, is directed by Carl Reiner.

Admission is 75 cents for Harper students with a fall activity card. Each student will be allowed one ticket for the same price.

Other films coming to Harper this fall include "Drive-In", to be shown next Wednesday; "The Deep," "The Godfather Part II," "Smoky and the Bandits," "Paper Chase" and "Heroes."

Chris recording star Leo Kottke will be the featured performer at the first fall concert sponsored by Student Activities Opening the Sept. 1 concert will be Jan Paul, whose unique voice, lyrics and style have earned him fans everywhere.

The concert starts at 8 p.m. in the College Center Lounge, located in bldg. A. Tickets are $5 for Harper students and $6 for the public. Further information is available from Student Activities, A336, or by calling 367-0366, ext. 332.

WHCM accepting applications

WHCM, Harper's closed circuit radio station, is currently accepting applications from students who would like to join its staff.

Any students who would like to learn about radio and gain practical experience in broadcasting are invited to stop by the station's office, A331, and talk to the station manager John Blum. Students do not need any previous experience in radio, and the station will provide training.

WHCM broadcasts over 48 hours of music and information weekly. It can be heard in the Student Center lounge, bldg. A, and in some other parts of buildings on the campus.

Programming is divided into blocks beginning with top 40 music, similar to WLS, from 8:30 a.m. to 10 a.m. Album oriented rock, like WQXR or WLUP, is played from 10 a.m.-2 p.m., and progressive music is featured from 2-4 p.m. Easy listening music, similar to that played by WWMV or WKEN, is played from 4-6 p.m., followed by AOR from 6-8 p.m. and progressive music ends the day from 8-10 p.m.

Harper Hawks prepare for new football season

by Joe Kunk

This year the Harper football team is returning the most players ever in its history. Approximately 18 players are returning from last year's 5-4 squad. Coach Eliash feels quarterback and speed are the main strengths this year and to capitalize on these strengths will lead to a successful season. Some returning players adding their experience and maturity to the team are: Jim Callies, defensive end; Randy Nys, defensive back; Joe McChamney, defensive back; wide receivers, Bill Strawn and Mike Cusack; Bill Cooper, offensive guard; Brian Gotsdiner, running back; and quarterback Neil Schmidt.

The team needs interior linemen to rebuild both offensive and defensive line. Coach Eliash is hoping that many former Mid-Suburban League players will help the team out this year in all positions. The Hawk's play a very tough 16 game schedule, starting on Sept. 2 at 1 p.m. against University of De-la-Salle. The following week they play their first conference game at home against Triun. All home games start at 1:30 p.m.

Coach Eliash explained the level of competition is increasingly higher every year and an undefeated champion is rare. Other coaches for this year's team are: Mark Steger, backfield; Dick Baran, offensive line; Ward Nelson, defensive line; Al Schutte, defensive backfield; and George Fries, defensive end. Anyone interested in trying out should contact one of these men right away.

Tryouts for the Harper cheerleading squad will be on Aug. 31, from 6-8 p.m. in A342.

Cheerleaders will be chosen from those judged best in "cheer ability, personal appearance, smile, poise, spirit, projection, jumps, gymnastic ability and skills" according to sponsor Susan Thompson.

Cheerleaders are active at all football games, home and away, and also at hockey and wrestling competitions. Cheerleaders will also participate in homecoming activities.

Clinics for cheerleaders will be Aug. 29 and 30, from 6-8 p.m. in A342. Thompson requests that all those trying out wear dark shorts, white shirt, socks, and white gym shoes.

Attention Able-bodied men: If you enjoy meeting new people and bring part of the 'ol' gang, Harper football is your answer. Contact Coach Eliash, Ext. 466 or 467.

Be in shape for the between class clash. Harper cross-country will get you ready and you'll be joining a winning team besides. See Coach Nohus or call the Athletic office, Ext. 466 or 467.

New gym complete early next year

by Joe W. Cook

January or February of '79. That was the date given by Athletic Director John Gebel on completion of Building M, Harper's Physical Fitness Center. This date may vary, Mr. Gebel explained, on availability of materials and weather conditions. For you new students, Building M will have areas for almost any activity imaginable. It will contain classrooms for different aspects of health education, recreational leadership, and first aid. For physical fitness activities it will contain a 10-lap mile track, and a gymnasium in which nets can be dropped from the ceiling to divide the gym into four separate modules. Plans are being made to use the gymnasium for community events such as graduation ceremonies, concerts, and lectures. It will seat approximately 2,700.

The swimming pool has unique structure as a movable bulkhead will allow it to be converted from yards to meters for swimming competition. Also for the bulkhead is another special feature: the pool is equipped with

The building will also contain its basketball/volleyball courts, two of which will have spectator seating for tournament play. There will be separate areas for gymnastics, weight training, and wrestling with a dance studio above the second floor.

At completion of the building near, the Advisory Committee is purchasing equipment, setting up schedules for intramural, intercollegiate, and community activities. The committee also is setting up fee structures for use of some certain areas. It is getting more specific with each task and is now finalizing all plans. Some highlights of Building M: it will 67,500 square feet at a cost of $3,170,761. When Building M is completed it will enable Harper to expand its women's sports programs in compliance with Title IX. As it stands Harper has some men's and five women's intercollegiate athletic teams. Building M promises to be one of the most comprehensive structures of its kind in the nation.

Build. M, a versatile structure, will be ready by Jan. or Feb., according to athletic director John Gebel. (photo by Beth Jones)

Harper to receive new RTA routes in October

by Pat Butler

William Rainey Harper students may have five new bus routes to use starting sometime in October, Clayton Weaver, Senior Planner for the RTA said.

Students now have access to only one RTA route. This route starts out at the Arlington Heights railroad depot, to Arlington Heights, down Fernside, as far south as Golf Rd., west on Algonquin, north on Plum Grove Rd., and west on Furler over to the college. If the new routes are implemented, they will originate from Buffalo Grove, Schaumburg, Elk Grove Village, Deerfield, and Arlington Heights.

These routes will end up at Woodfield Mall, which will be the main transfer center. Woodfield was chosen because many students work there and have shown a need for this type of bus service, Clayton said. Students will be able to board a shuttle bus that will run between Harper and Woodfield. Although there will be specific stops on each run, anyone may flag down one of the buses anywhere along the prescribed routes. More information about these routes will be issued along as it becomes available. Students needing any type of RTA travel information concerning bus or train schedules may call in Chicago: 836-7000, or toll-free from the suburbs at 800-975-7000.

7.9 percent increase Board of Trustees approves new budget

by Judy Saunders

After eliminating more than $1 million from their original estimated expenses, the Harper Board of Trustees have approved a $17,877,364 budget for the 1978-79 school year. This grand total represents a 7.9% increase over the previous year.

There are three categories in the newly adopted budget which represent significant increases. Salary increases, totaling $467,000, signifies a 3.4% increase; provisions for preventative building maintenance, amounting to $347,500, represents a 2.8% increase; and a $250,000 increase in the Contingency Fund, which is used in the event of an emergency, represents a 1.8% increase.

Although the new budget symbolizes a $1.2 million increase over last year, the board has cut costs in two areas. They have scrapped 11 administrative and staff positions, saving $181,000 and have eliminated $28,419 in travel budgets.

"Every effort has been made to hold the line on this budget, increases are due to inflation," James McGrath said.

Despite the board's continual battle with the budget, relief is not in sight for the coming school year. Badly needed repairs around the college will be placing a large burden on the administration and board members this fall. College officials received a serious warning about the disrepair of Harper buildings when a 13-ton concrete span, located at the west end of A building, came crashing to the ground on June 29.

In a letter to the board, President McGrath said "structural problems which have become evident this year could have a major financial impact on the college. The fallen spanned demonstration of the need for constant monitoring of building conditions. Deterioration of buildings indicates the necessity of implementing a programmed maintenance and capital replacement plan."

"We're not home free because we are still spending more than we have coming in. It will be impossible to make more cuts without cutting into the muscle of the college," board member George Disher said.

In addition to wrestling with the college's financial difficulties, the board is gearing up for the upcoming tax referendum, which is slated for Sept. 19.

The referendum is requesting a 7.5-cent tax increase per $100 equalized assessed valuation.

E.R.A. extension will help it pass

The date for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, E.R.A., for the remaining states needed was recently extended.

A Senate Committee proposed the date be extended until 1980 and the motion was approved by Congress.

The remaining states needed to pass the amendment nationally now have much more time to discuss, debate and ratify the amendment.

The E.R.A. is basically concerned with equal respect for women as human beings. Some people prefer to call it the Equal Respect Amendment, because that is precisely what it is. That isn't really too much for women to ask—to be treated with the same respect and dignity as their male counterparts.

With respect to occupations, E.R.A. states that women should be able to choose their career goals on the basis of their ability to do the job. If a woman wants to work as a garbage collector, sewer engineer, construction worker, or city official she should be awarded the job on the basis of her merits.

"Merits" refers to a level of intelligence, ambition, and degree of physical ability necessary for the job; it does not mean her measurements, hair color, and physical beauty. Women do not want to be given jobs to fill minority quotas, however. Again merits and overall aptitude should be the reason for her receiving the job.

Another aspect of the amendment, equal pay for equal work is another right that can't reasonably be denied. It shouldn't even be an issue for debate in the first place. Any person who holds a job and does it well, should be paid the same salary as another person who has the same job and the same capabilities.

On Oct. 12, at 8:30 p.m. in the lounge in Bldg. A Phyllis Schafly, housewife and well-known opponent to E.R.A. will debate this topic with Karen DeCroz, president of The National Organization for Women, (N.O.W.). Those who remain undecided on the E.R.A. issue will probably have a definite opinion after seeing this debate.

Some think the amendment is too strong, too demanding, too liberal, or too something. This is probably because they don't understand what it is asking for. Many haven't explored the amendment fully and compared the pros and cons. All that women want is equality and respect in their rightful areas. Women don't want to be men, they just want the rights and privileges owed to them by the promise made to them in the U.S. Constitution.

He has also won a Grammy Award in 1977, and has recorded nine albums. His latest is "Burnt Lips." Appearing with Kettle will be Chicago musician Jim Post.

Referendum pros, cons discussed at library next week

There will be an information meeting on the Harper College tax referendum on September 4 at 7:30 p.m. at the Palestine Public Library at 300 N. Boston St.

The information meeting is sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Palestine, and is being held by their League policy, representatives from both sides of the issue will be present. James McGrath, new President of Harper College, will speak for the referendum, and John Walker, from the National Taxpayers United of Illinois, will speak against the referendum. Gail Peterson, board member from Wheaton will act as moderator for the evening. Each side will be given 10 minutes for its presentation. At the conclusion of the presentations, each side will be given five minutes for a rebuttal. Then the moderator will entertain questions from the public.

Voter registration today, Thursday

Voter registration for Cook County residents will be held at the Harper College Palestine campus, Bldg. A, Algonquin and Roundie Roads today and Thursday, from 8 a.m. to 12 p.m.

Voter registration days at Harper were instituted three years ago in response to student requests, and are sponsored every fall by the Student Activities office. Registration is conducted by personnel provided by the Cook County Clerk's office, and is open to any Cook County resident who is eligible to vote.

In order to register, applicant must be a United States citizen, 18 years of age or older before the date of the next election, and a resident of the election district for 30 days prior to the election.

Student Trustee Peter Marchand of Roundie Road, "I believe it is important that each citizen participate in the American political system." Marchand adds, "I hope making voter registration available will help students and other community residents exercise their rights as voters."

Rt. 696 provides students with inexpensive transportation

by Pat Butler

Harper students presently have access to only one RTA bus route, Rt. 696 which begins its run at Arlington Heights Railroad station. This route makes frequent runs to and from the college Monday through Friday.

It has been doing this for at least a year, offering many students an inexpensive (only 30 cents one way) mode of transportation. In fact for some students it is their only way to get to Harper.

The bus ride itself is a pleasant one. The driver, usually Shirley Quintanilla, loves to work with people.

"The kids are just great, too," exclaims the proud driver.

The students seem to be comfortable with the driver and the bus route in general. The friendly atmosphere must be catching because the route's ridership is increasing daily.

On the first day of classes, there were only 15 riders, but the second day of school, the number had doubled by 2 p.m.

Many students used the bus service during the summer session also as at least 15-20 students rode it daily.

The half mile ride from the railroad station coupled with the inexpensive bus fare and frequent runs make the Harper RTA bus route one of the best ways to "get around."

Weekdays only. No Saturday, Sunday or holiday service.

The above diagram shows the route in Harper of RTA bus 696 which is currently the only RTA bus going to Harper.

Absentee ballots available in A220

Absentee ballot applications for the Harper College referendum election on Sept. 19 are now available.

Applications may be obtained in person in bldg. A, Room 220 of the Palestine campus, Algonquin and Roundie Roads or by calling 387-3000, ext. 300 between 8:15 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The last day to apply by mail for an absentee ballot is Sept. 14. Personal application for ballots can be made through Sept. 18.

which would be the first raise in Harper's tax structure since the birth of the college in 1962. Harper's current tax rate, which is 21.8 cents, is the lowest of all the Illinois community colleges.

Approximately $15,000, mostly in donations to the college, is being spent on the campaign. A committee of 14 has been constituted to promote the referendum. "The committee has worked diligently the last two months. We've been contacted by many organizations and they are requesting speakers to discuss the referendum," Dr. Garvin Fisher, Vice President of Student Affairs said.

A hotline has been set up to handle phone calls dealing with referendum. Questions may be directed to informed persons by dialing 387-3000, ext. 361.

OPEN TO ALL INTERESTED STUDENTS/STAFF/FACULTY

A336 offers more than fun

(Above) Jeanne Pankas of Student Activities is basically concerned with the Program Board. (Below) Frank Berelli also of Student Activities is involved with the Cultural Arts committee.

by Vicki Eiska

The student activities office is a place to come if a student has any interest in "getting involved." If a student wants to form a club or find out about one, the office's doors are always open.

They have many responsibilities, some of which are advising all student organizations, putting out an activity calendar, assisting in planning programs such as concerts and coordinating them to their office.

The student activity fee is used to support many programs and services. A few of these are: cultural arts series of lectures, films, etc.; social programs of popular films, concerts, etc.; and health services, child care services.

A baby-sitting service available to students from a lawyer. Short-term loans are also available for up to $50. These are only a few of the programs and services available. The list is much longer.

The people that basically run the student activities office are Jeanne Pankas and Frank Berelli. Most of the time they work together on everything. Jeanne, however, is usually involved with the program board while Mr. Berelli with the cultural arts committee. Jeanne says the student activities office adds the student in an "appreciation of learning out of the classroom," and the students "learn by working with other students and interacting with faculty members." The whole idea is to have a good time while learning. Jeanne is going into her fourth year here and she "really enjoys her job."

Any student who is interested and has some spare time may contact the student activities office for further information.

The meetings are held in the Student Activities Office and are mediated by advisor, Jeanne Pankas.

The working branch of Program Board is the Task Force. This is a group of students that decides on programs, distribute posters and makes students aware of upcoming events. They also conduct student interest polls to help decide who to get for these events.

Although the Board budget is funded by Student Activity Fee, it has not dropped them from getting interesting and exciting guests and films. A few of the celebrities appearing in the past are Steve Martin, Journey, Beat, and Steve Bishop. Two of the films scheduled for this year are "Oh God!" and "The Deep." There are six concerts and 10 afternoons activities a year, not to mention numerous films and special events, such as the Homecoming activities. The films are free to the student body. There are also successful fund raisers like the Rens Casino.

To join, all there is to do is attend the meetings, usually held on Mondays at 2 p.m. Postboxes open include President, Afternoon Activities, Film Chairman, and Task Force.

There are also fringe benefits. Students gain skills in how to budget and raise money, and have access to concerts. They may be eligible for trips to conventions in other cities.

If anyone is interested in meeting people and getting involved in new projects, these clubs are available to them.

Ski Club needs officers

Harper's Spread Eagle Ski Club is one of the oldest and most popular clubs on campus. Formed in 1968, the Ski Club's membership has included skiing experts and racers as well as beginners (those who can't tell their right ski from their left).

When the snow starts to fall, it's too late to begin planning ski trips, so several ideas are already in the works. There will be one-day trips to Wislata, Alps, or such locations. Three or four weekend ski trips will be planned to Wisconsin, Michigan or Minnesota locations. In addition, there will be a week-long ski trip in January to Jackson Hole, Wyoming, Banff, Canada, or a similar location.

All officer positions of the Ski Club are available; they are President, Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer and Projectionist. Persons interested in getting involved in the planning and leadership of Ski Club, please attend an officers' meeting on September 7 at 1 p.m. in the Student Activities Office, A336.

Spectrum needs workers

Spectrum Youth Service needs adult volunteers, especially for daytime hours, to work in their counseling and referral center, 1114 1/2th Boulevard and Schaumburg Road, Hoffman Estates.

The role of a Spectrum volunteer is to greet and talk with people who phone or walk in for service. "The volunteer clarifies a person's concerns, provides needed information, and makes appropriate referrals to Spectrum's professional staff or to other community agencies," according to coordinator Jeanne Reid.

Volunteers will be needed also to help supervise "The Room," a place at Spectrum for teenagers to relax.

Prospective volunteers must go through a five-week thirty-hour training program which will next begin on Sept. 30. The minimum service expected after training is one four-hour shift per week for at least six months.

Spectrum is a youth and family service agency sponsored by Schaumburg Township. It provides free confidential help to young people and parents with personal, family, legal, medical and other concerns. Spectrum is staffed by professional social workers.

For information, call 864-4313.

There will be a meeting today at 10 a.m. & 2 p.m. in the boardrooms, bldg. A for students interested in working on the referendum.

Health Service serves students

Good health is important to function effectively, as shown on the job, at home. If you are experiencing some type of physical problem, or if you just like information on how to stay healthy, stop by AME, Harper's new health service office.

Liz McKay and Rosemary Murray, both registered nurses, are ready to help you every day from 8:15 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Part-time nurses are available every evening to assist you. The Health Service is also open Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. to serve students taking classes in the Weekend College.

You will receive first-hand professional answers to your questions and problems. The Health Service provides complete first aid treatment for accidents or illness, and will dispense medications such as cold capsules, aspirin, throat lozenges, cough medication, and amoxicillin (trade name: Trimox) and other non-prescription drugs. A doctor is available on campus five days a week for two hours every morning and Wednesday evening from 6 to 8 p.m. You may make an appointment to see him or just walk in during those times. He can diagnose and treat your problem, write prescriptions for medications, laboratory tests, X-rays, or refer you to another physician when necessary.

These services are offered without charge and are paid for in part by your Student Activity fee and Health Service budget. If you need health counseling and have questions of a personal nature, you can be sure that your questions and all health service visits will be handled in STRICT CONFIDENCE. In the Health Service, you get facts, not fiction.

Free testing for various diseases is available. If your throat is sore, be sure to stop in and get a throat culture. You may have strep and if so, you can also obtain a prescription for an antibiotic at the Health Service. Skin testing for tuberculosis is also available, as well as screening for mononucleosis. If you think you might be pregnant, the Health Service will be glad to do a free and confidential pregnancy test for you. You can also receive confidential diagnosis and treatment for Venereal Disease by the Health Service staff at no charge.

And, by the way, if it has been a long night and you need some such time, the Health Service has several cots so that you can rest undisturbed.

Insurance brochures and applications for accident and hospital coverage are also available in the Health Service. You may see the staff to pay your premium or to obtain claim forms for your coverage.

The Health Service staff and services are available to help meet your health needs while on campus.

Feel free to stop in at the Health Service office any time. That's its title. A, the third floor, next to the Counseling Center, AME. Their door is open for you from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily and Saturday mornings from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Learning Lab helps students help themselves

by Doug Peterson

Harper College offers help for those having difficulty in Writing. The Writing Lab, located in F-102, offers assistance in three basic areas of English. For example, CMN900 reviews basic writing skills; CMN901 offers help in spelling improvement.

Jerry Weber, one of two full time members of the staff involved in the Writing Lab, said that they offer two kinds of help. The student may either come in any time he needs help and receive free assistance, or the student can sign up for one or more of the classes.

Frequently when students have problems in English 101 or 102 they drop the class and lose their money. This isn't necessary. They can simply transfer down in the writing lab and receive full credit, not waste their money and be prepared for re-entry into English 101 or 102, Weber said.

"If a student needs help only with a particular assignment, then all they have to do is come in and make an appointment with one of the tutoring co-ordinators and we can help him," Weber said.

Staffing the writing lab are two members of the faculty that are there all the time, one part time later and seven part time.

reviews basic writing skills in grammar, sentence structure, punctuation, and paragraph structure.

Unlike a typical English class, in CMN 900, the class utilizes student-teacher conferences. The student is given an opportunity to sit down with the teacher and go over his progress.

The course is competency based," Weber said, "meaning that you work at your own pace and that the material is divided into small units of instruction. In order for the student to go on to the next unit, he must take a mastery test and receive a 90 percent or better."

Classes CMN 900 and CMN 901 can be taken together. Both courses are self-paced and have flexible time scheduling which is arranged when the student and his instructor.

The spelling course is non-graded and offers a worry free way to improve your spelling.

All three courses offered are open-entry, meaning that the student can enter at any time during the semester.

"What I think is very important for the students to know," Weber said, "is that help is available for students having problems in English and it's here in F-102."

Steve Jim Post will appear with Leo Kuchko at the first fall concert Friday night at 8 in the lounge.

Art grants offered

Applications will be available September 1, 1978, for the Illinois Arts Council's 1979 Project Completion Grant Program. In its second year, the PCS Program offers grants of up to $500 to individual creative artists to complete a work in progress.

Eligible artists include architects, choreographers, craftspeople, fiction writers, filmmakers, graphic artists, mixed media artists, music composers, painters, photographers, playwrights, poets, sculptors and video artists.

Funds can be used for such needs as materials, framing, catalogue and insurance for visual artists; manuscript typing, postage, secretarial help and research travel for fiction writers and poets; costumes, performers' salaries and rehearsal space for choreographers; computers and playrights, and editing and duplicate print copies for film and video artists.

This year, a total of $50,000 has been allocated for the program, an increase from last year's total appropriation of $12,500. This year $25,000 will be available for the first deadline, October 1, and $25,000 reserved for the second deadline, February 1, 1979.

"We are pleased that the Council has increased the amount of funds available to aid individual creative artists in Illinois," said Jennifer Meyer, IAC Artists' Program Coordinator. "The overwhelming response to last year's program, and the many existing projects which were assisted, indicate there is a real need for the Project Completion Grants."

Grants are generally from $500 to $500. Decisions will be based upon artistic quality, quality of the project, the artist's ability to complete the project, and the potential for public presentation.

Applications are reviewed by Illinois Arts Council staff or a member of an IAC Advisory Panel. Final selections are made by the Chairperson of the appropriate Advisory Panel in each discipline, and by the Executive Director.

For an application form, and further information, contact the Financial Assistance Office, Illinois Arts Council, 111 N. Wabash, Chicago, IL 60602. (312) 455-6776.

Program Board Sponsors Old-Fashioned Social

The Program Board will continue its series of afternoon programs with a chocolate and musical treat. Students are invited to enjoy the pleasures of an old-fashioned Ice Cream Social at noon on Wed. Sept. 6.

An ice cream sundae piled high with chocolate, butterscotch, whipped cream, nuts, and a cherry can be purchased for just 10 cents. Added to the delight of this culinary treat, free musical entertainment and comedy will be provided by pianist George Flischoff of New York. (Voice Flischoff actually has five voices.)

1) He is a hit songwriter. Remember the songs "Lay Days" or "98.7", both penned by Flischoff. Everyone from Perry Como to Pearl Bailey to the Monkees has recorded his songs.

2) By opening a show on Broadway in 1976, he became the youngest playwright on Broadway in the nation ever. He is currently working on a Broadway musical based on the novel Saygers by James Michener.

3) He is sought-after writer for commercial advertisement.

Flischoff's career as a recording artist of his own material began four years ago. All of his recorded singles have made it to the Billboard Singles charts.

4) Fortunately for his fans, two years ago Flischoff began performing live. He especially enjoys performing for college students.

"So many people today think that music is guitar. I want to wake them up to the glories of music. I like to offer the kind of involvement you can't get by just listening to an album," he says. Flischoff will involve his audience. He will spontaneously compose a tune based on their suggestions. Says Flischoff, "My piano, my audience, and me like to have fun together."

Weather permitting, this program will be held outside on the north patio of Bldg. A. Otherwise it will be moved into the College Center Lounge.

"Drive-In" shown Wednesday in lounge

Remember those high school days when Friday nights meant going to the drive-in with a carload of friends (in the trunk of your car)? Well, relive all those great times and come see "Drive-In" Wednesday at noon in A336. (Behind the fireplace.)

This film, the first in a series of afternoon fall programs has been called "the most fun movie since 'American Graffiti.'" It's set up as a movie-within-a-movie. The movie movie, "Disaster '78," features colossal disasters, mid-air collisions, tidal waves, blasting skyrockets and barbed sharks. All jam-packed into one giant screen at the Adams Drive-In. Starring Lisa Lunsade and Glen Murawski and directed by Rod Amateau.

Parking lot cooperation asked

The Public Safety Department would appreciate the cooperation of all faculty, staff members and students in obeying all parking and traffic regulations on the college campus.

All the parking areas are designated with signs at the entrances and copies of the college parking regulations pamphlet, complete with a map of the parking lots are available 24 hours a day in the Public Safety office in Bldg. B.

We especially ask your help in keeping the medical parking spaces open for those people who have been issued medical parking permits and genuinely need those spaces.

Parking permits are required on vehicles driven by faculty/staff and students. If you have not yet obtained a new parking permit for the fall semester, please stop by the Public Safety Office and pick one up. Anytime, day or night.

The Public Safety officers will issue only warning notices for parking and traffic violations for the first few weeks of the new school year.

Repeated violations may result in current court citations being issued.

Please do not park on the grass.

Come to the cabaret this fall

Harper College Studio Theatre opens its theatre season with the new Kander/Fred Ebb award-winning musical, "Cabaret". Production dates are Nov. 9, 11, 12, 13, 16, and 19.

Auditions for "Cabaret" will be held on Sept. 12 and 13, 7 p.m. in A130. Those auditioning will be asked to read from the script, sing, and dance. Auditionees should prepare a song for the audition and bring the sheet music. A pianist will be provided. The choreographer will teach a short dance sequence which those auditioning will be asked to repeat.

"Cabaret" is under the direction of Harper speech and theatre instructor Mary Jo Willis. Dr. Robert Tillotson, Harper Music Department, is handling vocal and orchestra. Al Mueller, whose background includes professional theatre as well as teaching, is choreographing the production.

"Cabaret" opened on Broadway in November, 1966, and won the Tony for best musical that year. It tells the story of cabaret singer, Sally Bowles, and is a study in contrast: the lawless life inside the cabaret and the destruction of personal lives and values by the growing Nazi menace in Germany.

Several roles are available. They include the Master of Ceremonies, Sally Bowles; Clifford Bradshaw, a struggling young writer and Sally's love interest; Ernst Ludwig, a Nazi organizer; Fraulein Schneider, who runs the boarding house where Sally lives; Herr Schultz, a fruit vendor and early victim of Nazi terror; Fraulein Kuntz, a lady of the evening; a chorus which consists of the Kit Kat Girls in the cabaret, Sailors, Waiters, etc.

A workshop entitled "How to Audition Well" will be presented on Sept. 8, from 1:30 to 3:00 p.m. in A130. The session will deal with audition techniques for musical as well as straight theatre and will be conducted by the three "Cabaret" directors, Mary Jo Willis, Bob Tillotson, and Al Mueller. All interested students, faculty, and staff are invited to attend.

Students who would like to be involved in production crews for "Cabaret" are asked to attend one of the audition nights, September 12 and 13, or see Willis in A130. Set Designer/Technical Director for "Cabaret" is Mr. Larry Chiles.

Dr. Tillotson is seeking music, drama and miscellaneous percussion. Musicians are asked to contact Tillotson in the Fine Arts and Design Division Office or at ext. 388.

Circle K and Program Board offer much

by Teri Rotondo

If students would like to acquire new experiences while attending Harper, two of the clubs where they can do just that are Circle K and Program Board.

Circle K is a community service-oriented organization for on and off campus activities.

Some of Circle K's projects planned for this year include visiting the residents of nursing homes, providing sponsors for the Big Brother/Big Sister program, and possibly a dance marathon in support of Muscular Dystrophy in October.

Circle K is a noteworthy organization; not only in Chicago, but all over the United States. Its International Convention was held recently in Orlando, Fla. The Chicago District Convention, which includes groups from Illinois and Iowa, will be discussed at the meetings.

Students are welcome to join by getting in touch with the officers in the Student Activity Office or by attending the meetings which will be held on the Harper Bulletin Board. A small fee is required for a club pin, card, and incidentals for the year.

Program Board

The Program Board coordinates all the extracurricular campus activities, such as concerts, lectures, and films.

Program Board is made up of seven officers: President, Administrative Secretary, Chairman of Public Relations, and four committee chairmen. The committees are: Concerts and Lectures, Special Events, Afternoon Activities, and Films.

School insurance available

Do you know if you have insurance coverage for accidents and illnesses? Do you know that if you are over 18 and a student, you may not be covered by your parents' policy?

If you need good insurance at a reasonable rate, consider the 95 hour comprehensive policy available in the Health Service.

AMT for $45. You will be covered for 12 months for 24 hours per day including next summer, during trips and other vacations.

The insurance provides for coverage of up to $10 per day for hospital room as well as other excellent benefits. Don't wait until you're in the emergency room with a broken ankle or appendicitis attack to discover that you don't have insurance. Do it now!

Rates for the insurance vary with the age of the applicant, and coverage is available to the age of 64.

Make your check payable to Harper College and return it to the Health Service, ASB. All claims are also processed in this office.

Cross-country rebuilds

by Joe Kuch

With only one letterman returning from last year's NCC conference champion, the Harp cross-country team faces a rebuilding season. But if there was a perfect returnee to rebuild with, Jeff Brydges would be the one. Jeff was the 1977 team's MVP and qualified for the nationals, which were held in Tucson, Arizona where placed 46 out of 308 top runners. With a year of college running under his belt, Coach Nolan is hopeful Jeff can improve on his national placing. The team as a whole also captured the Raider Invitational crown and placed third in the Region 6 state meet. Others on the team are Jim Lancaster, Jon Langlois, Mark White, and Tom Houtman.

Both men and women are encouraged to come out for the team. Last year, Sandy Young, Harp's Women Athlete of the Year, placed 46 out of over 100 runners in the Women's national meet, also held in Tucson. She also took second in the women two and a half mile Region 6 meet. Sandy was the first woman ever to run for Harp.

The men's team competes in six invitationals, including the DePage Invitational, which features some of the top Junior college teams in Illinois. They also face some of the top four year schools in the North Central Invitational. All races are five miles. There are no cuts in trying out for team.

Practice starts at 5:30 p.m. and goes until 8:30. The team meets at 8:30, U about 12.

ALL INTERESTED IN GOING OUT FOR THE TEAM: there will be a meeting tomorrow at 5:30 p.m. in bldg. U. If you cannot attend you should contact Coach Nolan in bldg. D, 301A, or call ext. 411 and leave your name at the desk. Coach Nolan is still very optimistic about this year's squad and feels they should again be one of the top teams in conference.

This woman needs you!

Mrs. Sandra Ross pictured right, is Harp's new women's volleyball coach. She is looking for girls willing to work and enthusiastic on team spirit. Mrs. Ross is very enthusiastic about building a winner for Harp. Practice starts today at 8:30 p.m. at St. Victor's. The team's first match is vs. Kishwaukee, Sept. 12. All home matches start at 5 p.m. and are held at St. Victor's. The team has five home matches and ten away. (Photo by Patty Duncan)

Any Jack Nicklaus, Tom Watson's predecessors thereof, should contact Coach Beckhold at Ext. 400 and leave your name at the athletic office. The team has eight conference meets, and is entered in five tournaments with our regional. So get into the swing of things, the team needs as many people as possible.

Tax hike debated

John Walker, member of National Taxpayers United, and Harper President James McGrath debated Harper's proposal to hike last week at the Palatine Public Library (above). The moderator is Gail Watson. The debate, sponsored by the Palatine League of Women Voters, featured Walker telling area residents that Harper's expenses are out of hand and should be controlled. McGrath (right) countered that the college will be $10 million in debt by 1982 if the referendum fails. The vote is on Sept. 19.

Activities Director Frank Borelli resigns

by Randy Fries

Mr. Frank Borelli, Director of Student Activities, has announced his resignation from Harper College, subject to approval from the Board of Trustees. Borelli has been named Dean of Student Affairs at Governors State University located in Park Forest South.

As Director of Student Activities, Borelli was involved in many facets of student life. His duties included the budgeting and expenditure of all student activity fees in conjunction with the student government and the Board of Trustees, supervising student publications, including the Hamburger, advising of the various student clubs and organizations, and coordinating the Harper Studio Theatre production, among others.

Borelli has been with Harper for the past 19 years and has participated in its growth. Through his efforts, Harper's Student Activities department has become known both state and nation wide.

According to Mr. Jeanne Pankania, Student Activities Advisor, Borelli is a "recognized top-notch professional" among administrators. He currently serves as the 2-year college coordinator for the Association of Colleges Unions International (ACU) of which Harper is a member. Borelli is known at Harper, continued Pankania, as a "strong advocate of student rigors."

Currently completing his doctorate in Adult Continuing Education, Borelli faces new responsibilities at Governors State. A Dean of Student Affairs, Borelli will be the chief student personnel officer, reporting directly to the President of the university. Governors State University is an upper-division institution, offering courses at the junior, senior and graduate levels. Like Harper, Governors State is a computer school, with no on-campus housing. A successor to Borelli is yet to be named.

CPR classes offered

Health Service is offering free Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR) classes every Wednesday from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. beginning Wednesday and will last through November.

Students or faculty must attend three consecutive classes in order to qualify as a certified rescuer.

Registration will be on a "first come first serve" basis and will be taken in the Health Service building in A202, or by calling ext. 346.

This free course is offered because of gift of manna from the class of 1977.

Student Senate elections are coming up again this fall. A record crowd of voters is expected to appear at the polls. A record crowd for the last few years would be any amount over 300 ballots. The number of ballots cast over the last three years has dropped from 700 in 1973 to 130 in 1977. This drop is appalling and unbelievable.

Apathy has been spreading through the Harper College students like a plague over the past few years. Student Senate was obviously created so that the students could know what's going on in the college and have a say about it. With the number of voters going down each year, it appears that the students are no longer interested in what is happening.

Students often complain because they are uninformed, or not allowed to take part in decisions made by the Board of Trustees or the Administration. Any student who is really interested enough can, attend Board meetings on Thursday nights, join the Student Senate, or at least attend Student Senate meetings.

This year all of the elected positions are open for candidates, except for the Student Trustee, who was elected last spring. There are positions open for one representative of each of the six divisions. So far one petition for the English, Math, and Physical Science division and two petitions for the Business division have been turned in.

Part of this lack of participation is because of the government student involvement in the Sept. 19 referendum. For this reason Student Activities is considering delaying the deadline for the petitions for another two weeks after Sept. 6.

The decisions isn't finalized yet, however. One of the benefits that Student Senators receive is being entrusted with $500 to spend in their division on whatever they feel is necessary. If no one applies for a petition for a division, the division is simply denied the use of these funds. This is just one of the many reasons that someone from each division is recommended to run for the Senate. Once candidates are announced it is very important that the student body votes, for those who want any voice at all in the decisions of the college this is the step to take.

Tax referendum information cited

On Sept. 19 a referendum is scheduled for Harper College District no. 312. This referendum is asking the community for a 7.5 cent increase in the tax rate for the Educational Fund of Harper.

Right now Harper students are paying one-third of the costs of operating the college, the state and federal funding pays more than one-third, which means the community taxpayers pay less than one-third. This new tax rate would mean, for example, that on a house with a market value of $90,000 the increase would be only $10 per year.

Harper has not received an increase in operating funds since the school opened in 1965. With inflation, and the cost of living going up each year, more money is needed to maintain the same programs in the college every year. So far, Harper students have been absorbing the rising costs of operating the college in their tuition, which has gone up several times since the college opened.

The portion of the tuition that the students now pay is almost at the maximum allowed by law. Raising the students tuition will not solve the money problems. Harper's tuition is already one of the three highest of all the community colleges in the state. Since state and federal funding is at the maximum level too, the only solution left is more contributions from the community.

If the referendum doesn't pass, Harper may suffer serious cuts in faculty, staff and programs. Class sizes will be larger and less classes will be offered all together. By keeping the voters informed on this situation hopefully the right decision will be made on Sept. 19.

THE HARBINGER Letters to Editor

More facts on E.R.A.

Dear Editor,

Being a proponent of the equal rights amendment I was pleased to read the editorial in favor of the amendment, however, I feel I should point out the errors made in the editorial.

First of all the E.R.A. is not "naturally concerned with equal respect for women as human beings." The amendment does not have any direct reference to women or females in general. The amendment states "Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex."

Obviously women are much more abused than men because of their sex, but men are also abused and the passage of the E.R.A. will abolish this. Men will no longer have to pay higher insurance premiums than women, they will not automatically lose the custody of their children in divorce cases and the payment of alimony will go to them instead of from them.

Reverse discrimination, such as occurred recently in the locker room, these three will be the people that are harmed. Secondly, the E.R.A. does not state anything about women and their choice of jobs. The amendment states what I have already written and, "The Congress shall have the power to enforce by appropriate legislation the provisions of this article. This amendment shall take the effect two years after the date of ratification."

Thirdly, Karen McCross is the former president of the National Organization for Women. The current president is Eleanor Clift. Finally, with regards to the pros and cons, the propagandists against the amendment have done nothing but lie to the public and try to make them believe such nonsense as women will lose "their rights" to be supported by their husbands if the title I suggest the removal of the faculty spaces or the termination of the parking lot. I strongly support the removal of the faculty spaces since we would probably be suited for the fee somewhere else. I would like to hear opposing views since I'm sure there has been brought up before, if there are none, I'd like to know how to bring this into effect.

Sincerely,
Michael W. Radtke

Who should park where?

Being from out of state I do not really know how Illinois colleges operate, but maybe I can "see" what is taken for granted here. I can't believe how very faculty are given preferential parking spaces, while students who park in these spaces are given a ticket.

I'm sure faculty and staff do not pay $2.50 parking fee and if students have to, they should be able to park in any space except those reserved for the handicapped as this is an unnecessary inconvenience for them.

While attending college in California students and faculty were both given the same lot. Faculty were both were treated equally to bring more student/faculty relationships together. Instead of breaking them into separate groups or special parking, no special handicaps, etc. This resulted in very well rounded academic instruction.

Community concern appreciated

Dear Editor,

We, Pat and Bill Faust, would like to thank the entire Harper community's students staff, administrators, board members and faculty, for their expressed concern, insights and sympathy over the loss of our son, David. It is the knowledge of this caring and concern from the human community that helped us retain some degree of sanity and stability.

Thank you,
Bill and Pat Faust

Kingston Trio appears

The Kingston Trio, an entertainment group of the 50's and 60's, is again entertaining audiences with old Trio favorites and a host of new ballads.

The Trio, consisting of Bob Shane, Roger Gambrell and George Givens, will appear at Harper in Hall A, Sept. 27 at 8 p.m. Bill likes the "Tum Dooley," "Early Morning Rain" and "The Mustang Special." Even the group's seven old albums will provide reminders of the Trio's special (aluminum) sound.

Tickets are $2 for Harper students with an advance rate and $3 for general public admission. For tickets or additional information people may call 302-300-1512.

The Harbinger wishes Mr. Borelli the best of luck in his new job.

Who the heck is Pete Mariahazy?

by Joan Polunski

A very surprising fact on this campus is that too little of the student body knows that Pete Mariahazy is the Student Trustee on the Board of Trustees. As even more surprising fact is that many students don't even know what a student trustee is or does.

Too few students know of this person who could be a great asset to them.

The job entails being on the Board of Trustees to represent the students' said Pete. "And with that comes other jobs such as Task Force for the referendum committee." He continued, "Different things you get thrown into come along with the job."

Pete is like a regular board member but has an advisory vote. He is admitted to all sessions of the board. He is allowed to make and second motions. He receives all the materials that elected board members do. However, he is not considered in determining a quorum for action of the board.

Pete's power on the board lies in his ability to talk. "If anything comes to my mind right away I can just shoot it right out and I won't get held down for it," he said. "Someone in the audience has to be recognized first." There is a spot on the agenda specifically set aside for any citizen participation.

A student trustee has an automatic option of either being on Student Senate, if he or she wants to," Pete continued, "and if he or she is on Student Senate, then they can have a counted vote. This year I choose to because that also adds to my ability to represent the students on the board."

In the future Pete is hoping to go into politics. "I enjoy politics and I enjoy helping and working for people. This is a very good primer for what I plan to do which is to go into politics," he said. His job as a Student Trustee will also help him get into law because this way he is learning how to be factual and what to do with the facts he receives.

Last year Pete was a volunteer peer counselor. "That helped me a lot because it helped me to develop my listening and speaking skills," he commented.

Besides being a peer counselor, Student Trustee and full-time student, Pete works at Red Lobster and helps teach fencing at Elk Grove Park District.

As a board member, Pete stresses the importance of students coming to him with their problems. He will usually know who to talk to in order to solve them. Students are welcome to stop by his office in A332 or call him at ext. 343. His help is there for the asking.

September Pete Mariahazy, Student Trustee is willing to use his position on the Board of Trustees to help the student body.

Senate, council deal in affairs

There are two organizations, besides the Program Board, that deal directly with all student affairs and activities. They are the Student Senate and Clubs Organization Council, C.O.C.

The Student Senate, established in 1967 to protect the rights of students, budget the Student Activity Fund and recommend the new clubs and organizations.

After being given an estimate of the Student Activity Fund, the Senate divides it among thirty line items. Among these are the clubs and organizations and Special Services, like the Local and Health Services, which are free to all students. They also select money for class gifts. Past gifts have been a Hahn Grand Piano, the trophy case in the Student Lounge, and the new equipment for Building "M". They also provide an extra $200 for academic division projects. If students have an idea for a project, they should consult their representative.

The Senate is composed of one representative from each academic division, such as Fine Arts and Mathematics, who is voted for by the Student body; three C.O.C. members; a peer counselor and a Student Trustee. The board meetings are open to the public, and are held on the Student Activities Center.

Elections for the representatives are done soon and students are urged to participate and vote.

Clubs and Organizations Council is a group of representatives from each club and organization that meets monthly to discuss operating aspects and funding for these events which are funded by the Student Activities Fund. The Council allocates the money and discuss and approve special programs.

Generally Speaking...

by Cindy Cervello

The first few weeks of this semester have really flown by the last of us. For some it has really dragged.

The pressures are mounting with every new day as teachers pile on the homework and urge students to spend their summer earnings on backpacks loaded full of books. Languid books around to surely one way to keep those flabby, never used muscles fit. By the end of this semester, friends and relatives will begin to stare at your bulging biceps and rippling veins, and that goes for the guys too!

Whether it's your first semester or tenth semester here at Harper, you know that it's just the books that make the difference between an A and B, it's your study habits. Some people still have not discovered the perfect place to study here on campus.

Maybe you're one of those people who always sits out by the water in back of A buildings. Well then you know that it's virtually impossible to study while outdoors if students with by and stare to see if they know you. People are not the real culprit when studying out in back. It's the water, as it gully runs over the little rocks behind. Some people find the view as breathtaking that they can't concentrate for any length of time in schoolwork. Besides the view and the distraction of passerby, you can only take so much of affluence on rocks and doing things while reading five chapters for the next class.

If you have a logical mind, your first choice is the library. There you can study in a quiet, calm, more relaxed atmosphere. No one ever talks in the library, and there are plenty of books to use for reference and even magazines if you want to take a break. The lighting is just great and the help there is pleasant, so why not go. Because 90 percent of the time that you are there you're trying to use it if you can recognize the feel under the carpet across from you. It's a long battle.

You could become one of the thousands that flock on the ledges between buildings. It's a real nice place to study because of the constant breeze and natural sunlight. Nobody ever bothers you there. Right? Wrong! Everyone, from old ladies who have nothing better to do than discuss their wonderful workweek to that so-and-so you met in Human Anatomy Class that wants to get your spine in an collar's collar. Maybe you're beginning to realize that it is better to study in your hall, but do it well. One of the most interesting places to do so is under the stairwells.

People just don't look there. There are, of course, many students who can't even begin to study and the driving pulse of Led Zeppelin or the disco beat of John Travolta is racketing through their earbuds. Well, the cafeteria is just the place for you. Besides the music, the tables are large enough to spread out your books, rulers, calculator or whatever else you may carry around all day. It's just the perfect place. As Jackson Browne sweetly strums his guitar in your ear, you suddenly realize you need something. Look standing in the cafeteria line, smile from the crush. Fresh fruit helps to energize your senses and your mouth begins to water at the sight of the hamburger looking good to eat. Then you go to the table over yonder.

The last swallow of the hamburger is sliding slowly down the throat and you open your text to learn the vocabulary knowledge. Oddly enough, you find yourself back to back to make another purchase, this time a little dessert. What a life!

Perhaps you have already noticed the beautiful green lawn that surrounds Harper College. The grass makes a perfect place to write that composition you've been meaning to do. Never are the lawns crowded because of the infinite of little spots in which you can sit, so be. The mistake many are making is letting their heads touch the ground. On the average, it takes less than ten minutes to fall asleep on the "pillowy, green carpets."

I guess we've just about covered anywhere that one could ever want to study, or have any. Well, don't feel guilty if you don't finish your homework, if not your fault, there's no place to study.

Mezzo soprano sings

The Student Activities department will present Alice Datcher, mezzo soprano, in the first concert of the fall semester afternoon music concert series on Sept. 15. The concert is at 7:30 p.m. in 1515. Admission is free. The program will consist of works by Lully, Cécile, Hummel, Purcell, Virgil Thompson, Meyerbeer and de Falla.

The Michigan mezzo has been heard in opera, oratorio, recital and TV appearances from Seattle to Milan where an American Opera Auditions Winner she created a first by singing the role of Desdemona in "Otello" and accompanying the opera singer's arpeggio on the violin. As a college sophomore she made her debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Rach. Major Violin Concerto.

Miss Datcher has since returned appearances with the Symphony Orchestras of Seattle and Detroit and with the Handel and Haydn Society as well as appearances at the Metropolitan Museum of New York City. Among her thirty performances with Seattle Opera were portrayals of Isabella ("The Boatswain's Daughter") and Aurora ("The Two Gentlemen of Verona"). At the Cincinnati Summer Opera she sang "The Pearl Fishery."

The United Nations Baroque Institute sponsored her in recital at Hunter College, and she was heard in a concert at the National Symphony Orchestra. The desire to reach new audiences has led Miss Datcher into co-founding an opera dance theater in General. Rogers and managing the fall singers and dancers of the Wall Trap Company in 1977. Currently she is Associate Professor of Voice at the Chicago Musical College of Roosevelt University.

Miss Datcher will be accompanied by Lulama Lalar of the Chicago Musical College Piano faculty. Ms. Lalar began her musical studies in her native

Yugoslavia. She continued her studies at Chicago Musical College, upon her arrival in the United States, with Dr. Rudolph Gans and Mollie Margulies and received her Master of Music degree with honors. She is active as a recitalist, lecturer, accompanist and chamber music performer. Her students have won many local and national competitions.

Other concerts in the Fall 1978 Afternoon Music Concert Series include Workshop and Arrangement, piano duets, on Oct. 16 and John and Anna McGroun, clarinet and piano, on Nov. 2.

Alice Datcher, mezzo soprano, will present the college's first concert Thursday.

Tutors help

Harper's Tutoring Center is looking for peer tutors to help other students in a variety of subjects. Tutors earn $1 an hour, and have flexible hours. They are expected to work at least four hours a week. Students interested in working as peer tutors must fill out an application in the Tutoring Center located in F210.

To qualify as a peer tutor, a student must have earned a grade of A in the course or courses for which he will tutor. Additionally, the student must receive a recommendation from the course instructor. After a student's application has been approved, he will attend a brief peer tutor training session.

Former peer tutors have said they found the work both enjoyable and rewarding. By tutoring a subject, a peer tutor may increase his own knowledge of the field while learning to explain the subject clearly to others. Peer tutors may also gain experience in listening, talking and working with a variety of people.

More information is available at the Tutoring Center from Mrs. O'Donnell, coordinator of tutoring. She can be reached at ext. 330 or 381.

Harper Hawks win 14-7

QB Schmidt scores both TD's

by Joe Kunk

The Harper football team started the season by winning its first game, defeating University of Duquesne Junior Varsity 14-7.

Leading the way was quarterback Neil Schmidt, who scored both Hawk touchdowns with 10 and 1-yard runs. Schmidt led all runners with 86 yards; he was followed by Jim Vuerrelle who ran for 58. In the passing department Schmidt was 4 for 7, totaling 39 yards.

Coach Flisak stated even after the win, "We played a fine first half and a poor second half—we have to learn to play 48 minutes of football." The three punters and parallel kicking men scoring chances, but attributed that to being part of the first game.

He was also pleased with the other members of the backfield. Devin Henley and Dave Bubbenheimer. On defense, he praised defensive tackle Jay Lamahan and defensive back Mike Walden on their performances.

Coach Flisak went on to commend both offensive and defensive linemen and set and the coaching staff is still trying different people at different positions.

Coach Flisak said for the upcoming games vs. Triton and Rock Valley they would try to utilize their passing game more and take advantage of what the teams give them.

The next game for the Hawks is at home vs. Rock Valley Friday. It is a conference game and starts at 1:30 p.m.

The Harper football team hopes to run up the score vs. conference foes Triton and Rock Valley. The Hawks defeated U. of Duquesne JV 14-7 and need fan support to continue its winning ways.

Attention Harper women: start your team career right now under the fine coaching of Martha Lynn Ball. The team's first meet is Sept. 11 vs. Washburn and its first home meet is Sept. 12 vs. Joliet.

McGrath talks about tax hike, its effects

by Debbie Tynchke

On Tuesday Harper College will hold a referendum. The following is an interview with Mr. James McGrath, president of the college, explaining what the referendum is all about and what effect it will have on the students of Harper.

BARBERING: What is the college asking for in the referendum on Tuesday?

McGRATH: "We are asking for a 7.5 increase in our educational tax base. The tax base has been constant since 1969 at 11 cents."

Q: How much of an increase does this mean to the taxpayers on their property tax?

A: "On the property tax it would mean an increase of about $9 a year on a house with a market value of $60,000. I've been saying all along that there is no house in the area with a market value of $60,000 so we would have to add $10 for each $10,000 approximately. So if we're talking about an $80,000 house, which is about the range of houses in our area, we're talking about $12 a year or $1 a month."

Q: What would happen if the referendum fails?

A: "First of all the referendum is not going to fail because of all the people working to get out the vote. If it were to fail what I'd have to do is convene a college wide committee. They would be talking to the committee we convened for the referendum itself."

Q: What would be the purpose of this committee?

A: "They would look at alternative courses of action and if (overseer there would be a number of things we'd have to discuss such as short-term and long-range problems."

Q: If the referendum fails, what kind of general cuts would be made in programs and classes for the students?

A: "Believe that, the first thing that would happen is we would look and see if we wanted to go again for another referendum and what would be the appropriate time."

Q: Would that be within the next six months?

A: "I don't know. A lot would depend on where our strengths and weaknesses were in terms of the referendum. That would be the first course of action."

"But certainly if (the referendum) did fail we would have to change the program here because that's what Harper is, an educational program; a humanistic program; and an occupational program for the Northwest suburb. And that would have to change."

"There was a lot of talk last year. John Burkholz, my predecessor, cut the budget by $1 million - $900,000 to $1 million. By the time he cut that, which is a budget cut, the cash cut came out to $400,000. Well, I would have to continue in that vein cutting things I call OTFR. Other Than Personal Service. That would be the first thing I would cut. They are educational supplies, books for the departments, and supplies in the sciences and the Food Service area - all those would have to be cut. The things other than personal service."

"Next of course would be to continue the attrition of administration and faculty and support services; people that left would not be replaced. That would be an ongoing measure."

OFFICIAL BALLOT PROPOSITION TO INCREASE EDUCATIONAL TAX RATE

INSTRUCTIONS TO VOTERS: Mark a check (✓) in the space opposite the word indicating "Yes" or "No."

Will the institution submit to an independent appraisal of University of Illinois Chapter 102, University of Illinois, Lakeview University, State of Illinois, be increased and established at 100 per cent on the full fair value of taxable property as reported to the Department of Local Government Affairs (Section 11) per cent, the total income tax applicable in the next biennium be established at 100 per cent?	YES

Tomorrow taxpayers will be asked to support Harper College and vote for a 7.5 cents per $100 equalized assessed value increase in Harper's Educational Fund. The above is a sample of what the referendum ballot looks like.

"The next would be to look at the academic program with the academic community and make some determinations (on) where could we increase class size? That as you know as well as I do - you because you're a student and I'm a former student and teacher - that it's much more difficult to get a decent course in a class of 30 than a class of 20. In one way one of the things I like about a community college is that the teachers and instructors in a classroom have a personal interest in their students. I think that we would lose some of that because we would be increasing class size wherever we could."

Q: How would it affect the night classes?

A: "It would have to be across the board. The other thing is you would have to cancel courses. Right now the policy of the college is to cancel courses that have enrollments of less than 10. We'd probably have to move that up and cancel courses with enrollments closer to 10 and if people would be notified that their course no longer exists because we can't afford to offer it."

"What this amounts to is that you are cutting the number of classes, and that probably would result in fewer classes being offered and fewer instructional hours. So the first effect of the referendum (on night classes) would be on part-time faculty and what we call an overriden on full-time faculty."

"The next thing, quite honestly, we would have to look at our incoming freshmen classes and where could we cut back in terms of offering instructional hours. So the first effect of the referendum (on night classes) would be on part-time faculty and what we call an overriden on full-time faculty."

"In terms of support services such as in the library, on counseling, and building and grounds, cuts would be made across the board. I think that students would be the effects of this very shortly, probably in the spring semester. We're committed to the fall semester right now so we can't make any cuts in terms of those classes, but we would have to begin doing the kinds of things I talked about for the Spring 1979 semester."

Q: Would the tuition be increased if the referendum doesn't pass?

A: "Well we're in a bind there. We're the highest, well, I guess the second highest in the state. I think Harper's Community College is now at $20 per credit hour. Student tuition cannot be in excess of one-third of the amount of money we get from property taxes, and we're pretty much at peak right now. So if we did increase tuition my belief at this point is it would be a minimal increase. But what's minimal? I would try, and I think everyone would be sensitive to it, raising tuition and try to hold the line if the referendum passes because of the fact that if we raised tuition we would lose students. We're sensitive to that and to the needs of the students."

Q: What if the referendum passes? What will happen?

A: "If the referendum passes let me change that - after the referendum passes, Pete Matichuk (student trustee) asked me the same question, are we going to see a tremendous change? The answer is no. We're still going to have to hold the line in terms of being very cost conscious around here. The only thing if we do pass the referendum, hopefully we will not see tuition; we will not have to limit the number of courses offered. These kind of things, but we're still going to have to look at all of the things we're doing and try to cut back. But I don't think the cuts that we make at this point will be visible to students. And I don't think that passing it is going to lower tuition or to use as old expression, 'put us in closer.' It's not. The referendum is just going to help us get by over the next four or five years."

Students voice mixed opinions about increase

by Joan Peloton

and Joe Kueck

When students were asked about what they thought of Harper's referendum there was a mixed reaction. From a student's point of view, many wanted it to pass. But from a home owner's perspective, they had second thoughts. Some students didn't even know the referendum existed.

From a random sampling of students' viewpoints, one freshman, Duane Hansen said, "I'm getting my parents to vote for it." Another freshman, Barb Brune said "I think it would be kind of nice if it would pass. It would keep the school at its high standards." Still another freshman added, "I don't know anything about it."

"We've got to keep up the quality of Harper," sophomore Bob Mcarty.

"It's a good junior college," freshman Ray Radzinski said, "and I want to see it stay that way. I feel it's about one of the best junior colleges."

"If we don't keep up the college, it will deteriorate," added freshman Jay Ford.

Sophomore Ann Vincini says "so to me, I don't care if we're over the program."

Sophomore Wanda Wassowski said that she was for the referendum and that the school needs its program.

Freshman Dennis Norriss said, "For the students, we should pass the referendum."

"I can't take a stand either way," freshman Mike Heim said "As a student I would be for it. If the school is in debt, it shows in the quality of education."

Freshman John Decher said, "I think they should pass the referendum for two reasons: my mother is a teacher here and I am a student."

Harbinger supports referendum

Tomorrow the community will make a decision that will affect the entire college.

The administration, faculty, staff and students of Harper, along with the community in Harper College District 512 will participate in this decision. The decision will be to vote for or against the Harper referendum.

The college is requesting a 7.5 cents tax increase in the Educational Fund. Because the college has not received a tax increase since 1963, the student tuition rate has been increased several times to keep up with inflation. Harper's administration realizes that a tuition increase alone will not cover the cost of operating the college. Another source of income is needed. Hopefully the taxpayers will support the college.

To understand what effect this tax increase will have on homeowners, it can be explained as being a $10 increase per year on a house with a market value of $60,000.

Some people think tuition should be raised to alleviate part of the college's financial problem, but that will not solve it. Right now Harper students pay approximately one-third of the operating cost which means that the community is paying less than one-third to the college.

If the community does not want to give their money to "teen-agers" or "young people" they should note that the average age of a Harper student is 29. The majority of students are part-time.

If the question, "Is Harper College worth the money we are asked to spend on it?" arises, the answer is yes. Harper is open to the community over 35 hours a week. The institution also provides over 65 technical and vocational programs for students and the community. Harper has classes during the regular school year, summer, and winter break, so in effect is open all year round.

Harper provides about 30,000 students an education that is as good as or better than a four year school. Students who graduate from Harper are said to have higher grade point averages when entering four-year schools, than students who attend that institution for all four years. And Harper offers this education at a fraction of the cost of a four-year school.

If the referendum passes, it won't necessarily give us more, just maintain what we do have. The college needs the support of the community to keep going at the level it now is.

If the referendum doesn't pass, major cutbacks will have to be made. Classes may be larger and less convenient. There might be fewer class sessions offered for each class. Some subjects might have to be cut entirely from the program. Tuition may go up again for the second time in two years; cuts may have to be made in faculty, staff and administration; night classes may be altered and cut back accordingly.

After reviewing the issues we feel the college needs the tax increase and urge the community staff, faculty, and especially the students of Harper College to vote YES, when they walk in the voting booth tomorrow.

Are you in favor of Harper's referendum?

John Zavers: If it's necessary, yes.

Mike Ballas: Yes, because it's not fair to keep using the same tax structure for the last ten years without raising it.

Generally Speaking..

by Cindy Carver

With all this beautiful weather we've been experiencing lately, people tend to forget that winter will eventually be upon us once more. That brings to mind some of the disasters of last year's blizzard. Everyone was talking about it as they stared through their windows at the people outside, who were shoveling snow off their windshields. But unfortunately, many of us literally got "left out in the cold." I have to admit right now that I was one of those people, but I saw many more in the same predicament as me. We were innocent victims of sloppy parking: some people just chose to park right behind somebody else, leaving them no exit whatsoever.

Try to imagine this. The snow is blowing, there are drifts two to three feet in height, the air freezes before it can enter your nostrils, visibility is zero. You finally finished your last class and have talked yourself into making the great pilgrimage to the parking lot below. Piling on layers of clothing, you nervously search the refrigerator awaiting you at home. First you button up the sweater, then come the wool scarves, top it off with a pair of mittens, then you throw on the hood for extra protection. It's hard going down the stairs because the hood keeps flopping in your face. All the way to the door, you're retarded by the everpresent snarl of ancient models that is creeping into your lungs from that second hand coat you're wearing.

As you throw open the door to the world outside, students and teachers alike, flock to safety inside empty classrooms to avoid the jets of air that numb the skin on contact. The wintry air grabs the door and sends it flying out of your hands and you are victoriously pulled to the average reality. Just like a nightmare you might have, you are jolted back and forth during your journey to the car. After your first fall, you realize that maybe you should have bought those rubber-soled boots even if they weren't on sale anymore. You have no grip against the fluffy white stuff. Nature is just merciless!

After walking for 30 seconds out in the cold, your nose begins to feel rather odd; you need a kleenex. You feel yourself fumbling through your pockets with those big, furry mittens on, but the clumsy hands can't make out the objects within. As much as you don't want to, you remove one glove to make the search a success. A sudden gust of air grabs your glove and you watch it go flying across the drifts, heading north. Now you're really hunting because there wasn't any kleenex in your pocket anyway, just some rolled up gum wrappers.

Now you see your car, it's just beautiful, what a sight! The radio doesn't work, but so what. The signals don't function, but who cares then? You're just glad to get the heck out of here. No, wait, you're stuck! You could just scream, but no one would ever hear you in this vast wasteland of parking lot.

Much to your disgust, there is a Honda Civic parked on one end of your heater, and a chartroux volkswagen on the other. Now you notice that not only are you cold, but that hunger is beginning to get vicious as it gnaws at the inner walls of your stomach. Looking around, you see many other cars parked just like the Honda in Everyone is stuck. You try to take it as a consolation, but your sense of humor just ran out. Depending on what type of person you are, you will either 1) cry, 2) spit, 3) beat on the volkswagen, 4) beat on the Honda, or 5) go find someone to help you out of this unfortunate situation.

It's not really that bad. After all, what have you lost? Maybe they'll fire you at the Plaza Harper Palace when you don't show up for work. Maybe the ski trip will go on without you, but there's one thing to remember after all is over, don't take it personally. I'm sure whoever parked behind you didn't mean to hurt your feelings. One thing is for sure, life can be very difficult if someone "parks you in" and leaves you "out in the cold."

THE HARBINGER

College dropout to lecture

Architect, engineer, poet, inventor, scientist, philosopher, professor and college dropout H. Buckminster Fuller, will be Harper College's first guest lecturer of the fall semester. The 63-year-old Fuller will speak in the lounge of the college's Palatine campus, Algonquin and Toule Roads, Monday, Sept. 15 at 4 p.m.

Best known as the inventor of the geodesic dome and architect of the U.S. Pavilion at the 1967 World's Fair, Fuller is the author of 15 books, recipient of 39 honorary doctorates and 31 international awards.

Fuller describes himself as an average man who in 1927 made a bargain with himself to discover the principles operative in the universe and to turn them over to his fellow men. These principles are described in several of Fuller's books. "Intuition" expresses one of Fuller's most fundamental ideas - that humanity is suffering from a kind of cosmic man-asleepness, an inability to comprehend universal principles due to concentration on special parts.

A collection of Fuller's thoughts on the subject of spaceship Earth can be found in "Earth, Inc." "The only realism is cosmic. Cosmic includes all - macro - micro - you and I," said the philosopher, who for the last 35 years has spent nine-tenths of his time away from his official home.

"Symptoms," a compendium of Fuller's most important philosophies explores the geometry of thinking.

Public admission for Fuller's lecture is $2. Harper students with an activity card are admitted free. For additional information, students call 37-3500, extension 342.

Kingston Trio sings Friday

by Randy Fritz

The Kingston Trio, a popular folk group of the 1950s and 60s is coming to the Harper College Center Lounge, Wed. A Friday night at 4 The trio, consisting of Bob Shane, Roger Gambell and George Grizzard will be performing both their old favorites and their latest hits.

Shane, Nick Reynolds and Dave Grizzard formed the original Kingston Trio in 1957. The group selected the name "Kingston" because their music had a calypso sound to it and "Kingston" evoked to evoke a Jamaican feeling.

Success first struck for the trio in 1958 when "Tom Dooley" hit the top of the record charts. Subsequent recordings include "Where Have All the Flowers Gone?", "Scotch and Soda," and "The MCA."

The group also earned Life Magazine's "Best Group of the Year" award.

In 1961 Grizzard left the group and was replaced by singer/songwriter John Stewart. By 1967 the group decided to part company. It was not until 1973, though the work of Shane, that there was another Kingston Trio.

Grave perhaps best sums up the feelings of the group members. "My personal ambitions are to preserve the happiness and success that was and is the Kingston Trio, and to take it from where it is now to wherever it may go, for as long as we may continue to have fun doing it."

Tickets are $2 for Harper students with an activity card and $3 for the general public. Tickets and information are available in the Student Activities Office, A236, ext. 242.

Clubs work

by Don Walker

S.E.A.R.C.H. the Solar Energy and Alternative Resource Club at Harper, is looking for students interested in capturing the power of the sun and putting it to work for themselves.

A meeting for those who are interested will be held in October (Date will be announced in a later issue of The Harbinger).

During the meeting a President, Vice President, Secretary and Treasurer will be elected from those present.

Amateur dentists practice on teeth

by Sue Conroy

The Dental Hygiene Program is offering dental checkups for $1. Why the low fee? What's the catch?

There's no catch.

This is all part of the training that the dental hygienists go through to earn their degrees at Harper.

Anyone who goes into bldg. D near the Dental Hygiene Lab, on Monday, Wednesday or Friday will probably see what looks like a simulated dentists office.

During the first semester of the Dental Hygiene Program, the students go through what is called pre-clinic, where they learn about everything they will have to know to work later on patients. The second semester is when the action really begins. Everyone has to work on patients, and everyone starts at the same time. "Let's just say you have to know how to do it," said Janet McFale, dentistry student.

The cost of $1 is a real bargain compared to the $25 to $30 charged to have dental work done at a regular dental office.

The treatment takes approximately four hours. "It's a long time," said Mary Lou Weirich, "but it's worth it."

The first thing the students do is take a medical history of the patient's allergies, reactions, etc. Then blood pressure is taken.

"If the patient has high blood pressure we are not allowed to work on him," said Janet McFale. If the blood pressure is all right, the patient is seated in a dentists chair. "It looked exactly like a dentists office," said Ms. Weirich.

An oral inspection is taken of the mouth, checking the tongue, gums and teeth. Tooth stains or cavities are charted on a patient diagram.

After the inspection, an instructor checks out the work. If everything is done correctly, the student dentist proceeds to the method of scaling the teeth for calculus and plaque. Then, they are again checked out by the instructor.

"The atmosphere is very sterile. We have to have very sterile things. Everyone is checked for their shoes, hair and overall appearance. If someone touches her face, she has to wash her hands," said Ms. McFale.

The patient's teeth are then polished. This procedure is checked out by a method called disclosing. A red substance is put on the patient's teeth, if the dentist missed a surface of any tooth it would be very visible.

A fluoride treatment is then given to prevent tooth decay; and then X-rays of the teeth are taken to detect cavities.

"We aren't allowed to give a diagnosis," said Ms. McFale, "but we can at the patient's request, send the X-rays to the patient's dentist's office for his observation."

Everyone is graded on how well they perform on their patients. At the end of the second year in the program the students must obtain a certain number of patient points to pass the course.

"You just wouldn't believe how clean and sterile everything is, you wash your hands at least 1,000 times," said Ms. McFale.

Ms. McFale worked on Ms. Weirich, and although they are friends, Ms. Weirich said she would come back to any of the students when she needs another appointment; she trusts any of them.

"I'd go again soon but they have a waiting list of people who want to be worked on," said Ms. Weirich. "It was done so professionally and the instructor checked everything the students did."

Help available to students

For students who are in need of financial aid, the Financial Aid Office, A34, is currently accepting applications for four scholarships which are now available to students.

The Rotary Club of Elm Grove Village will award two scholarships for the fall 1978 semester at Harper. The $200 scholarships are to be used for books and tuition, and applicants must be full time students and residents of Elm Grove Village. Scholarships will be awarded based on financial need and high school class standing.

Harper's Faculty Senate is now offering two $75 scholarships for the current fall semester to cover books, supplies and/or uniforms. Criteria for selection will be a B (3.0) average, 15 accumulated credit hours, service to the school and financial need. Deadline for applications is Sept. 15.

A $200 ($100 per semester) scholarship is being offered by the Arlington Heights Jaycees for the 1978-1979 school year. Students must be a returning student - 25 years of age or older, have a D average or better, have financial need, and be a resident of the Village of Arlington Heights. Deadline for applications is Sept. 20.

The Steve Glantz Memorial Scholarship Fund is offering a $100 scholarship to defray the cost of tuition and for other expenses for the fall '78 semester.

The criteria for selection is financial need.

Deadline for submitting applications is Oct. 1.

Additional information on the scholarships is available from the Financial Aid Office, A34, or 307-200, ext. 548.

Lampoon's new movie offers much insanity

by Fred Cam

It's kind of rare to find a good comedy these days, with all the garbage Hollywood is putting on the screen. I mean can you remember the last good comedy you saw?

The work of two men that will probably come to mind, is that of Woody Allen and Mel Brooks. But recently Allen has been concentrating his efforts on dramatic pictures and Brooks hasn't made a consistently funny picture since "Blazing Saddles," which is over five years old! Those two artists have been the masters of American comedy in this decade of the 1970s, and let's face it, they are through! New blood is desperately needed in this field.

Well the "new blood" has arrived, and in spectacular fashion. That is in the form of "National Lampoon's Animal House," an underecognized funny depiction of a college fraternity house in the early 1970s. There are many aspects of "Animal House" that make it a superior film, such as having its own significance, but probably the most important is its excellent screenplay. Written in conjunction by Lampooners Harold Ramis, Doug Kenney and Chris Miller, it contains a fresh spontaneity lacking in many of today's pictures.

The film also sports a very fine cast, headed by John Belushi of "Saturday Night Live" fame. Belushi plays a character named "Bluto," who is the ultimate screwup. Bluto's favorite hobbies are pecking at society house windows and crashing beer cans on his forehead. Belushi, a true comic genius, gets his role off like a charm. Whether he be stuffing a cheeseburger down his throat or smashing a guitar into somebody's head, he is always in total control of his character. If any one performer steals this picture, it's Belushi. He's one of the most talented comedians around and will be for some time.

But this is not a one man show and exceptional performances such as the one handed in by Tim Matheson as "Otter" the kid with the Corvette and a unique way of sitting his frat brothers out of or into trouble, are consistent throughout the cast. All this combined with the tight direction of John Landis provides a hilarious two hours of entertainment that anyone who goes to college can relate to.

National Lampoon has long been a winner in the magazine satire field, and now looks as if it will be a significant figure in the film industry as well. If their movie proves anything though, I hope it sets the example to the Hollywood film industry that it is possible to make a good comedy, and that the American public is fed up with these weak excuses for comedies that have turned up in recent years. Maybe there is a trend of original comedies will emerge and end this long drought. If this trend brings forth great pictures with the wit and humor of "Animal House," then it will be a welcome trend indeed.

Europe trip a success

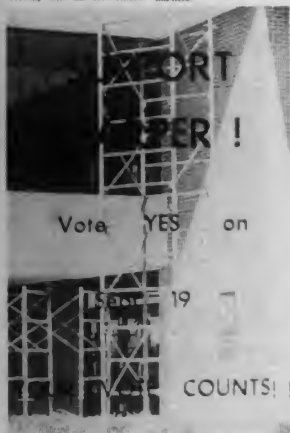

More 50 students and area residents spent a full month in Europe this summer. This study tour, the seventh from Harper in the last three years, took its group to Italy, Switzerland, France, the Netherlands and England.

The theme of the program was comparative customs and cultures. Highlights included visits to the Vatican, Notre Dame, the London Tower and London Theatre; a cooking demonstration at the Curzon Hotel; a visit to the Swiss Alps and a under a tour of a grand Swiss hotel.

The group sampled pastas in Rome, crepes in Paris, butters, curries in London, an Indonesian rijstafel in Amsterdam, English cheeses and ales at their farewell party. They traded postcards and ice cream every where.

Twenty students on the program earned Harper credit. They were required to attend classes and field trips, keep extensive journals, and write research papers. Six Harper faculty accompanied the group: Martha Simonsen, Suzanne Herran, Mally Waiter, Cliff Waser, Bill Nelson and Mary Jo Willis.

This year Harper's international program will include three study tours to Guatemala and El Salvador, Dec. 20-Jan. 1; to London, April 15-22; and to the British Isles, May 15-June 9. Interested students and non-students should see Martha Simonsen in F237B or call ext. 385 for details.

While steel supports are needed to hold up Harper, student supports are also needed to vote for the referendum interview. (photo by Mike Woods)

"...calling on the hotline!"

by Ed Bachmann

They'll talk about any subject under the sun with you Mike says. A hotline service, which never uses last names, offers people to talk to whenever you desire.

We'll talk about anything," the assistant director Mike "no last names please" said.

The "hotly confidential" line has been in gear for seven years. "It's all kept quiet," Mike said. "If we received a call from a young runaway, and then a moment later we got a call from his parents, we wouldn't give out any information to the parents as to his whereabouts, or even say he called."

The hotline number is open 24 hours a day, seven days a week, at 368-0721.

Mike catfished off a variety of subjects the counselors have talked about. "We take action against rape, we discuss peer problems, marital, emotional, alcohol, drug, family, sex and physical abuse problems but we're here to talk about anything the caller wants to."

They aim offer a "housing linkage service."

For people who want a roommate but can't find one, the hotline connects people.

"There is one other place that has a person helped in finding a roommate."

No names are given out, Mike said, but phone numbers will sometimes be provided to aid in the search of a roommate.

"We also provide a moving survival skills booklet," Mike said, "to learn how to cope with moving."

And it's all free.

Something fishy is going on at Harper College

by Sue Conway

The Department of Conservation together with the Cook County Forest Preserves have decided that carp and other scavenger fish are harmful to the area waters and so the fish that have lived in the Harper Lake (inland bays A, D, and E) have been killed.

Officials say the fish do nothing but cause problems. Because of this, the department has released a poison into Harper's lakes called rotenone.

Rotenone, which is a natural substance made of the South American Erythrina plant (a tropical old world shrub or vine) is a fish toxicant that terminates all gill-breathing species.

Department members came to Harper recently with the rotenone poison and fed it into the Harper lakes, as well as 73 other lakes, streams and rivers in the area. The reason for this move is a new fishery that is being started by the Busse Woods Conservation Program.

Fish like Bass, Bluegill, Sunfish and Catfish won't be able to survive and spawn in these waters if the scavenger fish live here," said a department member.

The scavenger fish eat all the bottom of the lake, create pollution by bringing up residue from the floor of the lakes and often eat the eggs of the other fish so that spawning is impossible.

All bodies of water that in any way connect with the Fish Creek Watershed, which flows into the Busse Woods Reservoir, are poisoned to get rid of the "bad" fish. The lakes are supposed to be restocked within the next few weeks with over 40,000 of the "better" breeds of fish such as Fingerling, Bluegill, Bass, Sunfish, and different types of Catfish.

The poison takes a week or two to break down in chemical content and the poison must be gone before the fish are stocked said the Conservation Department.

Harper's lakes, as well as many of the other waters in the area, have the distinct odor of dead fish. The rocks out on the water's edge are spotted with the poisoned marine life. The Cook County Clean-up Commission is to be out here taking care of the mess within the week, a Conservation Dept. spokesman said. "That's part of the deal," he added.

The Dept. of Conservation, located in Chicago said that letters were sent to each institution involved but no granting of permission was necessary for project to get underway.

Last week, several hundred dead fish and crayfish lay scattered on the shore or floating on top of Harper's lake.

Turnovers key loss to Triton

by Joe Kunk

If football was a game of three quarters the score would have read Harper 6, Triton 0. But unfortunately for the Hawks, football is played four quarters and the final was a scorching Triton 38, Harper 5.

After battling Triton even in the first quarter on one of the hottest days of the year, disaster struck, or as the saying goes "when it rains, it pours." Three straight turnovers, two pass interceptions and one fumble, all inside the Hawk 20 yard line broke the game wide open. Triton scored four times in about 17 minutes.

Numerous penalties also stalled many of the Hawk offense drives near the end of the second half, after a Mike Walston interception, Harper sustained its first real drive of the afternoon with three straight passes from quarterback Neil Schmidt, one of them good for 30 yards to Bruce Gettelman. But time ran out as a quarterback keeper was good for only eight yards, leaving the Hawks at the 13 yard line.

The third quarter was the high point for Harper, as they came out of the locker room ready to play. This time a Triton turnover benefited the Hawks as they recovered a Trojan fumble on Triton's own 20 yard line. Missing running and passing plays the Hawks got down to the 18, but their old nervous penalties struck again, holding call pushed them back to the 30.

Then the Schmidt-Gettelman tandem went to work as Schmidt hit an all show Gettelman for a 30 yarder and a touchdown, which would be Harper's lone score of the day. The extra-point attempt was wide. That ended the scoring for both teams for the rest of the afternoon. The fourth quarter was dull to the fans as the oppressive heat wore out both teams and neither squad could gain momentum.

All the coaches were proud of the team as they fought back in the second half and didn't quit. Coach Eliass was especially pleased with this factor as he said "It takes a lot of character to come back as we did in the second half, and if you don't have character, you're not going to win many games." Coach Eliass also commented that the game was a lot closer than the score indicated, as Triton had the ball 24 out of 30 minutes in the first half and the defense played well considering the time spent out on the field and continuously having its back against the wall. The team plays Thornton away this week and the team's next home game is Sept. 20 vs DuPage.

Golfers prepare for defense of N4C title

by Joe Kunk

The Harper golf team is working hard and is ready to continue its dominance of the N4C. Since joining the N4C the Hawks golfers have won it every year. Last by last year's "Coach of the Year" Roger Schmidt the Hawks are again favorites to take the conference title. Retaining this year and giving Coach Reichold reason to be optimistic, is junior college state champion Scott Spielman. Spielman was the number two golfer in average in the N4C, with five 18.4 ave. Coach Reichold said "Scott is one of the finest golfers I've been associated with and I'm hoping he will receive a scholarship for his talent." The team as a whole last year made from better N4C champs, was third in the state and DuPage Classic champion.

Coach Reichold is very confident about this team as he pointed out the team has much depth and is very balanced. Other members of this squad are Jeff Chamberlain, Ron Drake, Steve Ford, Tony Maycher, Mike McCookers, Jim Stedroviak, Mike Sullivan, Tom Caldar, and Jim Karan. Coach Reichold singled out Chamberlain and Stedroviak as both playing real well in tournaments.

As of this writing three of the five spots for playing in tournaments are set with Spielman, Chamberlain, and Ford, with the two other spots up for grabs. According to Coach Reichold these positions could change with every meet and in his words it's a "real daylight" as everyone on the team is capable of shooting 80 or under.

Coach Reichold feels the main competition for the conference title will be from Joliet, but also stated it's hard to predict so early in the season. The team starts its trek toward another title on Sept. 19 at White Pines.

Harper back quarterback Neil Schmidt let's a pass fly during a practice scrimmage in preparation for their game vs. Thornton this Saturday. The game is an away game and starts at 1:30 p.m. Quarterback Schmidt is the Hawks top threat as he can both run and pass equally well. The team's next home game is Sat. Sept. 20 vs DuPage. Tennis team practices hard for N4C conference

by Jan McWhorter

Harper's girls' tennis team looks to be shaping up for their season matches.

The entire team consists of nine players, two of the nine returning from last year. The girls are: Mary Frick, Mary Kelly, Kris Krueger, Debbie Kuba, Tammy McCullough, Cindy Barza, Suzanne Laeger, Cathy Schmidt and Jenny Jensen.

According to Head Coach Martha Holt, this year's team is much stronger all around than last year's team. "This year's team is very motivated. It has a lot of depth. I expect that they will do very well in this year's conference."

Two returning players are Kris Krueger and Mary Kelly. Last year Kris was named most valuable player. She finished third on conference, and placed in Sectionals. Kris is playing second singles this year for the team.

The team has played two schools so far this season, smashing both Washington 10 and Joliet 5-0. The team hopes to keep up the winning record.

The next conference meet will be Tuesday, at Rock Valley. The next home conference meet will be Thursday, at 5:30 p.m. against Illinois Valley.

Referendum defeated Budget cuts are coming

by Jody Saunders
The possibility of a 7.5 cent tax increase was rejected last Tuesday by a vote of 6,130 to 3,200. The defeat of the Harper referendum, designed to ease the ailing educational fund, has left administrators and board members with the task of having to operate the college with insufficient funds.

"It was a very bad day in the life of Harper College, but we will survive. I feel it was an emotional tax revolt, we tried to show the voters that the increase would be very minimal but we lost," Mr. James McGrath, president of Harper College said.

Of the possible 48 precincts, the proposal was only carried in 13. The referendum ran into rough territory in the Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect areas. Parts of Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates were heavy supporters of the tax increase.

"I wasn't prepared for that significant of a defeat. Many people were involved but it didn't translate into votes," Vice President of Student Affairs and referendum committee coordinator Gweth Fischer said. The question many administrators, faculty and board members are attempting to answer is why was there a low voter turnout for the referendum? Some feel the political climate was not conducive to a tax hike, because of the negative attitude towards tax increases being generated throughout the country. Others cite student apathy and low student vote turnout as the deciding factor.

"Student apathy is a problem, but students now at Harper have a responsibility to those that follow them. The students involved in activities helped a lot, if we could have phoned those people we would have won," McGrath said.

Harper students reacted to the defeat by questioning the voter's unwillingness to support the referendum. Student Ben Corry said, "I feel bad about it, it's sad that the people don't care about the school." Kathy Orr, a second year Harper student, said "It's depressing, I guess everyone had their hopes up high and they wished too hard."

"It's hard for me to understand why so many people didn't vote. They have a responsibility as citizens to speak out on the issues and to vote. Only five percent of the possible voters in the Harper district voted," Fischer said.

"I think the referendum failed for several reasons. There was an advertising low voter turnout, the community was revolting against tax increases and many of the voters weren't informed," Student Trustee Peter Marshay said.

Many individuals disapproved of the tactics used by the tax protest groups who actively opposed Harper's referendum. They have been criticized for distributing literature "which many feel borders on downright dishonesty. They didn't analyze any of the data which is important," Fischer said. "I hold no ill will towards the groups, but I feel they were misinformed and that they don't understand the nature of a community college. They were sincere but if they knew more they might very well have been supporters. Our budget cuts will come out of muscle rather than fat," McGrath said.

Harper organized a committee to get out the 'yes' vote and to counteract the anti-referendum groups. Committee members were responsible for encouraging students and the community to exercise their right to vote.

Administrators acted as guest speakers throughout the community. Pres. McGrath appeared before approximately 600 people during a three week period, while students and faculty members called several thousand former Harper students. Students also distributed referendum flyers reminding students to vote.

"I'm very grateful to the many people at Harper who were involved in this project. I hope we together in the difficult days ahead," McGrath said.

While college officials are coming to grips with the loss they must now concentrate on possible budget cuts, which may total 12.5 million over the next two years. Administrators are in the process of forming a committee to review the budget and determine what the next course of action will be.

The first move in eliminating operating costs appeared last Wednesday when it was announced that Western, a brief period during the winter holiday when students can earn credits by taking condensed courses, would be scrapped.

Students may feel a greater pinch this spring as administrators say with the possibility of offering fewer courses. "We will eliminate things before we consider eliminating employees of Harper," McGrath said.

Other teachable budget cuts may include a freeze on future hiring for faculty, administrative and classified staff positions. Duties may be spread out among the administrators as an effort to avoid refilling vacant positions. College officials are reluctant to discuss specific budget cuts presently because "we must analyze everything before we can make any definite decisions," Fischer said.

Seven seek Student Senate posts

Linda Mueller

Student Senate elections will be held Monday and Tuesday. Polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the lounge bldg. A and from 3 p.m. to 8 p.m. in the lounge bldg. D.

Listed below are the declarations of candidacy.

Engineering/Math/Physical Science

Linda Mueller: "I strongly believe that in order to effectively manage an educational institution, the students must play an important part. I feel as though I am qualified to work with the student body, not just for them, in a combined effort to attain a set of goals that will be beneficial to all of us."

Stephen G. McCleary

Greg Moore: "The opportunity has been made available to participate in the decision making process of Harper. I'm going to take this opportunity to voice the opinion of myself and my fellow students. I am a member of the Glee Club, Astronomy Club and Political Science Club."

Business

Stephen G. McCleary: "It is my desire to have the atmosphere and environment at Harper to be the best that it can be. Therefore, I feel the only way that the college can be successful is by the student body being involved in every way it can. Being a member of the Student Senate will help me better complain these desires." Alan Bergstrom: "As a senior last year I realized how little the student body knows about Student Senate. One of the things I would try to do would be to get students in my division interested in the actions of student government."

Michael Lavanway: "I am running for the Student Senate because I feel I can help the students of Harper, both in their relations with the administration and with their fellow students. I am seeking the position of senator from the business area because this is where I feel I am well qualified. I am a full-time student enrolled in a business administration transfer program with a majority of my classes in the business area. I am greatly concerned with what occurs in the business area."

Liberal Arts

David Fletcher: "The reason I am running for the Student Senate is that I think the students here should get a better deal. I like to talk to people because most have something good to say. Also, Harper is my college and I want to get involved in school functions, because I don't like some things that go on here."

Social Science

Dale W. Markey: "I would like to represent my division for several reasons. For many years in high school, and at Harper, many of my teachers have tried to get me more involved in school activities, but I never had the time. Now I have the time and I think I can do a good job in the Senate. I also feel that the learning process of a student should involve more than just going to classes, and Student Senate would help me in this way."

"Last year there was a lot of criticism of the Senate; whether or not it was justified I don't know. However, I know that just criticizing something won't make it better. To improve anything takes a lot of work and one of my ideas, which I am willing to give if I am elected to this position."

Referendum fails ..student apathy?

It's official, the referendum didn't pass and now many people are thinking, "What now?" The answers to these questions can't be given right now, because no one can say for sure what will happen.

The vote was two to one against the referendum and a quick observation would note that the majority of Harper's 20,000 students participated in voting. A lack of knowledge or plague of general apathy must have swept through the college about the issue. How can the college be expected to try and provide the best quality of education and services if the students won't even care enough to go out and vote to help their school?

Since the cuts that will have to be made will affect not only future students, but the present student body, people will soon begin to realize how important the referendum was. Maybe after the cuts have been made when the college tries again to pass a similar tax referendum, the community will be more willing to help. Hopefully by then the students will, too.

The first things to go, as a result of the defeat at the polls, will be the Other Than Personal Service (OTPS) equipment. Students may start seeing fewer and fewer desks, books, both in the library and the classrooms, erasers, and other non-personal services. The next thing would be the administration, faculty, and staff positions. Those who leave will not be replaced. The next step would be a look at the academic program. Trying to see where class sizes could be increased and some classes could even be cut out of the curriculum will probably be the main changes.

This is the change that hurt Harper students the most. When class sizes are larger there can be almost no interpersonal relationship between teachers and students. Students who don't understand concepts or are behind in classes will no longer be able to get extra help in class. If some classes are cut out entirely, students needing those classes and credits won't be able to transfer easily. Some students may even have to travel to colleges farther away to get their courses covered.

The impact of the defeat hasn't hit hard enough or close enough to home yet to get anyone worried. When the cuts do start, and people start complaining and feeling sorry for themselves, they should remember that they were asked to help Harper may be able to pull itself out of this, if they can cut enough, but the question is, will the Harper students and community suffer because of these major cuts, and if so how much?

Better fish improve area

The Harper community will soon see new breeds of fish in the Harper lakes behind the school. The Illinois Conservation department along with the Cook County Forest Preserve have cleared out the lakes at Harper and other lakes in the area. They did this to make way for bigger, better fish, like bass, bluegill, catfish and sunfish.

New students who go outdoors to look at the scenery around the campus, will really have something to look at. The Harper lakes should no longer look mucky because the bottom-eating scavenger fish are gone now. This new addition of the fish will be very complementary to the area.

Another reason these "better" fish are being put into area lakes is to increase the possible fishing places. Because all this money and energy is being used on the area to improve the fishing, Harper should follow-up on the idea and allow fishing on campus. The fish will be of great aesthetic value, of course, but they could also provide hours of fishing pleasure, too.

This new positive addition to Harper will definitely help the school in many ways. Since the lakes do attract large amounts of students and visitors alike, there are already fishermen around. A new fishermen's club could even be started on campus. A study of marine life could be added to some of the science classes.

The maintenance and keeping up of the lakes might take extra care now, but all the benefits Harper will get should make all the work worthwhile.

THE HARBINGER Letters to Editor Where were the student voters?

Dear Editor:

As we all know (or should know), the Harper referendum failed. The main problem with this to a lot of the student body actually doesn't know it. They don't even know that there was a referendum, let alone the results.

Personally, I think that, that is somewhat ridiculous. The result of the referendum will affect most of the students on this campus, and a majority of us didn't even exercise our given right to vote. I'm not so much concerned with the vote count, as much as I'm concerned with the lack of student vote.

Approximately 5,000 people voted, and we have here over 20,000 students. Where were the rest of you? And I don't even think even a few of the votes were cast by the Harper student body.

Why, I ask? Didn't you see the almost 200 posters that barraged the campus? Didn't you look at your student activities calendar? And finally, didn't you read the little yellow flyers that were placed with loving care on your individuals? These things were not done to give the students one more thing to bother with. They tried to stress the importance of the issue but our plans and worries fell on closed minds. I'm only sorry that I have the job of representing these students in the board.

Sincerely,
Pete Marabuz
Student Trustee

WHCM staffer commended

Dear Editor:

For the past several years, as part of my radio broadcasting course, I have used the Harper radio station as an example of how a radio station operates.

To help present that unit, arrangements are usually made to have a guest speaker from Harper give a presentation to the radio classes. After the visit by the d.j., the classes are brought to Harper for a tour of the campus and especially the radio facilities.

We were extremely fortunate this past week to have been put in touch with Harper student, John Blum, who also serves as station manager at WHCM. John not only took time in his busy schedule to come talk to the classes here without any remuneration, but saw to it that arrangements for the Harper tour were taken care of.

In addition, John was present at the studio when our classes arrived, and along with his staff, provided a firm of laboratory setting for the students to gain some practical experience they definitely would not have been able to obtain elsewhere.

No matter how much money is spent by the college in public relations, it is mainly through the efforts of people like John Blum that the public's favorable impression of the college is formulated, and I am sure that these same efforts have already left some fine impressions in some prospective Harper students.

Thank-you for your time
Sincerely, a teacher from District 15

Generally Speaking..

by Cindy Corvelli

Discrimination is thick in the air. One dose of John Travolta and away we fly. You've got that fever, long, night, again, again, again, again, but first you've got to learn those steps to make a real killing on the dance floor. But if you're gonna dance, do it right!

If you're not at all familiar with these new dance dances, then take the time to go through these three dance dances step by step.

The main thing to remember about dance is that it's basically made up of fast erratic movements. It combines sudden turns with swift kicks and loud claps. Once you become familiar with these dances, you'll be able to do it all with ease.

Your arm will be to become the "Queen King" or "Queen" of the dance floor. You will no longer be just another dancer on the floor, but a performer for all to gaze at.

The first dance is called "Butta." It is the easiest dance dance there is to learn. Starting at one end of the floor, you take a running leap and back up your left leg so you make it to the center of the floor. While the leg is still suspended in mid-air, clap your hands under the outstretched leg. Quickly, turn to the left and do the same in your other leg. Repeat this process, turning in a clockwise direction until you have returned to your original position. Try to remember that this dance must be done at top velocity in order to do it right. This dance was appropriately named the "Butta."

This next dance is called the "Tramont." You start out by walking slowly, lifting your legs up and down as if in pain. Move your arms in a circular motion at your sides, as your entire body bobs up and down. Slowly, build up speed until you no longer go any faster without tripping over. This is a line dance, so you should have lots of people doing it at the same time. On every fourth beat, add a "foot" — to make the dance more realistic. This dance can be used effectively to break the ice at a party at your house or at those big name dance venues you've been dying to visit.

I try not to favor this next dance too much, but it's true. I do love this one. The "Chicken Fight Shag" provides the opportunity for guys and girls to dance together.

Guys, you start out by clapping your hands widely in the air. Now bend at the waist and begin to swing your weight from the left side to the right side and then do it again. Step forward, kick, now backward, kick, jump, click your fingers, kick, step to the left, then to the right, back. Go back to the center, and shuffle your feet.

In the meantime, girls should be doing their part. Start by jumping up as high as you possibly can, just before your feet touch the ground, bend your knees so that you land on them. At first, this step will hurt tremendously, but with lots of practice, you will begin to form calluses and you will no longer feel the pain. While on your knees, clap your hands, swinging from left to right. Kick the left foot out to the side, then the right one. You are now in the splits, to get out of that position, lean forward until your head hits the floor, now push against your head with all the force you can muster up. Once you finish this backward somersault, kick out your left leg then the right, step forward, backward, then twist to the left and then to the right.

Now you're ready for the last part of the dance. Girls take a running leap and fly on to the guys shoulders while he is shuffling back and forth. Please make sure that your timing is good. Don't jump to the right if he is shuffling to the left. Once you have your partner on top of you, the guys have to spin around and around changing directions periodically.

These dances, practiced just a few short hours every night, can turn you into a pretty flashy dancer. Soon you won't go to dance just to watch, but to participate in the fun. Don't be just another spectator, get out there and boogie. Even if you don't look at all like John Travolta, you'll probably outdance all your friends when you perform the "Butta," the "Tramont," and the "Chicken Fight Shag."

Activities Fair planned

by Bob Conroy

Harper will present an Activities Fair to inform students of all the clubs and organizations available to them. The Activities Fair is an event at which the clubs and organizations on campus set up displays which explain what their group is all about. Students may stop by to learn what groups are available, what projects the group has planned for the year, and when the meetings are.

Students at Harper give up service about not being able to find out about clubs and now they are given the chance. It was purposely scheduled for two days, all day so everyone can come," said Jeanne Padkum, student activities advisor.

If a student is interested in a particular club, he or she may stop by the club's booth to find out more about it.

WPMR radio will do a live-remote broadcast from the lounge to A-Bldg on at least one of the two days. The Activities Fair will be from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Tuesday and Wednesday, and in the Student Lounge on Wed. A

Accidentally getting pregnant in the middle of a semester at college can be horrifying; not to mention a real inconvenience.

Most unwanted pregnancies occur because the couple was either using no birth control at the time, or was using their method incorrectly.

Midwest Family Planning Association, in an effort to inform college students, has developed a program which aims to educate and inform you about available birth control methods, the correct way to use these methods, how to do a breast exam properly, the importance of having an annual pap smear, etc.

The organization is not-for-profit and will be at Harper College on Wednesday, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. At this time, a booth will be set up in the Student Center and a counselor will be present to answer questions and/or give you free literature on various methods and other related health issues.

Accidents can happen, but planned pregnancies are the best. This program is sponsored in cooperation with the Harper College Health Service, A-302.

Hawks stomp Rock Valley

by Joe Kunk

Showing offensive power in both running and passing attacks, the Harpers football team defeated Rock Valley 36-27.

Couch Elusank said, "This was an improvement over last week vs. Trilon. We played a well balanced game in mixing our ground and passing game." He also praised the first unit defense for their outstanding play and cited Paul Panagalis for playing well.

The Hawks showed their dominance right away by taking the opening kick-off and driving down to the Rock Valley six yard line, but a lost fumble killed the drive. The Hawk defense kept Rock Valley in a hole and forced them to punt.

The first play on the second series was a Neil Schmidt pass to Bill Strawn for a 14 yard touchdown. The kick by Mike Cusack was good and Harper quickly led 7-0. The second Harper score came about after an interception by Chuck Klen at the Hawk 27 yard line Strawn made a 27-yard catch. Then Brian Gotselmann and Dave Budigheimer alternated carries for another first down. Three straight plays failed to gain any yardage. With fourth down the Hawks decided to go for it. Schmidt scrambled around to avoid a sack and let Strawn gain for a score, this time good for 37 yards.

Again Cusack's kick was good, which made it 14-0. The ball changed hands back and forth as neither team could get a drive started. There was confusion to the fans as a call which led to a Rock Valley touchdown.

In the situation, a Rock Valley receiver caught the ball, fumbled it, and Harper recovered. But during the time no one had control of the ball, Harper committed a penalty. Many thought it should have been Harper's ball with the penalty added on. But the rule book states "a team cannot keep the ball if a foul was committed prior to possession." Rock Valley got the ball where their man fumbled it and proceeded to score. Rock Valley tried an inside kick to get the ball back but Harper held on. The Hawk's couldn't get their offense rolling again and Rock Valley took over. Rock Valley tried a desperation pass in the final few seconds but it was picked off by Hawk Ralph Florence to end the half.

The second half was when the Hawk's offensive machine really got into high gear. On Harper's first possession, Brian Gotselmann broke through the middle and suggested 78 yards outscored for a score, the Hawks then went for the two point conversion and were successful, making it 22-7.

After this score the Hawk's defensive secondary received a surprise test as Rock Valley would pass extensively as they desperately tried to catch up. Randy Nye picked off one of those many passes to set up the next Hawk score. This time a pitchout to Budigheimer, who took it 45 yards, all the way for a score. The conversion was good. At this point, Couch Elusank started giving some of the regulars a breather and gave others a chance to show their talent.

Panagalis hurt both teams and the Hawks drove down in the eight yard line by the running of Devin Hensley and Scott LaFont. The drive was stopped and a field goal attempt was not good. Rock Valley then mounted an 88 yard drive and scored with about 30 seconds left in the third quarter making it 29-14.

In the fourth quarter, Joe Tawney took over on offense giving Schmidt a rest. The Hawks fumbled and Rock Valley recovered. Again Rock Valley filled the air with football but all were incomplete with help from the fine pass rushing of Jay Lushman.

Schmidt took over again and the Hawks, staying on the ground, ran up time on the clock diminishing Rock Valley's hopes of staging a comeback. The Hawks drove all the way for a score pushing it over from the one with a nice block from Lane LeBray. The kick was good making it Harper 36, Rock Valley 14. Rock Valley then came back on all punts and scored, pushing closer 36-20.

The final Rock Valley score was the result of a Harper miscue. An errant pitch from quarterback, Towny, intended for Hensley, was picked up by a Rock Valley defender who took it all the way for a touchdown. That made it 36-27 and that's how it ended. The Hawks, winners, 36-27, ending their record to 2 wins, 1 loss, and evening their conference record at 1-1.

The team plays a conference game vs. DuPage at home Saturday at 3:30 p.m.

Headed off at the pass, seeing eye-to-eye with his Rock Valley counterpart in Harper running back Dave Budigheimer. Budigheimer with Brian Gotselmann, Neil Schmidt, and Bill Strawn led the Hawks offensive attack in defeating conference opponent Rock Valley 36-27. Budigheimer himself scored on a 14 yard pitchout, and Gotselmann scored on a 78 yard ramp, with Schmidt and Strawn teaming up for two touchdowns. The Hawks play another conference game this week on Sat. vs. DuPage at 1:30 p.m. (photo by Mike Wendler)

Student Senators find a challenge

by Sue Conroy

The student senate elections this year show a slight increase in student involvement at Harper. When the polls closed 160 ballots were counted to determine the winners. Last year's election only attracted 130 voters. The record crowd was in 1975 with a total of 200 ballots.

Linda Mueller was elected from the Engineering, Math, and Physical Sciences divisions. "At first it was a matter of shock for me," said Mueller, "but I'm really excited about working with the students on the senate and around the campus."

Ms. Mueller was the first person to turn in a petition and was the only one who would have been eligible to run in the election where it was originally scheduled two weeks ago.

"Right now I feel ignorant about the responsibilities, but I'll do all work hard, and work together. I'm sure we can help out the students a great deal," said Ms. Mueller.

Stephen G. McCullary was elected from the Business division. The race for the Business division was the closest of all. The three candidates were only three votes apart consecutively.

"I would like to thank the student body for their support. I will give an honest effort in fulfilling my responsibilities to Harper College," said McCullary.

David Fleisher was elected from the Liberal Arts division. Fleisher thinks the student body at Harper should get a better deal, that's why he said he ran for student senate. Fleisher also said that he wants to get involved at Harper because it is his school.

Dale W. Markay was elected from the Social Science and Public Service divisions. "I'm really disappointed that more students didn't vote," said Markay. "I hope to get the students involved now as they can't say they didn't know about things like they did about the referendum." Both Fleisher and Markay were the only ones running in their divisions. "I'm glad I won, it would have been nice if someone was running against me and I won though," said Markay.

All of the candidates mentioned getting students more involved in their school as part of their campaign plans. The senators have already begun meeting and discussing plans for the new year. The first priority is increasing student involvement, and the second priority is repairing the damaged name of student senate.

Businessmen give lectures to classes

The business students of Harper College are receiving firsthand information of the business world through the college's Education/Industry Interface Program. Executives from business are invited to talk to students and staff about current problems and opportunities in the business world. Joseph Kallwasser, sales manager for Northern Illinois Gas, recently spoke about the energy situation and the environment.

One of the primary objectives of the program is to introduce budding business students to contemporary issues faced by major companies such as Northern Illinois Gas. Among the many comments made by Kallwasser was his company's continuing concern to provide adequate energy resources to both homeowners and industrial users in the northern Illinois area.

Harper students learned that through increased consumer awareness and conservation efforts, the amount of natural gas used per average household served by Northern Illinois has declined during the past few years. The decline, according to Kallwasser, was brought about through more efficient insulation of homes and more efficient heating units such as furnaces and water heaters.

Kallwasser was the first in a series of guest executives to participate in Harper's current Interface Program. The program is sponsored by the Harper Educational Foundation and coordinated by Dr. Donald Sedik of the Business Division of Harper College.

Scholarship awards increased

Governor James R. Thompson has approved a 100% increase in the state's maximum scholarship grant for Illinois college students.

The Governor's action in approving House Bill 2963 boosts the maximum award from $1,600 for eligible students who receive the scholarship grants from the Illinois State Scholarship Commission, effective immediately.

"Those who will benefit from this increase are students attending private colleges and universities, because tuition and fees at our public institutions are below the old maximum," Thompson said.

"These grants are based entirely on the financial need of students who are Illinois residents as it helps those who need help the most," the Governor said. "The grants are aimed at giving all students a choice among our colleges and universities."

Total cost of the 100% increase will be $2.7 million for about 16,000 students who are currently on the grant. Part-time students may qualify for half the maximum grant award for full-time students, and

The funds are included in the Board of Higher Education's allocation of the Governor's Fiscal 1979 budget.

Sponsors of House Bill 2963 are Representative Michael J. Brady, Chicago, and Senator Lyle W. Lemke, Chicago.

Legal Technology exam offered

Prior to entering the Legal Technology Program in the spring students must pass a entrance exam which is given on the fourth Thursday of each month. The next exam is Oct. 26 at 5 p.m.

Students may contact the college Testing Center ext. 341, to register for the exam. Applicants must submit a written resume and a statement of career goals, on the scheduled test date.

The Legal Technology Program, accredited by the American Bar Association, is a statewide approved program offering cooperative extension courses at other community colleges. Students are trained to become technically qualified assistants to lawyers and are taught the basic skills needed in an effective working relationship with a lawyer as well as an in-depth knowledge in a specialized area.

Under the supervision of a lawyer, the legal technician may research documents, conduct interviews or research documents. The technician may also organize data and do legal work in a specialized area. He may also draft legal documents and follow through with legal procedures.

Paralegal seminar

How can greater understanding of legal ethical decision making be obtained by participants in making professional judgments? This is the purpose of a seminar sponsored by Harper Oct. 10 at 7 p.m. at the Willow Park campus, Milwaukee and Palatine Roads, Wheeling.

Alverno College speakers: Dr. Maria Menikowski, director of evaluation and psychology, and Dr. Margaret Earley, chairperson of the Division of Values in Decision Making and professor of religious studies, and Marquette University, associate dean and professor of law Charles Mendakowski will conduct the seminar.

Audience participation and group analysis of legal/ethical dilemmas will be included in the discussion portion of the program.

The registration fee of $5 includes tuition, materials and coffee. Reservations should be made prior to Oct. 10 by calling 397-3000, ext. 348.

Christmas tour planned

Mayan ruins in tropical jungles, brightly colored Indian settings, handicrafts, a colonial Spanish capital, a lighted lake set among volcanoes: these are among the experiences open to Harper students and friends of Harper during the Christmas vacation.

This year Harper's international study program will include a seven day visit to Guatemala and El Salvador, Dec. 24 to Jan. 1. Humanities 110 credit may be earned.

Basic cost for the program is $809-$828. This covers air fare by Pan-Am (Chicago to Guatemala City, San Salvador to Chicago), deluxe or first-class hotels with private en-suite bathrooms, all land transportation by bus, sightseeing tours, lectures, hotel taxes and tips, and the services of a tour agent and faculty advisor. Optional tours are offered to Tikal, Chichen-Itza, and a Pacific coast resort. The program cost does not cover tuition fees for students wishing to earn credit, or meals and personal expenses.

An informational meeting on the study tour will be held on Oct. 18 at 6:30 p.m. in 1241. Details may be obtained from Martha Simmons in the Liberal Arts Division, F317, or F317b, ext. 385. Applications should be submitted early to secure a place on the program.

Editorial Changes in Student Senate expected

Now that the Student Senate elections are over, and the senators have been chosen, what exactly are they supposed to do?

One change for the better would be for the senators to get in touch with the students. Since they are elected by the students and work for the students, they should get to know the students.

If the lines of communication are open between the senate and the students, the senate can turn out to be more useful than it has been in the past. More students will start bringing their problems to the representatives if they know they are welcome. Students may start having faith in their senators if they know that the elected officials will listen and try to help wherever possible.

Another step the senate should try to take is that of getting the students more involved in their school. Students should be strongly urged to attend senate meetings and voice their opinions on issues that will concern them or their education at Harper.

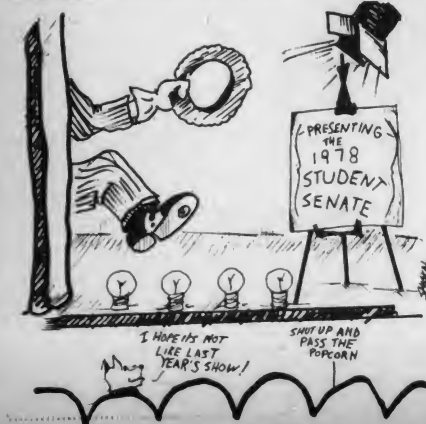

The senate is very powerful and many students don't realize just how powerful they are. All the clubs and organizations at Harper are under the jurisdiction of the senate. That is, the senate oversees all actions of clubs and organizations from where and when they meet, to the allotment of funds. If any club has any financial problems they can go before the senate and ask for financial help.

The senate can help in other ways besides financially. The senate serves as a buffer between the students and administration. If there is any tension between the two, the senate is there to fix things.

Last year's senate got a bad name, whether it deserved it or not is a subjective matter, however. This year's senators have to start off with a disadvantage because of this. It will be entirely up to this year's representatives to earn a good name for Harper's student senate. People may mistrust them and have little faith in them when they first get into office, but if they are dedicated and willing to do their job they should find their problems decreasing soon.

If the representatives can do for the Harper students what they are assigned to do, they will be successful in their appointments. If this year's senate is "exposed" as it was last year, students won't stand for it and complaints will be heard around the school.

New student senators shouldn't be scared off because of the task they have in front of them, but they can consider it a challenge, and if they succeed they will feel a great sense of accomplishment.

Food Service scholarships awarded

The Chicago Illinois Restaurant Association and the Statler Foundation awarded six scholarships totaling over $2,000 to Harper Food Service Management students. CIRA awarded Bernadette Powers, Timothy Hasebald, Sandra Jean Korn, and Kanwarjit Paul $500 scholarships each. In addition, the Statler Foundation awarded Timothy Hasebald and Bernadette Powers scholarships totaling one-half of their expenses for this school year.

The objective of the scholarship is to provide financial assistance, on a merit basis, in support of attainment of formal foodservice education in a Junior/Community College. The awards are open to any worthy individual who evidences an interest, desire or ambition to study or train for a vocation in foodservice or food handling or food processing as a full-time student. The ultimate goal will be to attract and retain qualified personnel to assure the future growth and progress of the food service industry.

Culinary arts and management students from Harper and three other area junior colleges helped earn scholarship funds through the Chicago Illinois Restaurant Association Scholarship Through Education and Participation Dinner held last March. The profits from the $40 a plate gourmet dinner went to a trust fund to provide scholarships. Over two hundred students participated in the planning, preparation, and presentation of the event. The third annual STEEP Dinner is scheduled for March 1979.

For further information about the Food Service Management Curriculum and scholarship information, contact Mr. Cliff Wenter, Coordinator of the Food Service Management Program, ext. 973.

Students dance children's troubles away Oct. 28-29

by Joan Pederson

Catholic and Catholic Campus Ministry are planning a Halloween dance-a-thon for Muscular Dystrophy for Oct. 28 and 29 at the Harper cafeteria.

The dance-a-thon will have a dance theme and will last from noon Saturday to noon Sunday.

Students are urged to wear costumes but they're not mandatory; however, first, second, and third prizes will be awarded to the dancer that brings in the most prizes. There will also be prizes for best costume for a guy and a girl.

According to the dance-a-thon committee chairperson, Miss Adrienne Geary, they hope to raise about $3,000 or more for the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Students should register in the Student Activities office; there will be no registration fee.

"It's very easy," Miss Geary commented, "to get a sponsor tonight. All a person has to do is get signatures and a bill will be sent to the people on the list."

Many prizes will be given out throughout the dance including "decent" prizes donated by local stores and businesses.

Food and drinks will be donated by places like McDonald's.

Several celebrities such as Greg Brown from WMPT-FM radio are invited to perform.

Dancers will be given a 15-minute break every two hours and half-hour lunch, dinner and break-fast break.

"We're not going to be not-picking about this," Miss Geary said, "our major function is to raise money."

She added, "Every step you dance is one step closer to finding a cure for Muscular Dystrophy."

Every participant will receive a free t-shirt from the MDA, sponsored by Shuck, with the words "Dance for those who can't."

The public can come to watch between 8 and 11 p.m., Saturday for a $1 fee which will go towards the MDA.

High school juniors and seniors are welcome to participate and anyone under 18 must have a parent's permission.

Sister Penny Brennan, representing the Catholic Campus Ministry club said, "The dance-a-thon is an opportunity to be generous with one's time, energy, talent, and money. We also anticipate a lot of fun."

Kingston Trio keeps crowd clickin'

by Laura Caravito

The night of Sept. 28 came to a cheerful end for those hundreds of people who attended the Kingston Trio concert. Those who did not end up at Kingston Trio (and seemed to have left as fast).

The Kingston Trio is a group of six middle-aged men who play a mixture of country and folk music. Their band includes a bass, drums, mandolin and fiddle, banjo and three virtuoso guitarists.

The two-hour concert was apparently kept alive and exciting for the audience who voluntarily kept time by clapping to the beat of the sometimes fast-paced, down-home country songs.

Though not exactly your average punk rock band with flashing lights and a smoke bomb finale, the group stressed, "We don't want you to think we're an 'old-timey' group. We're hip." That was proven by guitarist Roger Gambill who unleashed his jangling licks numerous times and let loose hearty cries of love.

Although they played a lot of fast, fast stomps, finger clickin', head boppin' music, they were also capable of the soft, harmonious tender ballads such as "In The Morning Rain." Some other old-time favorites were "Where Has All The Flowers Gone?" "Little Jane," "Lonesome Traveler," "Shady Grove," "Didn't I Feel High."

The group started 22 years ago with the lead guitarist Bob Shane. He plans to record another album soon after their tour to Australia. This will be their first record in 10 years. One certain fan won't mind as she later told Shane, "You sound just as good as you did when I first heard you 10 years ago."

Cameraata singers available

The Cameraata Singers, a select ensemble of 11 Harper College students will be available for off-campus performances beginning Oct. 15. Their program covers a wide range of musical styles averaging 20 to 45 minutes in length.

Last year the ensemble performed for such organizations as the Schaumburg Rotary Club, the Mount Prospect Pains and Spains, and the Museum of Science and Industry.

To schedule a performance or obtain additional information call Jerry Davidson at 302-3000 ext. 360.

Blues guitarist Muddy Waters will appear in concert Oct. 13 in the lounge of bldg. A. Tickets are $2 for Harper students and $4 for the public. Seating is on a first come, first served basis.

Waters has been known for such tunes as "Rollin' Stone" which inspired Bob Dylan's song, "Like A Rolling Stone." Appearing with Waters will be the Jimichie All Band.

Illinois Arts Council offers fellowships

The Illinois Arts Council has announced a new program of fellowships for published Illinois creative writers. Two $5,000 fellowships will be offered in this pilot venture, which may grow to include other creative artists in future years. The program was unanimously approved at the July meeting of the Illinois Arts Council.

According to Jennifer Meyer, IAC Artists' Program Coordinator, "The purpose of the program is to recognize creative writers of exceptional achievement and outstanding promise by offering assistance to writers to provide them with the opportunity for further writing."

Writers are eligible if they have published two or more short stories in two or more literary magazines, or published a volume of short fiction; or published a novel; or published ten or more poems in two or more literary magazines, or published a volume of poetry; or published a dramatic script (excluding performance copies).

For this program, student publications which publish primarily student work do not qualify as literary magazines. Writers must have been in residence in Illinois at least six consecutive months previous to the application in order to apply.

The deadline for applications for the fellowships is Nov. 1.

For specific application procedures and further information, students may contact Jennifer Meyer, Artists' Program Coordinator, Illinois Arts Council, 31 N. Wabash, Chicago, IL 60602, 435-0700.

The debate is free to Harper students and $1.50 to the public. Mrs. Schlafly is the founder and National Chairman of STOP ERA. President of Eagle Forum, and a member of the Illinois Commission on the Status of Women. She is an opponent of women's liberation and has testified before most of the state legislatures which defeated the E.R.A. She has recently published her sixth book entitled, "The Power of the Positive Woman."

Mrs. Schlafly is the wife of an attorney and the mother of six. She has recently been chosen by the Associated Press as one of the ten most powerful people in Illinois, and by the World Almanac as one of the 25 most influential women in the United States.

Ms. DeCruz, attorney, author and lecturer, is an advocate of the E.R.A. She was the president of the National Organization for Women (NOW) from 1974-77. She was NOW's representative to the World Conference on Women held in Moscow. She wrote, "Serious Justice" and "The Young Woman's Guide to Liberation."

She was a candidate for mayor in Syracuse, New York as part of the Liberal Party and is a member of the Ad Hoc Committee of Women for Human Rights. She is also a National Board Member of the Gay Rights National Lobby and is on the board of advisors for the Working Women United.

Both women have appeared on such television programs as Good Morning America, Mike Douglas Show, Today, Merv Griffin Show, Kip's Show, and Phil Donahue Show.

Tickets to this debate are available in the Students Activities Office in bldg. A.

YOU'VE TRIED THE REST.....NOW TRY THE BEST

Generally Speaking..

by Cindy Caravella

People really think twice about sending someone to the electric chair, but do they ever stop to think before sending someone to a dentist chair? No, of course not. Every six months you receive a summons regarding your presence so that ten to twelve pairs of hands can probe around in your mouth, checking for cavities and gum erosion.

People are scared to death before they go to the dentist, some won't even admit it, but it's true. You know what's going to happen. You think about it for weeks, day in and day out, anticipating that fabled day. The most horrible part about going to see your dentist is the long wait from the time you get notice from him until you actually sit in that chair succumbing to inevitable pain.

Try to prepare yourself before going to the dentist. Check out just exactly what's going on in your mouth. This includes a complete review of chips, cracks, and uneven gums. Try to see if you can guess how much work needs to be done. There will always be a few teeth that you know need extensive work. Maybe you have raw sores sticking out of those front in-siders. Don't ignore those impacted wisdom teeth either. Everything counts.

The idea is to try to get ready for that day when you must go to see your dentist. The key is doing anything well in advance. Jugglers do warmup before doing their 30 minute stunts, so you do your part too.

Don't let your dentist surprise you with any unexpected pain. The first thing to do is to go into the bathroom and lock the door. You are now going to prepare yourself for even the worst of things that your dentist and his squad of trained technicians could ever do to you. You must get yourself accustomed to being gagged, poked, and jabbed. Take your fingers and stick them down your throat, training yourself to remain calm and collected when he does it to you while fishing for his slippery tools.

Another exercise is to train yourself not to laugh when looking up your dentist's nose. This is very hard to do since it isn't an everyday occurrence. Have someone lean over you as if he or she were a dentist. By doing this, you will feel very comfortable in your dentist's chair when your reason will be diverted up his nostrils.

Speaking of noses, practice breathing through your nose, not through your mouth. This skill is a definite plus, since your mouth will be crammed full of cotton balls, instruments and fingers causing you to jerk and turn blue in the face.

Learn how to withstand direct light in your eyes since dentists usually shoot the lamp directly into your corners as they drill away. Practice by hanging a lamp over your bed, position it to glare into your face as you attempt some sleep. Even better, carry around a flashlight and every so often shine it into your eyes. Practice with all kinds of light, maybe even a fluorescent lightbulb. Try to see how close you can get it to your face without blinking.

Build up your immunity to pain. You know that your dentist is going to start scraping and picking the muckie you sit down till you leave his office, so practice beforehand. You can use a toothpick while watching television. Just keep poking up in those gums to get yourself accustomed to what's to come in the near future.

While at the dinner table, take your fork and scrape the sides of your teeth to let them know what pain is all about. Above all, don't forget those miserable shots they give you in the cheeks and roof of your mouth. Practice those too! Get an ordinary sewing needle and poke yourself until you can't take it anymore. Don't worry if you should start to bleed, dentists never worry.

The key to going to see your dentist is in the preparation. Build up your resistance to pain and agony. When you finally sit in that dentist chair, and hear the hungry hum of his mighty drill, you'll be able to sit back and relax, because pain will be almost second nature to you.

Cabaret at Harper

Rehearsals are now under way for the Studio Theatre's production of "Cabaret," which will be performed in the TV Studio of bldg. Y on Nov. 8, 11, 12, 17, 18, and 19.

Tickets will go on sale in the Student Activities office beginning Oct. 26. A Theater Theatre package will be offered for the Nov. 18th performance.

"Cabaret" set in Berlin in 1931, tells the story of cabaret singer Sally Bowles, and contrasts the frivolous world of the cabaret with the growing Nazi movement in Germany. Based on stories by Christopher Isherwood and the play by John Van Druten, "Cabaret" is one of the most popular musicals in the history of American musical theatre.

The cast consists of the following: Peggy Gitt (Schumacher) is playing the role of Sally Bowles; Brian T. Cron (Gleaves) is the Master of Ceremonies; Dan Crowley (Barrington Hills) is cast as Cliff; Sally's love interest, Vicky (Crump) (Palatine) is Fraulien Schneider, who runs the boarding house where Sally lives; Bruce Weaver (24 Grove Village) portrays Herr Schultz, a fruit vendor; Linda Mueller (Arlington Hills) is Fraulein Kost; a prostitute and Harold Lefkoy (Des Plaines) is playing Ernst Ludwig, a Nazi organizer. Other members include Carol Coulter (Des Plaines), Michele Rutledge (Mount Prospect), Mike Rossi (Harrington), Mike Ross (Schumacher), Becky (Hoffman), Debbie Huber (Buffalo Grove), Mitch Wendt (Shelton), Ron Jensen (Schumacher), Chuck Luback (Mount Prospect), Erin (Cookley) (Schumacher), Dana Ross (24 Grove Village), and Todd Jackson (24 Grove Village).

"Cabaret" is under the direction of Harper speech and theatre instructor, Mary Jo Wells. Dr. Robert Tilletson, Harper music faculty, is musical director for the production. Choreographer is Mr. Al Mueller of Des Plaines. Set Designer/Technical Director is Mr. Larry Chiles, costume design is being handled by Jennifer Hogan (Palatine) and Mary Maravaglia (Cary).

Musicians are still needed for the orchestra. Interested people should contact Dr. Tilletson at ext. 569.

Homecoming applications accepted

Applications are still being accepted in the Student Activities Office for the BGS Homecoming Queen from any full or part-time female student.

Nominations for queen candidates will be accepted through Wednesday. Initial screening of candidates will be on Thursday and Friday. Final selection of the queen and her two attendants will be made Oct. 24 or 25.

Candidates may apply individually or may be sponsored by a recognized, active Harper club excluding Student Senate, Harbinger, Program Board, and WHCM. A club may only sponsor one candidate.

All candidates will be initially interviewed and screened by the Homecoming Committee who will select ten finalists. The queen and her two attendants will be selected from the ten finalists by a college/community committee. There will be no election.

The queen and her two attendants will be selected on the basis of the following criteria: appearance; poise and personality; interview with selection committee; and participation in college and/or community activities.

The queen will receive a $50 prize. If she is sponsored by a club, it too will receive $50.

Dallas West, a professional Billiards player, will be at Harper Wednesday, Oct. 1 at 11:30 and 12:45 for all interested students, on the third floor of bldg. A. West, a veteran of 17 years of tournament play, has a tournament high run of 100 and out, and a career high run of 128 in practice. He has won such Championships as the 1975 U.S. Open, the National Open two times, and the Midwest Open five times.

Junk foods cause troubles

by Joan Peterson

Now that school is in full swing, and students race quickly from class to class, and from school to work; many of them don't find the time to eat. Certainly they must eat to survive, but it's what they're eating that is frightening.

Wherever there is a candy machine, there too are hungry students on the run. It's so much easier to just grab a candy bar or bag of potato chips than to eat a salad, meat or vegetables.

Unfortunately, many people don't stop to realize how much harm they are doing to themselves. Sugar, which is found in most fast foods, helps cause obesity and tooth decay.

Hard candy, for example, is almost pure sugar. It doesn't do the teeth much good and causes sour breath.

Cold also helps to destroy teeth because it isn't much better because it also contains a lot of sugar. Chocolate also contains the good effect of milk. People who use sugar in their coffee may not realize how much sugar is going into their bodies.

Even yogurt isn't that nutritious if it contains fruit and sugar. The same holds true for canned fruit. The fruit itself is good but the sugar syrup that is found in almost all canned fruits isn't. Why can't producers just leave well enough alone and can fruit in its natural juices?

There are, however, many alternatives to these anti quick snacks. For example, artificial sweeteners can be used in coffee and other foods. Diet sodas may be drunk in place of regular soda. Candy may be eaten instead of chocolate. People may slice fresh fruit into their yogurt instead of buying pre-packaged fruit yogurt. Sugarless gum may be chewed in place of hard candy. To satisfy a sweet tooth, mounds made of honey may be eaten in place of cake or cookies.

Women have it easier than men when it comes to bringing food with them to school. They can carry fresh fruit or vegetables in their purse and eat them between classes. Otherwise, students should find the time to pick up a quick nutritious meal in the cafeteria.

If people are interested in going to college to improve their future by pursuing future wealth, they should be interested in eating right to ensure future health.

GED classes offered

The Adult Basic Education Department is offering a free eight-week session of GED classes for persons preparing for the high school equivalency examination beginning the week of Oct. 8.

Classes in mathematics, English grammar, and reading are available Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings and Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday evenings. Instruction on the United States and Illinois Constitutions is also given in the reading class.

Basic Skills classes in mathematics, English grammar, and reading development will also be offered on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings and on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings for students who have not attended high school or whose skills are below high school level.

Registration will be Monday, 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. in P127. Students should allow one hour for registration and should bring a pencil, their social security number, and one learner plate number.

More information is available at ext. 223.

Data Processing offers scholarship

Data Processing Management Association is offering a scholarship to be awarded to a Harper student.

Candidates must be a third semester student with an overall average of at least 2.5 and at least a 2.5 average in computer data-processing courses already completed.

The candidate must submit a brief (approximately two pages) written presentation covering their interest in the data processing/computer industry.

Deadline for submitting applications is Nov. 1. Applications are available in the Financial Aid Office A304.

Legal Aid

By E.J. DEMSON, J.D.

Intentionally and wrongfully restraining a person from moving about is in law a wrong (tort) for which a person can win damages. This reader's unhappy restaurant experience is an example.

Q. On a trip, I took a friend to a fine Dallas, Tex., restaurant. The bill came to more than I had in my purse, and although my guest offered to add the few dollars she had, we still didn't have enough.

A. I offered a bank credit card which is honored in many places in Texas. When the restaurant refused to accept it, I told the manager I didn't want to embarrass my guest, and that I would return within the hour to pay the balance due. But the restaurant security man appeared and asked me not to leave.

Fortunately, my guest called a friend who came and bailed me out. What does the law say about this amazing lack of courtesy? I have since heard that the restaurant had mistaken me for another person.

A. You may have grounds for both civil and criminal complaint. Texas law says intentional and unlawful restraint against your freedom, if proved, is a tort for which the courts may award both compensatory and punitive damages.

It also may be a crime, if found to be committed against the state as a whole. Your lawyer in Texas, if you decide to prosecute, will advise you about both the civil and criminal actions (32 S.W. 3d 986 Texas).

Q. I am planning a bastardy court action to prove that a man is the father of my child. Can I show my child to the jury so they can see he has many of his father's facial features? My parents want to know about this before they spend their money on a lawyer. We live in New Mexico.

A. Before you file your case, your lawyer will point out to you that the New Mexico Supreme Court recently ruled that a child may properly be exhibited to the jury in a paternity suit.

In that way, jury members may compare similarities and dissimilarities of features and traits of the child and the alleged father.

The court commented that jurors are not likely to become emotionally excited by the child's presence that their sympathies would replace the obligation of their oath. (97 P.3d 727 N.M.).

Football team wins 27-7

by Joe Kunk

It was supposed to be a tough day for the Hawks offense as they faced Thornton's highly touted defense. But the Hawks made it a laughter as they literally ran over the Bulldogs 27-7.

We were preparing our defense for a tough game as we expected to have much more trouble with Thornton's defense," said Head Coach John Eliausk on how his team got ready for what many thought was to be a very close game between the two unbeaten teams.

The Hawks totaled 357 yards, 28 of those rushing. Leading all runners was Dave Rodriguez with 100 yards in twelve carries. Following Dave was Brian Gettelman with 44 yards and Dave Hreslay with 32. Harper quarterback, Neil Schmidt, had a fine day passing as he was seven for eleven totaling 73 yards. On the receiving end of most of those passes was John Gibson who caught five for 38 yards. Most of those points coming in short yardage situations. Mike Jansett made an excellent catch in the corner of the endzone for a 74 yard touchdown.

On defense the Hawks held Thornton to a total of 100 yards rushing and passing. The Hawks pass rush continually stopped Thornton's chances of scoring as they sacked the quarterback for nine and a half sacks. Mike Cusack and Louis Joseph gave the Hawks a definite edge as Cusack was three for four in coverage and Joseph on kick-off's put the Bulldogs deep in their own territory.

The Hawks scored once in each of the four quarters, but the game was more of a rout of Thornton as the score indicates as two Hawk touchdowns were brought back, the result of penalties. One of those touchdowns called back was an 84 yard run by Rodriguez.

If the Hawks win their next two games, coach Eliausk feels they should be in pretty good shape in the conference standings. Their next game is Saturday at Illinois Valley at 7:30 p.m. The Hawk's next home game is Homecoming vs. Joliet, Oct. 14 and starts at 1:30 p.m.

A strong pass rush is one of the reasons the Hawks are having one of their best seasons ever. Coming in on the pass unit is 14 Paul Pasangila, 14 Frank Wierchke, and 14 Tom Nelson. The Hawk pass rush was one of the major factors in the win over Thornton 27-7, as they sacked the Thornton quarterback for nine and a half sacks. (photo by Mike Wray)

Faculty members run Daley Marathon

by Joe Kunk

Most teachers go home after class and think up new ways to fail students, right?

Wrong, some of Harper's faculty actually partake in physical activity. Two of these in fact, Dr. Roger Muszell and professor John Thompson took part in probably the hardest one of all the Harper Daley Marathon in which over 10,000 runners participated.

Even though neither set any records both did finish with respectable times. Dr. Muszell's goal was to run in 4 hours and 30 minutes, but he finished at 4:42.

The late starting time and the heat were factors, an many runners complained of the starting time being pushed from 6 to 10:30 a.m.," said Dr. Muszell. He also said the spirit of the crowd gave him the extra push to finish and that three boys encouraged him along the way and greeted him when he finished.

Muszell said he did not change his diet before the race as many runners do by eating much protein and then the night before loading up on carbohydrates. The only thing he did change was his training as he upped his total running mileage every couple of weeks going from 30 in 40 to 60 miles a week.

"I was shooting for two minutes a mile but with the heat I walked two and a half miles and that last one 30 minutes," commented Muszell on his strategy for the race.

"It's definitely a people's race, the start was just fantastic. It lasted for about seven to eight minutes. It was very well done, well organized. The first half gone down Michigan avenue was really pleasant the second half scenery was kind of drab," was Muszell's opinion of the race. Muszell began running long distance because "It gives me peace and tranquility, sometimes it's good to empty the mind and let the body take over."

"Good experience, I tremendously enjoyed it," was the response given by Biology Professor John Thompson on his feeling of the race. Thompson had been up to 30 miles a week until a stress fracture in his foot curtailed his running for a while. He then worked his way back to twelve and ran ten miles the Friday before the race.

"I went to a workshop Saturday before the race and heard all these runners talking about how they ran 130 miles a week, and started to get psyched out about running it. Now

I realize if I hadn't I'd be kicking myself." Thompson ran the 26 miles in 6 hours and 25 minutes and after he finished had to walk about four more miles to find his family.

"I want to do it again next year. With some work there should be no excuse for running over four hours," added Thompson.

Thompson started running last year and in his words is "hooked." "To me it is the only sport, and I'm disgusted for not discovering it earlier. It's the greatest."

Both men have good feelings about the race and look for them next year with about 10,000 others.

Harper fans cheer for Margaret Bellmer, Jim Collins, and Vicky Schiller watch as the Hawks roll over another opponent. The Hawks travel to Illinois Valley this Saturday, and next week play Joliet in the Homecoming game. REMINDERS: Women's Tennis at Educators still deciding on court meaning

by David Arbaug

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Tim Bradley of the American Society for Engineering Education only shakes his head and says, "Nobody knows. They're all wondering."

That, in a nutshell, is the "confusion" that has developed among education lobbyists here in the four months since the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that 28-year-old Allan P. Bakke was illegally denied admission to the University of California-Davis medical school because he is white.

The court also ruled that the school's admission policy, which reserved 16 seats in a class of 100 for minority students, was unconstitutional. Yet it was the court's third ruling — that colleges may consider race as a factor under some circumstances — that generated the kind of confused Bradley noted.

For admissions officers are trying to determine what those "circumstances" might be. Their task is not made easier by the court's split opinion on the issue. Only five of the nine justices concurred in the "special circumstances" opinion, and there was considerable dispute among those five over what constitutes an acceptable race-conscious program.

As a result, the academic community is hesitantly running off to various conferences to see if it can concoct an acceptable affirmative action program on its own. Professional organizations like the American Council of Education and the National Assessment of Educational Progress, as well as schools from the University of Maryland to Mount Marcy College in South Dakota, have already scheduled Bakke conferences this fall. Other groups, like the American Association for Higher Education, have rushed opinion booklets into print that catalogue admissions policy adjustments in the Bakke decision's wake.

The adjustments to date seem to be an empty consensus, among the consensus' main points:

- That any admissions program that uses racial considerations in any way will probably be viewed by the courts as "inherently suspect," and thus be subject to review.

- That all schools are going to have to review their current policies, are probably going to have to re-draw them to explicitly reflect the school's stated academic objectives.

- That colleges will, nonetheless, retain broad discretionary powers in tailoring their admissions programs to their own goals, including the goal of increased minority enrollment.

The court itself was clear only on the first point of the consensus. On the second point, the court said schools can consider race as one element of an applicant's character, and thus his admitability. Yet it added that to give an applicant special treatment only because of his or her race would violate the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment.

Specifically, the court decided that Allan Bakke had been denied an equal opportunity to compete for one of the 16 medical school seats

Davis had reserved for minority students. Minority students, though, were eligible for all 100 seats in the class. Bakke and all other whites were only eligible for 84.

Justice Brennan wrote at some length on the third point of the consensus, that colleges should retain control over their own admissions programs, and that "more minority students" is a worthy program goal.

But he found — and the post-Bakke consensus has tended to concur — that schools will need to take a good, hard look at how they admit students. Minimally, the standards that are emerging would require schools to publicly declare their admissions policies and to se-

Loan fraud scandal unveiled

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano told a congressional subcommittee this summer there were 300,000 former college students who had not yet repaid their federally-insured loans. But Califano swore he'd get them to repay. Now the first results of Califano's collection programs have been released, and the program seems to be working.

Last year, for example, HEW caught an average of 170 defaulters on three loan programs — the Guaranteed Student Loan, the National Direct Student Loan, and Health Education Assistance Loans — each week.

This year, Califano reports HEW is converting defaults to repayments at a rate of 1,200 per week.

The increase is largely due to an expanded federal collection staff. This month, when two of HEW's ten regional offices begin some professional collection agencies, the rate of conversion should increase even more.

Credit is also due to Project Cross-Check, a program which uses computers to match HEW's list of defaulters with the social security numbers of government employees. In its last phase, the project turned up over 300 HEW employees who had not yet repaid their federally-insured student loans.

The second phase, which is under way now, will be checking out all federal employees HEW estimates some 15,000 percent could be involved.

In its third and final phase, Project Cross-Check will look for defaulters in the ranks of the military.

But that's not all. Bob Wilson of HEW's Inspector General's office, says the agency will soon be mounting an intensive hunt for non-federal employees who are in default under the three loan programs. He thinks there may be more than 340,000 defaulters across the nation.

What, then if HEW finds a defaulter who still refuses to pay? In the past, HEW was relatively timid in bringing defaulters to court. From 1973 through Sept. 1977, it referred only some 500 cases to the U.S. Attorney's office. Those days are apparently over. Over 1,500 cases have been referred just since last October.

Board approves new 1978-79 calendar

The recommendation presented to the Harper Board of Trustees to change the 1978-1980 academic calendar was unanimously approved by board members last Thursday.

Calendar changes include beginning one week later and ending one week later. Fall semester will begin Aug. 27 and close on Dec. 22. The spring semester will start on Jan. 15 and conclude May 17. The summer session will be divided into two eight-week terms beginning May 27 and ending Aug. 15.

Additional changes include the cancellation of the Columbus Day holiday. This holiday has been scrapped to meet required criteria as set by law. To be accredited by numerous educational associations, Harper must be open 75 instructional days each semester. Many college officials reported students attending school on Columbus Day to cause the college had to be shut down during the winter because of inclement weather.

Student Activities has vacancy for Fine Arts & Design representative. Contact Student Activities Office. Deadline Oct. 25.

Mikva urges noise control

Recently, U.S. Congressman Abner Mikva urged the city of Chicago to pass an ordinance against noise pollution. The ordinance was a strict but reasonable one fighting the tremendous amount of airplane noise that is encountered daily by the people of the northwest suburbs, and the northwest side of Chicago.

The ordinance, that was introduced by the independent aldermen of the city council, Simpson, Oberman, and Lathrop, puts a ban on noisy aircrafts.

The proposal requires that airlines operating out of O'Hare International Airport reduce the number of takeoffs and landings by jet planes failing to meet the federal noise standards by 20% a year for the next five years. If an airline does not reduce the number of noisy aircraft as required, landing fees will double for all planes from that airline.

The noise from airplanes is so loud that it affects people psychologically and physically. There are at least 400,000 people who suffer from aircraft noise around the O'Hare area alone.

That is 400,000 people who now suffer from nervousness, and jumpiness. These people also have lost some or all of their sense of hearing because of the extreme noise.

On a national level six million people in the United States suffer from aircraft noise pollution.

When you get right down close to the airport in the direct traffic pattern of the jets the situation is the worst. Classes are interrupted because no one can hear over the noise. In the nice weather people can't go outside and have a conversation because they just can't hear.

In order to hold a decent conversation most of the people have to go indoors. Any kind of radio or television reception is virtually impossible because the static problems are so bad. People may as well not even turn their sets and receivers on at all.

Another thing that the ban would accomplish would be the elimination of any possibility of the Supersonic Concorde's landing at O'Hare. Mayor Bilandic has opposed the idea of the incredibly noisy Concorde from coming into Chicago, so the City Council should act out its decision by passing this ordinance.

Do you think that closing Willow Park Center would be a good budget cut? (by Mike Wendes)

Benardite Powers - Yes, the classes held there should be held here because there is a lot of wasted classroom space here at Harper that could be used to hold the classes that are held at Willow Park Center.

Ben Cray and Randy Fritz - No, because Harper would be cutting a valuable service for a lot of adults.

HARBINGER Letters to Editor

McGrath blamed - referendum

Dear Editor,

I was in the cafeteria reading last week's Harbinger (Sept. 18 issue) and I had just turned to the editorial page. On it was a satirical cartoon implying that student apathy had defeated the Sept. 19 referendum. The defeat of this referendum will have a great effect on faculty, students alike, but the blame shouldn't be pointed elsewhere. I feel more right should rest on the shoulders of the president, James McGrath.

President James McGrath should be held responsible for the defeated referendum. It's his first year at Harper, this was probably Mr. McGrath's first confrontation of any major problem. If the referendum had passed, I am assuming that the paper would have given Mr. McGrath full credit for it's passing. However, the referendum didn't pass and the students were blamed for being apathetic.

It is hard to believe that a district, in which there are 382,000 voters, only a little more than 5,000 of them bothered to vote. It is even harder to believe that the school newspaper identifies this as merely student apathy. Whereas, the actual facts show it to be voter apathy.

Both the paper, and Mr. McGrath are less than what I would call an authority figure. I am a firm believer in strong authority at the top, which works its way down, but I don't favor the opposite arrangement. If the paper and Mr. McGrath are to be good leaders, then they both better learn how to tackle their own problems, instead of standing up for each other's mistakes.

I voted.

Kids make library too noisy

Dear Editor,

I have encountered a problem here at Harper which I am sure is going to happen again unless this situation is changed.

My problem is a noisy library! I think that since my tuition dollars, my student activity dollars and all other dollars are going to this school for my education, then I should have a quiet place to study.

A good example of the nonsense, is the importance of students from various high schools in the area. When you bring in eighty students from a high school in an already crowded library and they refuse to be quiet (even when politely requested to do so) that makes me mad. This happened to me today with a group of about six Hershey students. I admit, Harper is a community college, and they have every right to be here. But not unless they shut up! When politely requested to do so.

I think that instructors of high school students and the librarians should work together to keep the noise down. And if they can't be quiet then the students should be told to leave. Harper's library is a place for quiet study not for a community gossip group.

Thanks for letting me have my say.
Sincerely,
Laura Prestella

Generally Speaking..

by Cindy Caravella

It's that time of the year once more. Time to throw out last year's latest fashions and purchase this year's newest ones. According to the really "big" fashion magazines, it's no longer "cool" to wear mini skirts or dresses. The designers have decided to change the styles once more. So don't bother to deposit your next check into your savings account, no, instead deposit it into your checking account. Get ready to spend quite a bundle.

Guys can no longer wear their ties the way they are now wearing them. Instead the style has changed from wide ties to narrow ties. You had you gave away all of the skinny ones you had from last year. Now you've got until Nov. 1 to buy the latest flat cut end of all your skinny-bank neckties because they're outmoded also. Lounge suits are once again leading the parade. Give it, if you would have known that last year, you wouldn't have got them up for dual tags, would you?

It's really not your fault at all. How are you supposed to know what these designers will dream up next? Top name designers keep our heads twisting, our minds working, and our pockets empty.

We've gone through the tube top stage, draw-string stage, waist-high stage, over the waist stage, to the duality under the waist high stage.

The designers brought in the painter's pants, carpenter's pants, farmer pants, so what's next? Factory worker pants? We'd probably all run out to be the first one to purchase a pair. If it were a danger, I'd probably think about it because they make so much money. I'd probably desire a student pants. Now wouldn't that be nice? I'd put several pockets on them for pencils and pens and may or even a place for a notebook or two. To top it all off, I'd put a bookshelf in the seat of the pants.

We've been mysteriously led to believe that we need every style that comes from the minds of those money-crazed, filthy-rich designers. We've been brainwashed to crave every new style. From the tappers on buttons, all the way to pockets that really aren't pockets.

But despite the fact that we really don't want anyone to relieve us of our money, we've been first into stores demanding to see the latest creations from Paris, London, or even the North Pole. That's why those money-mongers stay up late at night, banging their brains against the walls, dreaming up new fashions. Last year the style was "tail and flaring", this year it'll be "crisp and tailored" and before you know it, "smart and sexy". Let's face it, it's true. Colors are constantly changing too. That's the current color, and you're back in the stores to retail your closet. How can you possibly be in fashion when you're wearing quilted-casual pants, snowball a hole or tarpaulin and they are quite clearly not of style? This year it will be fire-brick red, and placement blue that beat the parade.

Why, just one year ago, the "bunny" underwear displayed bold captions and funny slogans. Now those same underwear are considered to be "hole" and "gross". This year we shall be wearing "panties" and they will be beautiful shades of pastel: refrigerated white, skyblue frost, new-silk brown, and antique fudge.

If you're going to be stepping into fashion, step back down because designers are now calling fire-truck heels slippers. Everyone has to purchase a pair of low-flying clips or curb-curb gym shoes. What was "in" last year will make you the butt of all ridicule if you don't take it off now.

We've been through the slits up the side, slits up the front, slits up the back and slits up the side.

We've had ties around the neck, ties around the waist, and the ties that don't even tie at all. We've had the layered look with five or six shirts worn at a time, two or three vests, one or two blazers, and two pairs of pants. We have the socks you wear over your socks, and socks you wear under your socks. These fashions aren't even practical. But then, I've never met a practical designer. These fashions are designed for Siberia deportees, not us!

We've had the baggy look, then came the tight look and now it's the body look, when is it going to stop?

It's about time we took a stand and said "Stop it!" We've had enough, we can't afford this anymore anymore. We must stick up for our own rights, or they'll push us over the edge. We've got to let those designers know that we really don't want to see the latest collection of Paris originals, no stand up and yell it at the top of our lungs. We don't want to be told what to wear! But be careful not to step on your new Mardi Gras designer pants.

HARBINGER Baake decision

plain how the policies help the schools meet their educational goals.

It's also clear that professional education associations are taking an active part in pushing their member schools toward new admissions programs. The emphasis on innovation in education would seem to be necessary if a school was to thoroughly consider an applicant's race within the vague bounds suggested by the court. The associations are asking schools to pattern their programs after Harvard's.

Judith Powell wrote approvingly of the Harvard program in her Baake opinion. Harvard considers a candidate's minority status as one factor in the applicant's favor; among many factors that determine if the candidate is ultimately accepted.

There is one other point on which everyone seems to agree. When evidence of past racial discrimination is proven, courts will not hesitate imposing even drastic measures to remedy the problem.

Otherwise, speculation in all administrators to go on right now. There seems to be agreement that something will have to be done about admissions programs in the near future, but the schools, contemplating an ambiguous court decision, are cautiously waiting to see what other schools will do first.

Pianists present concert workshop

Dallas Weekley and Nancy Arganbright, piano duoists, will appear in concert Thursday in P206 at 12:15 p.m. and will feature works by Schubert, Brahms, Beethoven and Liszt.

Weekley and Arganbright will present a piano workshop on "Techniques for Teaching Four-Hand Literature at Various Levels" from 9:15 to 10:30 a.m. Thursday, Oct. 19 in P-306. Admission is $1 for the public and free for Harper students with their school ID.

For the past several years, Weekley and Arganbright have been successful in concert tours both here and abroad. They have received lavish praise from musicians and critics, and have been called "America's foremost one-piano, four-hand team." According to the Vienna Kurier, "They form an excellent duo which is very well balanced in every respect, and is in command of great musicality and a highly developed technique. They left nothing to be desired." The artists have appeared on radio and television throughout America and Europe.

You're hopelessly in debt and income ground, despite your best efforts, so you are contemplating bankruptcy. But don't expect all your debts to be wiped out by this procedure.

Q: I'm a free-lancer operating from my home as a one-man business. But I'm so deep in debt that I must file for bankruptcy. Will all my debts be canceled? If not, which will I have to pay?

A: Debts that are not discharged in bankruptcy: (a) taxes to federal, state, county or municipality; (b) liability for any money obtained fraudulently; (c) liability for any willful or malicious injury to a person or his property; (d) liability for alimony or non-support of wife or children; (e) any debts you fail to list on the bankruptcy schedule; (f) bankruptcy; (g) (h) (i) (j) (k) (l) (m) HARPER'S CHRISTMAS TOUR
TO CENTRAL AMERICA
Learn about it.
Wed. Oct. 18 - 6:30 p.m.

Slides and Discussion

Before committing yourself to a career, consider a career of commitment.

Maybe that means giving Central American Indians the power of the typewriter...standing up for human rights against a repressive South American government...consoling the widow of a Chicago policeman...providing leadership for a Parish Ambony minority parish. Members of our community do work like this.

Out of our experience with the opportunities open to young people undecided about what to do with their lives, we publish a special newsletter WORD ONE describes the challenges of social action and religion today. It tells what's happening around the country and how good ideas are succeeding. We'll gladly mail it to you free. Send your name and address to WORD ONE, Room 543, 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois 60606. No charge, no obligation. You can always backspace.

Horoscope

By GINA

ARIES: (March 21 to April 19)—Good time to study, catch up on routine work and seek new information. An old friend could reenter your life and you design the feeling you have for each other. Important people on your job will notice you.

Taurus: (April 20 to May 20)—Work tasks could be difficult. Have patience and remember it will be over soon. Take up problems with your boss, but keep your mind on the job. The best way to handle other people's problems is to ignore it.

Gemini: (May 21 to June 20)—Demands on your energy, both at home and on the job, are great—hang in there, you can do it. A financial windfall is possible and be sure you are totally aware of its source. Be frugal when I spend on the wrong things.

Cancer: (June 21 to July 20)—Previous plans can be set in motion with great precision and success. You're riding the crest of the sea—make the most of it. Others are cooperative and all legal matters are favored. Money looks good.

Leo: (July 21 to Aug. 22)—Don't borrow trouble by hearing what others may think or do. Stay true to yourself and go your own way. Keep up your personal appearance. Buy new jewelry and jewelry items to enhance your favorable mood.

Virgo: (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)—Accept an on social interchanges and you accomplish the most with gracefulness. Avoid being lonely; be willing to talk it over and you get the approval you're after. Curb feelings of real love discontent.

Libra: (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)—Accents in on relationships with others. Curb feelings of personal power and be considerate of other's needs. Think it over carefully before lending money, to an overoptimistic friend or such as in "off" society.

Scorpio: (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)—Work routine may seem dull and uneventful. Compensate by assuming yourself during leisure times with habits and play-time activities. A dramatic change in your appearance and grooming could lift your spirits.

Sagittarius: (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)—Accents in on social life and more on work and home matters. Meet your responsibilities in both areas. A short temper could cause you problems to channel your energy into mental or physical centers.

Capricorn: (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)—Be a welcome change to travel and visit relatives could lift your spirits. Others could contribute greatly to your happiness and use faith in humanity is increased. Not the time to incur more debts.

Aquarius: (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)—Career matters you could assume a knee-dill attitude or be overly optimistic. Neither is to your benefit, so delay important decisions if possible. Seek advice from male and experienced associates.

Pisces: (Feb. 19 to March 20)—Not the time to spend on luxury items—only what you need. Repeat social obligations with telephone calls and short visits. Enhance your intellectual understanding by reading. Take some "mental trips."

Pot can be habit forming

Regular use of marijuana is habit-forming, and may leave the constant user subject to withdrawal symptoms when the drug is cut off, say researchers at the University of California-Davis Francisco Medical Center.

The Center has been investigating for five years the effect of THC, the psychoactive component of marijuana. They've experimented with volunteers who lived in the mad center for three to four weeks during which time they received round-the-clock doses of THC equivalent to the amount contained in five or six joints.

Researchers note that the subjects developed a tolerance to the drug with time, when its initial effects were no longer produced, but, within six to eight hours following the replacement of the THC dose with that of a placebo, all subjects experienced withdrawal effects such as sleeplessness, loss of appetite, and hyperactivity.

Dr. John Harbinger of the Center explained that only the heavy habit —not the social habit—need be concerned with THC's addictive qualities. "It is necessary to keep a constant level of the drug in the blood in order for the body to build up a physical tolerance," said Harbinger, so the smoker who occasionally smokes five or six joints in an evening will not develop these tolerances.

'Goodbye Girl' shown Friday

The movie "The Goodbye Girl" will be shown Friday at 8 p.m. in P.M. Students with activity cards are admitted for 75 cents. One student is allowed per student.

The film, which stars Richard Dreyfuss, Marsha Mason, and Quinn Cummings, won the Academy Award for Best Actor from Dreyfuss' performance. It also has won four Golden Globe Awards.

The "Goodbye Girl," one of Neil Simon's funniest comedies, provides entertainment for all viewers. The film is rated PG. Sponsored by the Program Board.

Hypnotist Garrett performs again

Larry Garrett, a scholar of hypnosis, will appear at Harper on Wednesday at noon in the Lounge. Students will be asked to volunteer in Garrett's act. Garrett's show has been immensely popular in area colleges and high schools, and he has performed before at Harper and has been well received.

Garrett, who founded the Academy of Hypnosis and Parapsychology in Tucson, also teaches hypnosis at Marist and Wright Colleges. Sponsored by the Program Board.

Quick! Can you guess what Harper athletic team is currently undefeated in the NAC conference and has soundly trounced every opponent it's met. Is it A) the team. C) Women's tennis. D) Men's tennis. The team has an overall record of 7 wins, 1 loss, its only loss coming to Wilson College, a four year school. The team has seven freshmen and two sophomores and no one on the team has a losing record.

Members having undefeated slates are #1 singles Cindy Sarna, #5 singles Jenny Jemmer, and the doubles team of Jemmer and Debbie Kuhn. The first and second singles players, Mary Beth Frick and Kris Krueger have only one loss space in junior college play.

Others making much needed contributions to the team's winning ways are Mary Kelley, Suzanne LaGrone, and Tammy McLaughlin.

Football loses

by Jim Burdard

The Harper football team was handed its first loss of the season 49-9 via a strong Illinois Valley team, which prior to the game was tied second in the nation of Junior College while the Hawks were thirteenth in the national ratings.

The Hawks scored first after Paul Panagiotis recovered a fumble and the offense drove down for the score on a 24-yard run by Brian Gettelman. Gettelman also scored from ten yards out later in the first half, while Dave Bolligheimer scored the third touchdown in the first half. That capped off the scoring for the Hawks in the first half and the game.

The Hawk defense could do little against an awesome I.V. running attack which was led by an excellent runner in the form of Jeff Martin who gained 360 yards on the night for I.V.

Defensive standouts for the Hawks were Brian Scott, Jay Lanchester and Mike Inhofe. Offensively the Hawks did well, behind Gettelman (22 yards), good running by Bolligheimer and a fine passing attack by Neil Schmidt and his receivers who tallied up nearly 300 yards.

Coach John Klusack said the team played well but made a few mistakes, in fumbles and not capitalizing on scoring chances. The game was much closer than the score indicated because the Hawks were right in the game in the first half but too many mistakes hurt them.

The Hawk's next home game is Oct. 20 vs Wright.

The Harper football team hopes to bounce back after a disappointing loss to Illinois Valley. The Hawks face Concordia in a non-conference game this week at Concordia. The Hawks play Wright Oct. 20 at home and go on to improve their chances at the NAC title.

Improvements for cross-country

by Joe Kunk

The HW cross-country team has run three invitational meets this season.

"We've been hurt by a lot of minor, nagging injuries, but we've kept improving every time out. Along with the addition of Joe Rizza, who has been out with an injury, should give us a full squad," said Head Coach Bob Nolan.

In the team's first meet, the Danville Invitational, the team didn't count in the team standings because of the number of entries. Leading the Hawks into the chute was freshman Joe Langelier, followed by freshman Jim Lanchester, and Jeff Brydges who was hampered by a cold all week.

The Hawks next meet was the Wabash Invitational as the Hawks finished fifth out of 11 teams. Harper had two runners in the top 20. This time it was Jim Lanchester being the first runner for the Hawks, right behind was Jeff Brydges, 20 seconds behind Jeff was Joe Langelier, who was followed by Tom Hommonan and Mark White respectively.

Harper then travelled to the Hader Invitational sponsored by Oakton College where the Hawks were defending champs. "We ran much better, we showed much improvement with this meet," said Coach Nolan as his team was fifth out of 11 teams in their division. The Hawks had a good pack as the top five runners were separated by only 46 seconds. Top runner for Harper was Brydges who finished twelfth with a time of 21:10 for 4 miles. Right on his tail was Lanchester who was only four seconds behind at 21:14 in finishing fifth. Closely pursuing those two were Langelier at 21:25 in 25th and Joe Rizza 21:30 in 28th place. "Joe ran Nolan on Rizza's performance. Behind Rizza was Hommonan and White at 43rd and 48th.

"We have our hands full to represent at conference champs with only one returning letterman, we can't afford any injuries. I'm still optimistic we can be competitive in the conference," commented coach Nolan on his team's chances in the NAC conference meet on Nov. 4.

The team's next meet is the DuPage Invitational which features some of the top junior college runners in the Midwest as the meet attracts teams from Missouri, Kansas, Indiana, Michigan, and Minnesota.

Tuition tax cut ready for Carter

WASHINGTON, D.C.—After 18 years of false starts and another eight months of tortuous political wrangling, Congress has finally passed legislation to provide tuition aid to middle income families. President Carter has, however, threatened to veto the tuition tax credit bill, which is coming to his desk as part of a larger, $50.3 billion tax cut bill.

President Carter officially stated his opposition to tuition tax credits in a letter to congressional leaders last February. He called the idea wasteful and one that would be helpful to middle income families trying to cope with the rising costs of higher education.

But in a last-minute move Sen. Robert Packwood (R-Ore.) tacked tuition tax credits onto the larger tax cut bill as a means of making it "vote proof." The hope was that the president would be reluctant to veto tax cuts in this election year and age of "tax revolts." The Senate passed the bill containing tuition tax cuts by a 94-6 margin, more than enough to override a Carter veto.

A spokesman in U.S. Rep. John Mica's Washington D.C. office said Carter is expected to sign the bill, including the tuition tax cut bill, by the end of the President's term and is expected to be signed within 30 days.

The Senate has approved tuition tax credits seven times since 1960, but this year was the first time the House has passed them.

The current bill would allow people to subtract 35 percent of college tuition costs from their federal income taxes, as long as it's not more than $100 in 1978, $150 in 1979, and $200 in 1980. After Jan. 1, 1980, part-time students enrolled in college at least four months out of the year would also be eligible for the tax credit.

Virtually every major education association has joined President Carter in his opposition to tuition tax credits. W. Glenn Turnell, president of Washington State University and one of the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges, and the funds over such a broad population that it will have little impact on the relief sought by middle-income families.

Turnell and others have instead endorsed President Carter's alternative relief measure, later dubbed the Middle-Income Assistance Plan. It would add $1.2 billion to the $4 billion in aid available under the Basic Educational Opportunity Grants, Guaranteed Student Loan, and Work-Study programs. It would also, among other things, make dependents of families earning more than $10,000 eligible for work-study programs for the first time. Moreover, it would increase average grants to children of families earning between $6,000 and $16,000 a year by $200.

Though Congress considered other relief measures this session—States University President John Silber's "Tuition Advance Fund" (not widely discussed before being buried in committee—the big fight has been between tuition tax credits and the Carter plan.

Public opinion has been a rather fickle guide in determining the fight's outcome. Polls have been clear only on one point: that the middle class seems to want some higher education relief to cope with rising college costs. The National Center on Educational Statistics estimated that this year the average costs at public colleges is $2,000, $5,000 at typical private schools, and $8,000 at some of the higher private universities.

Since 1967, costs of public education have gone up 74.5 percent, while private education costs have risen 74.8 percent.

But if the middle class agreed help was needed, it has changed its mind about what kind of help it wanted.

In April, a "New York Times-CBS" survey suggested that 83 percent of the American public wanted tuition tax credits, while a Gallup Poll estimated that 81 percent wanted them, and 34 percent favored Carter's Middle Income Assistance Plan.

In August, though, the Harper Poll found that 34 percent still favored the Carter plan, but that tuition tax credits' popularity had waned. Twenty percent of the respondents were for direct aid to colleges to help keep their costs down, 18 percent favored no additional aid at all, 19 percent wanted a $200 credit for families earning less than $25,000 and only a percent favored the tax credit plan then being debated in Congress.

Then the College Entrance Examination Board (CEEB) added to the confusion with a study disputing the need for any tuition aid at all. It contradicted an earlier report (later amended in the CEEB report's wake) and said that family income had risen faster than college costs since 1967. Many observers thus inferred that the middle class was still capable of paying for a college education, but that it was simply less willing to do so.

The conflicting surveys and reports only intensified the congressional debate through the summer. The president's plan, though, seemed to be picking up momentum even as House Rules Committee Chairman James Delaney (D-N.Y.), a supporter of tuition tax credits, refused to let it out of committee to be debated by the full House. After a call from President Carter, Delaney finally let the bill through in time for adjournment.

Last December, another tuition relief measure was attached to the Social Security reform bill. When House and Senate conferees could not agree on tuition relief, the Senate ultimately dropped the relief to allow the reform bill to pass.

Governor James R. Thompson has approved a $100 increase in the state's maximum scholarship grant for Illinois college students.

The Governor's action in approving House Bill 2963 boosts the maximum award from $1,500 to $1,600 for eligible students who receive the scholarship grants from the Illinois State Scholarship Commission, effective immediately.

"Those who will benefit from this increase are students attending private colleges and universities, because tuition and fees at our public institutions are below the old maximum," Thompson said.

"These grants are based entirely on the financial need of students who are Illinois residents so it helps those who need help the most," the Governor said. "The grants are aimed at giving all students a choice among our colleges and universities."

Total cost of the $100 increase will be $2.7 million for about 65,000 students who can qualify for the grant. Part-time students may qualify for half the maximum grant award for full-time students, or $75.

The funds are included in the Board of Higher Education's allocation of the Governor's Fiscal 1979 budget.

Sponsors of House Bill 2963 are Representative Michael J. Brady, Chicago, and Senator Leroy W. Lemke, Chicago.

Management course begins

Management and maintenance of the hospitality industry will be the focus of two new courses offered here beginning Jan. 15.

"Hospitality Law and Risk Management" will survey the legal system as applied to the hospitality industry. Students will examine contracts, torts, and various labor laws pertinent to the industry. Cost of insurance covering fire, accident, workmen's compensation, and employee liability will be analyzed. The course carries four degree credits and will be offered on Mondays from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m.

"Hospitality Facility Maintenance," scheduled for Wednesdays from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m., focuses on the organization, duties and administration of restaurant and helping facility maintenance departments. Care and maintenance techniques and purchasing of furniture, carpeting, linens, and supplies will be discussed. The course carries three degree credits.

Further information on these and other food service management courses is available at ext. 578.

Flu vaccine to be given

Health Service has a limited amount of the vaccine available at a cost of $1.50 as a first dose. First serve basis for all Harper students and employees. Persons requesting the injection should go to C20 during the hours 9:30 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, and Saturday mornings from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.

Each person requesting a flu inoculation will be asked to sign a waiver releasing Harper College from responsibility for the inoculation or any reaction to it.

The repairs being made on A-16, continue. As this worker is up to his shoulders in dirt, the other one scurges the gravel from the pavement behind him.

Local band visits Harper

As part of Harper's Homecoming activities, Muddy Waters appeared with the Jim Schwall band at Harper on Oct. 13. The concert went well and was a success until after the concert when the student activities advisor along with several students from the Program Board went into the dressing room provided for the Jim Schwall Band.

Apparently the drummer in the band was upset with Schwall and didn't want to perform at all that night at Harper. If he canceled, the whole band would have to cancel, so Schwall forced or strongly encouraged that he play with the group. The concert did go on, but the drummer was very angry. After the concert he proceeded to throw ashtrays and cake around the room. The cake was ground into the carpet and smudged onto the walls all over the band's dressing room.

Whenever special guests come to Harper to give concerts or presentations a "dressing room" is provided by the Program Board. They do their best to make the personality feel at home by putting up posters, baking a "Welcome to Harper" cake and providing the guests with anything they may need while they are at Harper. After this incident some of the people were very disappointed because after all the efforts they put forth it appeared that they weren't even appreciated.

It turned out that the band's agent called and gave an apology and said they would pay for the clean-up of the room. Jim Schwall, himself, apologized and said it was only the drummer who made the mess and disrupted the room, not the whole band.

Schwall deserves a personal thanks for doing what he did, which was preserve his group, so he would not have to cancel their engagement. Harper would have been in a real bind if the show had to be cancelled, they would have had to return money to everyone and the whole evening would have been ruined.

On the other hand, what kind of image is this for people to look up to? There are those who look up to rock stars, T.V. stars and movie stars, etc. The people in these positions must realize this and when they act in unbelievable ways they are in a sense saying to their followers, "You act this way too, in this situation. People who do idolize certain 'stars' do exactly what they do and try to be exactly like them. Whatever their idol does is what they should do, in most of their minds. This could create a society of destructive people if 'stars' continue to act in the spoiled brat fashion they are now.

People who do hold positions of public esteem had better learn how to behave in the public eye or they will be largely responsible for the society of the future, which they will have a large part in creating.

'Focus on future' continues

"Focus on the Future," a displaced homemakers program, opened its doors at Harper last May. The program is designed to assist women, whose job has primarily been as homemakers and now find, due to divorce or widowhood, that they must enter or re-enter the labor market. They find themselves at a point of low self-esteem and self-confidence. They often need help in redirecting their lives, in redefining themselves personally to get and hold a job, and in learning the process of the job search itself.

The program's purpose is to assist women in this transition toward independence. Participants attend the center six weeks in a comprehensive program, accommodating up to thirty women.

Since May 13, 114 women have completed the program currently 30 women are participants, and new groups will start Oct. 30 and

Nov. 27. During the program, the women are involved in personal growth sessions, informational seminars, interest and skills assessment, and career exploration and guidance sessions. Upon readiness, the job placement specialists assist participants in implementing the job search process until they find satisfactory employment.

In the five months of existence, "Focus on the Future" has had notable success with participants in the areas of confidence-building, career decision-making and career planning, and successful job placement. Participants have been unanimous in their appreciation and positive response to the total program.

"Focus on the Future" is a program funded under Title one of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act and administered locally by the Cook County Office of Manpower.

(By Mike Wendes)

Karen Remick

They should expand it to outside broadcasting like Trish does or from a bar where there is a live band.

Greg Biran

I like the type of music they play because it relates to the college student's level of listening. Also, it gives the students who D.J. a chance to get some broadcasting time so they will have more experience when they get out of school and start looking for a job.

Tutoring available

The president of a local company is taking a business trip to France and needs a tutor. Another company making commercials in five languages needs tutors to translate the announcements. A suburban parent needs tutors for her elementary and high school age children.

Where can these diverse needs be answered? During the past year there have been several tutors through the Harper College Tutoring Center.

The tutoring program was started five years ago to serve the needs of Harper students. Last year the center recorded nearly 5,000 student contacts in thirty-three subject areas. In 1977 tutoring coordinator A'Rham O'Donnell expanded the program to serve community residents and industry. Within one year we have served more than seventy people. As our list of paid and volunteer tutors increases we will be able to serve a larger number of community members," said O'Donnell. Additional information on tutoring services and later registration procedures can be obtained from The Tutoring Center ext. 518.

Concert Review

UFO rocks crowd

An interesting battle took place last Friday night. No, it wasn't the World Series or another Spunk-All talker. What it was could be termed man vs. beast or more specifically the English rock band UFO against the acoustically horrible International Amphitheatre. This time man was the victor.

The house was no more than three quarters full, but very lively. Two warmup bands played and could barely finish their sets because of the noise. It was UFO crowd all the way and they would settle for no one else. This band from England is very hot on the American market these days and has an extremely large following in the Midwest. They're one of those groups referred to as an overnight success. If you consider seven years and five albums "overnight." A mere fair description would be a very talented rock group finally getting the recognition they deserve.

Which is a pleasant change in a time when talentless groups such as Kiss control the market.

In Chicago for their fourth time, only a year ago they played Regency (in Schaumburg). UFO took the stage with vigor. Opening up with four hard rockers, three of the new "Blasphemy" album and one oldie off of "Force it", they really put the crowd on it's feet. Next they surprised quite a few people by playing their classic "Love to Love" so early in the show. This was the first of only three times they were to play off their multi-album "Lights Out" album at any age.

As I mentioned earlier, the sound at the Amphitheatre is probably the worst of any concert hall in Chicago, and that includes the Aragon, which is a close second. UFO was at constant war with the room throughout the show. At times vocal lines would become drowned out by the rhythm section and guitar riffs would become undistinguishable. But this didn't seem to phase UFO who built a momentum with each song they played. The one man who made the big difference in the band's performance was their German-born guitarist, Michael Schenker. The crispness and precision of his leads were incredibly consistent all night. Since young vocalist Phil Mogg, bassist Pete Way, and drummer Andy Parker in 1973, Schenker has been the determining factor in UFO's rise to the top. Clearly the standout, in a group of excellent musicians, Mogg is considered peerless by many when it comes to hard rock lead guitar playing.

After a solid hour of non-stop rock 'n' roll, after the intensity of "Lights Out" and "Doctor Doctor" after the band's jam on "Rock Bottom", UFO departed the stage. They were gone for no more than five seconds when the face chart of U-F-O lured them back to do their biggest commercial hit to date "Too Hot to Handle". In my opinion this was a very fitting encore because UFO was definitely too hot to handle.

The comedy team of Edmonds & Curley will be performing Tuesday, Oct. 24, 11 a.m. and 12 p.m., in the College Center Lounge. Edmonds & Curley have appeared at over 100 colleges in 46 states and Canada. They have made appearances on the Tonight Show, Mike Douglas, Merv Griffin, Saturday Night Live, and various PBS Specials. Often when at colleges, their comedy focuses on campus topics such as food service, security, parking and freshmen orientation. Edmonds & Curley feel at home with students. They prefer colleges because they feel that students are more imaginative. Admission is free to both performances sponsored by the Program Board.

Many students in the audience last Wednesday were anxious to be hypnotized by the well-known hypnotist, Larry Garret. Once he selected his many volunteers Garret proceeded to instruct them to relax. Within moments he had the students in a trance-like state. He then went on to demonstrate the powers of hypnosis. Some of the demonstrations included, making the students forget their names, including hand-made objects, and making a mad rush for an imaginary jacket. The event drew a large crowd that flowed from the lounge out through the halls. Most of the students said they were anxiously waiting his return next year.

John and Anna McGrouse will perform in a free joint clarinet-piano recital Nov. 2 at 12:15 p.m. in the final concert of the fall semester afternoon mini-concert series in 1978.

The program will consist of works by Brahms, Beethoven, Debussy, and Berlioz.

The McGrouses, who have presented joint clarinet-piano recitals for many years, concentrate on non-avant-garde contemporary idioms and the chamber music of Brahms. Before their careers joined at the University of Texas, Mrs. McGrouse studied at Texas Women's University and Indiana University and had extensive private study in New York. Her teaching credentials include positions at the University of Texas, Illinois Wesleyan University and the University of Denver. McGrouse studied at Eastman School of Music and did advanced work at Northwestern University and the Paris Conservatory. Her husband, John, studied at the University of Texas and Colorado University. He is now associate professor of music at Illinois Wesleyan University.

Harper's spring semester mini-concert series will feature the Gerhart Early Music Ensemble, Tony Carmina, jazz pianist, the Somerville Woodwind Quintet, and the Whetson Chamber Artists. For additional information students may call ext. 342.

Harper hosts Community Resource forum

A two-part forum on the types and number of area-wide social service agencies will be at Harper this Wednesday and Wednesday. The forum is from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. Co-sponsored by Harper and the Northwest Suburban Council for Community Services, the forum will feature representatives from 21 agencies in the areas of family services, financial aid, resources, health related services and comprehensive mental health. In addition to a general question and answer period, agency representatives will be available to answer individual questions of forum participants. For additional information or registration forms students may call ext. 374.

Horoscope

by Osa

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Moderate your emotions to prevent temper displays and impulse. Short trips are possible. Nervous tension, high energy and a busy schedule could lead you into scattering your energies. Try to calm down.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20): Organize your thoughts and goals. Stop wasting time, money and effort on second best things. You are starting a new cycle; take it seriously. Something from the past cycle may be lost but will later be restored.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20): Social life does not interest you just now but you should make an effort to be friendly, some if you could be torturing over a decision to marry. Be honest and forthright in your own beliefs. Don't give a weak impression.

CANCER (June 21 to July 21): A week of accomplishment when you are actively involved with others. Guard against over-optimism, and don't go out on a limb financially. Use your creativity. Not the time to loan money or co-sign for another.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 22): Show down a little and watch your health. Your need to do your own thing could make you lose caring for the needs of others as may result in errors in judgement. Curb over-enthusiasm and be realistic.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22): More time and energy are required before projects in process are ready to pay off. Use your ingenuity and energy to find an original approach. Curb impatience. Good time to ask for a raise if you have earned it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Extra money could be well spent on some type of hobby equipment. New people you meet now may not make a big impression on you at first but turn out to be valuable friends. Take stock of your goals and dreams.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Long-range goals are nearing completion. Hang in there and work toward them. Pay attention to details, be prompt in keeping appointments and keep career decisions on a high, rational level. Go to a party if asked.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Extend your efforts toward a cooperative, group-goal. Be open to others and their views. A friend can give you insight on a job matter hidden. Set aside fears and operate with poise and dignity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19): New people you meet now can make you feel comfortable and at ease. Direct your energy to both career and social life—enjoy being on the go. Use wisdom in spending money now. Don't splurge.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18): All signals are go in career and professional matters, so give it all you've got. Resist tendency toward overly forceful attitudes—let your performance and record speak for itself. Be tactful and pleasant.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20): You're in high spirits now and feeling much more independent. Good time to entertain at home or attend leisure-time events.

Wallet can cause backaches

Although an overloaded wallet is a problem most college students would love to have, a New Jersey doctor has determined that thick, heavy wallets can cause health problems.

Dr. Elmer Lutz has treated several patients who suffered from back problems through a very unusual surgical procedure. He removes their wallets, and they get better.

Lutz's treatment method, which eliminates many costly x-rays and tests, involves having the patient carry his wallet in a different pocket to see if the pain is alleviated. Usually, if the wallet is the cause of the patient's problem, the pain clears up quickly.

Dr. Lutz stated in the Journal of the American Medical Association that this treatment cured a man who had suffered from hip problems for 14 months.

Another man, who had back pain for 8 years, was also cured when his inch thick wallet was carried in his jacket pocket.

Most of the wallet related back problems are caused by many credit cards and other papers which give the wallet thickness and weight. Also people with occupations that allow them to sit during much of the day are susceptible to the problem.

The next time you have a backache, check your wallet before you go to the doctor.

Everyone has played a game sometime in his life. There are simply countless numbers of games available to purchase, but those old conventional games can get pretty boring after a while. Games can be more fun if you make them up yourself.

My game is called Supermarket Frenzy. You won't have to purchase a board, you won't need to throw any dice, and you won't have to spin any wheels either. Just get in your car and let's go to the store.

The rules are quite simple. Be as rude as you can, as pushy as you can, and try to get something for nothing. The first thing you must remember is how to park your car. Try to get the space up front, reserved for handicapped people. Who is gonna know your legs are functioning these days? You park that bulky sideways, taking up at least two or three parking spaces that some poor cripple could be using. Score! Two points for you.

Entering the store through those magical doors can be entertaining also. Try blocking young children from entering before you. Your job will be to injure all those who come within two inches of your feet. Step on the backs of their heels, throwing them off balance and into a pile of slush.

Once inside the store, grab a cart. Not just any cart. Take the one from the middle of the bunch. Check to see if the wheels are rolling freely enough to pop wheels as you continue your game. Now you're ready to roll!

Your first objective will be to order enough luncheon for the next five weeks, and then throw half of it by the magazine rack. Approach the counter at the speed of sound, grabbing the sides of the cart to leave Genella bread. The bread is all over the floor. You call a stock boy to clean up the mess. Two points! The game is really in your blood now.

You notice several people approaching the counter to get a number to be waited on. Throw the cart into reverse, and knock over the short blind in the purple sundress. Alright! Two points! Now you're first in line. Grab that number. Ask for 1/4 pound of salami, but it must come from the middle of the stack. Get 1/4 pound of bologna, sliced ham, brawward, boiled ham, and bread cheese. Just before the girl adds it up, ask for a quart of Italian olive, easy on the juice. If you've inconvenienced her in any way, you scored another two points. Here comes the fun part. Dump the luncheon in between the pages of the "Modern Needlepoint" and "Karaté Man." Make sure that nobody notices you doing this part of the game. Alright! Two points.

Next stop, bread aisle. Your job will be to find the freshest loaf in the store. Begin to squeal every single loaf. To do this, exert a little pressure with the thumb and index finger against the sides of each loaf. When your fingers come out the other end and the plastic, you know that it was a fresh loaf, and you also know that you would never buy anything in that condition. Pick one that no one has squealed. Gently place it into your cart. Two points!

The check-out line is where you can really score some big points. Get into the line reserved for right items or less. If the cashier tells you to move, just tell her that your mother is dying in the hospital and you've got to get gone. She believes you? Four points! Try to hide the pop bottles under the cart. As the cashier turns to package the groceries, rip-off a couple packages of breath mints.

Remember to lean over her the entire time she is ringing up your goods. Distract her as maybe she'll forget to notice that slab of barker Twinkies, scream in her face. They're on sale, two for $1. Try to make her cry or call for the manager. If you can do this, collect an extra two points.

On your way out, grab a couple dozen frozen bags because they come so handy. That's another two points for you. The game is almost over, but not until you stuff your face with the supplies of cheese and crackers.

Push your way through those poor people down as fast as you can. Go through the parking lot yelling, "Move it or lose it!" After you deposited all your groceries into your car, let the basket go flying down hill and watch it hit the yellow Lincoln Continental. That's another eight points! You're ready on your way.

Get into the car. Oh my God! There's a smash in the driver's side door! wasn't there when you first started this game. We sure took half of the points you have earned thus far. You lose!

School discloses hidden cafe

by Elizabeth Rock

Where can faculty, staff, visitors and students have a buffet style lunch in campus? In Bldg. A tucked in a corner of the second floor, that's where.

The Dining Room, open from 11 a.m. to 12 p.m., when school is in session, is run by the college and is not served by a private catering organization. The facility is opened to everyone and according to Betty Lewis, in charge of the dining room, it is pretty evenly used by everyone. "The student side, though, has been growing lately." The prices in the dining room are only slightly higher than in the catereria because "you pay a little more for service," said Mrs. Lewis.

Even though the dining room may be hard to find, inside one will find cushioned chairs and bright table cloths which invite a "near capacity" luncheon crowd of faculty and students every lunch hour.

Center aids students

Where can a student or graduate of Harper go for help in transferring to a four-year school or applying for a job? Not the bookstore for the want-of section of the newspaper, but the Placement and Career Development Center located in F-118, where Mr. Fred Vaisril and Ms. Barbara Majors will help students with problems of looking for information on any occupation.

"We show students how to prepare resumes, talk to classes on how to look for a certain occupation to tell if that occupation is right for them, and how to use all the different resources available," said Vaisril on just a few of the things the center does.

The center works with counselors and program coordinators on what jobs are opening up in what fields. Many businesses come to the center, or go on campus and actually recruit people said Vaisril.

The center has material on almost any four-year school in the nation on microfilm and has jobs listed ranging from unskilled, to the most highly technical.

The placement center has many areas to help students in choosing a school to transfer to and one of them is the College Entrance Vantage. It can tell students exactly the colleges that fit their specifications. "The student picks his or her field of study, the region where he or she wants to go to school, enrollment size, tuition cost, type, as in co-educational, and if the school is private or state run," explained Vaisril about how the viewpoint operates. All the information is on large cards and is relatively simple to use.

For looking for jobs the center contains the Dictionary of Occupational Titles (D.O.T.). To find information on any occupation the student is interested in, the student looks it up in the D.O.T. and finds its D.O.T. number. The student then looks on the microfilm cards.

The card tells the student type of job, with a brief description, type of degree needed if any, salary, and experience needed if any. The cards individually contain about 1,000 different occupations and the center receives approximately 15 new cards a week from the Illinois Department of Labor. The center then has some of the necessary forms students need to fill out the job.

The center works with the faculty in the different fields on information on their fields as number of graduates, skills needed, and who are the biggest employers of the Harper people from that program.

"Also at the center we have a video cassette on resume writing, and on another cassette we meet in personnel department heads in business firms and asked what they look for in a person during an interview," said Vaisril on the audio-visual aspect of the center.

The center puts out weekly the Employment Opportunity Bulletin which lists some part and full-time jobs in the area. The bulletin is free to students.

Another source of information on microfilm available to students who also can get copies made, is complete catalogs from colleges throughout the nation.

"We can put students in contact with almost any school in any state for placement, this is one of our more successful areas," Vaisril said. How the center can help students who plan to transfer to other schools.

The center also contains a wealth of information on Civil Service jobs for both state and federal. The center has data on civil service exams of all levels.

The College Placement Manual, a booklet in the center has occupational and geographical listings of jobs. The booklet explains what kind of job it is and the type of degree needed. It also contains samples of resumes, questions one might be asked and other general information on all types of occupations.

All of this is free to students or graduates of Harper and they are encouraged to take full advantage of this service which could help them the rest of their life.

Lecture here

Mr. Richard L. Leary, Curator of Geology of the Illinois State Museum in Springfield will present a slide/lecture in the Geology Club and the public Oct. 27 at 7:30 p.m. in D138.

He will discuss the various types of plant fossils he has recovered from a limestone quarry near Rock Island, Ill. over the past several years. The lecture will be highlighted by his proposed reconstruction of what Illinois looked like 300 million years ago based on his research of the fossil record.

Leary is considered one of the leading paleobotanists in the United States who specializes in the study of "Coal-Age" plants.

Last October, Leary with the aid of students from the Geology Club, discovered a fossilized ecosystem which later proved to be an entirely different species from those previously known.

Legal Aid

by E.J. Demson, J.D.

Q. We have heard about our lawyer's conduct outside the courtroom. We have been seeking a $25,000 settlement, but this lawyer said in a last vote with the opposing lawyers listening that we had a weak case and should accept $2,000.

A. We had to settle for $2,000, and we had to pay this lawyer fees of that. Moreover, we can't get the case files (which were prepared by our previous lawyer) back from this man. What can we do?

A. The Code of Professional Responsibility of the American Bar Association (EC Sec. 7-96) says a lawyer representing a party in a contested action "should not engage in any conduct before or after a trial that offends the dignity and decorum of the proceedings."

It also says (DR Sec. 3-110(A)(2)) that a lawyer, having been compensated, is required "to deliver to the client all the papers and property to which the client is entitled."

Q. We loaned a sizeable sum of money and received a note which is entirely secured by a real estate mortgage. This real property is in the state of Washington.

We're worried that the property may not bring enough to cover our note. If it doesn't, do we have recourse from the mortgagor to recover the rest of what is due to us?

A. Yes, you do. The court will direct that any deficit remaining after the property is sold will be satisfied from a deficiency judgment for the amount still due (Code of Wash. Sec. 12.070).

In other words, the borrower still owes the full amount of the note, even though his collateral won't cover it.

Q. I've had a bad experience with a stockbroker. I am 78, and I put my last trust in this man. He advised me to go into some risky stock investments, assuring me that he had up-to-the-minute information and would protect me.

Each time I bought or sold on his advice, he made something commission. But the stocks he bought didn't pay, and now I've lost everything about $15,000.

Can I do anything about this?

A. The law (Am. Jur. 3d, Ref.: Agency (Brokers) Sec. 63-46) says a broker is a fiduciary with respect to matters within the scope of his agency. He is required to exercise the utmost good faith, loyalty and honesty toward his principal.

To recover your losses in court, you would have to prove that your broker failed to exhibit the above-stated qualities in his transactions with your money.

Hawks football regains tie for 1st

Defense is key to win

by Joe Kneek

The Harper football team prepares for their last home game of the season vs. Wright. The Hawks currently have a share of the NAC conference lead on Illinois Valley but while Harper was thumping Joliet 36-7 in the homecoming game. Defense was the key to this victory as they set up almost every Hawk score, and scored themselves as defensive tackle Jay Lushan blocked a Joliet punt and recovered it in the endzone. The Hawks have a tough Wright squad and with a win could clinch a tie in the NAC title race. The Hawks last game is Nov. 2 vs. Kennedy-King at 7:30. (photo by Mike Wenden)

In front of a cold, but enthusiastic homecoming crowd, the Harper football team put itself right back into the NAC conference title race by stomping the Joliet Wolves 36-7.

The defense was the dominant part of the game as they forced many Joliet turnovers to give the offense excellent field position almost every time they got the ball.

Leading the defense in stopping Joliet was Jay Lushan who himself accounted for the defense's touchdown by blocking a Joliet punt and recovering it in the end zone. Also leading the charge were Mike Schell, Paul Pannas, Brian Scott, Frank Warcha, Mike Lawson and Jeff Corrado.

The offense was led by quarterback Neil Schmidt who totaled 52 yards rushing and 78 yards passing. Schmidt, with Brian Getzelman, Devin Heasley, and Jim Varcarelli filled the gap left by running back Dave Bodigheimer who was hurt early in the game. Schmidt scored three touchdowns for the Hawks. Another Hawk who played a major part in the scoring was kicker Mike Cusack who had over a fourth of the Hawks' points. Cusack was perfect for the day as he was four for four in point after touchdowns and hit two field goals of 38 and 32 yards.

The Joliet quarterback (one of many) felt he came to the whole afternoon with them discussing politics and what not in the Joliet backfield.

The Hawks exploded in the second quarter for 24 points as Schmidt scored on runs of eight and 22 yards, Lushan's blocked punt and one of Cusack's field goals.

The Hawks finished off their scoring bite in the third quarter with a one yard run by Schmidt and Cusack's second field goal of the day.

Joliet scored their lone touchdown in the fourth quarter as the Hawks already had the game out of reach.

This win coupled with Illinois Valley's losing now gives Harper a share of the NAC conference lead. Harper has two games remaining vs. Wright and Kennedy-King.

The Hawks play conference opponent Wright this Saturday for Harper's final home game of the season at 1:30 p.m.

In doubles competition, it was all Harper in the finals as Frick and Krueger teamed up to defeat teammates Cindy Barnes and Tammy McCullough. The team outscored all the rest as they won the tournament totaling 18 points, runner up was Oakton with 16.

Also in singles play, Kris Krueger advanced to semi-finals, and Jenny Jeunther and Cindy Barnes made the quarterfinals. The team has had an outstanding season and hopes to continue it at Nationals in Waco, Texas. (photos by Joe Kneek)

Opponents walk off field

by Joe Kneek

"In all my years of coaching, I've never seen anything like it," Harper soccer coach Sander Basho's reaction to Joliet walking off the field after leading 5-1 during a soccer match with the Hawks last Thursday.

The whole controversy centered around a Joliet player kicking the ball inside the 14 yard line with his hands but at the same time that occurred Harper scored 5-0 as the other score counted or the Hawks had a penalty kick, to be the game.

"We were protesting. They were getting tired from our drinking the ball, and had just started arguing for no reason against the penalty, because if the penalty was taken away the goal would count and the game would be tied, and then they started arguing around themselves. It seemed to me Joliet just didn't want to continue," said coach Basho.

This event the team's record is 1-1. The Hawks play again Thursday on the football field at 2 p.m. vs. Trilon.

Harriers run to 7th place

by Joe Kneek

Harper cross-country recently placed seventh out of 17 teams in the tough Milwaukee Invitational held in Milwaukee, Wis. recently.

In the individual results the Hawks' top finisher was Jeff Brydges who placed 11th out of over a 100 runners. He was followed by Jim Lancaster 22nd, Jan Laeger 33rd, Tom Houtmewen 38th, and Joe Hirtz 41st.

The meet was won by Milwaukee Tech, with Wright, a team Harper will face in the NAC conference meet, finishing second.

"We had a pretty good performance, but we're hoping to meet our fourth and fifth runs closer to our top three," said Head Coach Bob Nolan as his team prepares for the Region IV meet this Saturday is attempting to qualify for nationals being held in Champaign this year.

Halloween -- a laughing matter?

by Joan Peterson

No matter how old people get about everyone has deeply rooted fears of the unknown. Fear of what might be lurking in the dark corners of our bedrooms or under our beds.

Aren't most people a bit more cautious and wary of strange sights and sounds when they are alone than when with a crowd? A single sound can become nightmares. That is why so many people have a hidden regret for Halloween. In a way it represents our hidden fears and makes them seem lighter.

Alone we call to every unusual sound but in a crowd we joke about scary things.

It's hard to forget those old ghost and goblin jokes from our childhood. They are kind of scary but they may still bring a chuckle to our lips. For example, Vampires take time off from their jobs for a coffee break.

Ghost's favorite foods are Hungarian goulash with monster cheese and spook-etti. When in New York, visit the vampire state building. For breakfast ghosts like to eat about-eatinis.

A vampire makes his withdrawal at a blood bank. Vampires can be a pain in the neck.

A boy ghost whistles at a girl ghost because she is too fat.

A spook's navy is called a ghost guard. Ghosts chew bubble gum. When two vampires meet for the last time one may say to the other, "It's been nice gnawing you."

On Halloween vampires had for Adam's apple.

When going across the ocean, a vampire sails on a blood vessel.

And to think if it wasn't for the superstitious men of old we wouldn't be celebrating the festive occasion of halloween.

Hundreds of years ago in Gaul and Britain, a group of priests called Druids feared that ghosts, spirits, witches, elves and fairies came out to harm people on Halloween. They thought cats were reincarnated people who were being punished for their evil doings. Many of these beliefs are still present today.

The idea of the Jack-O'-Lantern came from an old Irish tale about a miserly man named Jack. Because of being so cheap he couldn't go to heaven. And because he played practical jokes on the devil he couldn't go to hell either. He was doomed to roam the earth carrying his lantern until Judgment Day.

Even though our days of trick and treating are over we can still entertain the mystery and horrors of Halloween without fear. After all it's all in our minds, or is it?

Tuition tax credit plan dropped

WASHINGTON, D.C. In a major victory for President Carter, the Congress adopted the president's Middle Income Assistance Act and, in last-minute publicizing before the Oct. 15 adjournment, dropped the tuition tax credit legislation Carter opposed.

The Middle Income Assistance Plan, offered by the president last February as an alternative to tuition tax credits, also some $1.2 billion in existing federal student financial aid programs.

Arts Council offers $5,000 fellowships

The Illinois Arts Council has announced a new program of fellowships for published Illinois creative writers. Two $5,000 fellowships will be offered in this pilot venture, which may grow to include other creative artists in future years. The program was unanimously approved at the July meeting of the Illinois Arts Council.

According to Jennifer Meyer, IAA's Artists' Program Coordinator, "The purpose of the program is to recognize creative writers of exceptional achievement and outstanding promise by offering Specifically, the plan expands the government's Basic Educational Opportunity Grants, Guaranteed Student Loans, and Work-Study programs. The plan was generally pitched to middle-income families, who presumably want some relief from the rising costs of college education.

Under the act, which the president is expected to sign into law shortly, dependents of families earning more than $18,000 are eligible for work-study grants for the first time ever. Average grants to families earning $2,000-$4,000 per year will go up to more $200.

Tuition tax credits legislation, which would have allowed families to deduct up to $100 in tuition costs from their income taxes, passed both the House and the Senate last week. As originally introduced, the bill included the tuition costs of students in elementary and secondary schools as well. Political expediency demanded that elementary and secondary school costs be dropped from the bill, which was then passed as an amendment to a larger tax cut bill.

House and Senate versions of the larger bill, though, were different. When the bill was referred back to a joint conference committee, several representatives insisted on attaching the elementary and secondary school provisions to it again. An agreement could not be reached, and while the tax cut bill went on its passage, the tuition tax credit amendment to it was dropped.

Despite the concurrent passage of the Carter plan, Dr. Albert A. Harter, assistant commissioner for legislation at the U.S. Office of Education, expects that tuition tax credits may make a comeback in Congress' next session. "It's a perennial bill," he observes, "and there's no doubt quite a few representatives intend to sponsor one again. But after the Middle assistance to writers to provide them with the opportunity for further writing."

Writers are eligible if they have published two or more short stories in two or more literary magazines, or published a volume of short fiction; or published a novel; or published ten or more poems in two or more literary magazines; or published a volume of poetry; or published a dramatic script (excluding performance copies).

For this program, student publications which publish primarily student work, do not qualify as literary magazines. Writers must have been in residence in Illinois at least six consecutive months previous to the application in order to apply.

For specific application procedures and further information, students may contact Jennifer Meyer, Artists' Program Coordinator, Illinois Arts Council, 111 N. Wabash, Chicago, IL 60602, 432-0760.

Editorial Columbus Day bumped for some very good reasons

Maybe the Norwegians got their revenge after all. Maybe they have connections with the Harper College Board of Trustees. Well, if not they certainly will be glad to hear that the Board has eliminated Columbus Day as a holiday in the academic calendar for next year.

All of the transitions in the academic calendar were made for specific reasons. Each revision was made to help in either with the budget or the state requirements and state funding. The board can be commended for starting these changes as soon as possible and not wasting any time.

The canceling of Columbus Day was only one of the changes made in the academic calendar for the 1979-80 school year. Changes for the fall 1979 semester include starting one week later than it did this year and ending six days later than this year. For Labor Day, students will get two days off instead of the one. Veteran's Day will be one day off, the same as this year. Thanksgiving vacation will be the same length as this year also.

The reason the Board gave for starting the first semester late was to increase the length of the summer session to 12 weeks. The summer session is when the school makes most of its money. Because Winterm ends up costing the college money, the entire program has been dropped.

Columbus day has been dropped as a holiday for a very good reason. Because the school is required to have 75 instructional days per semester in order to get state funding, Columbus day will now be the 76th instructional day of school for next year. This added day will be a buffer in case the school has to close on an unexpected day on the account of an emergency. This plan of thinking ahead will hopefully prevent the school closing late in the day leaving students stranded here. Students will be informed through the media early in the morning if the school will be closed.

This will be first time in the history of Harper that students will not be having Columbus Day off and the school will not be officially closed. In the past, the school has not planned "buffer" days in case of emergencies to make sure we meet the 75 day limit. As a result, students next year will have to wait for Veteran's Day on Nov. 12 for a holiday.

If you ask any Norwegian he'll tell you that Leif Erikson discovered America way before Christopher Columbus ever got here. Since they did promise a revenge, for not being duly recognized as the discoverer's of America, maybe they started with Harper and are trying to get Columbus Day abolished everywhere.

Poor Christopher Columbus will probably be turning in his grave next year while Harper continues college life as usual. Perhaps at first there will be only a few students who will forget about Columbus Day. The next year more people will forget, and in the years to come, Columbus Day may become just a thing of the past. He won't mind though as long as he knows that his day is going to a worthy cause.

Letters to the editor welcome

Letters to the editor Be concerned, vote

Dear Editor,
With state wide elections approaching, all citizens should realize the importance of their vote and how necessary it is.

Political participation in America has been in the decline for the past ten years, especially in local and state elections. People believe that national elections hold the only real importance, are quite mistaken. Besides the fact that all political offices are of particular importance, state governments usually have more jurisdiction over their own citizens, than the federal government does.

On Nov. 1, we will be selecting our governor, along with U.S. Representatives to Congress, a U.S. Senator, plus all of our state and local officials. Voting is not a difficult thing to do, and by just reading the paper, watching the news or by even talking to friends, you can be informed on the candidate. Some candidates may even be from the town you live in. Alex Smith, who is opposing incumbent Charles Percy for U.S. Senator, is from Schaumburg. Philip Crane, the current U.S. Representative for the 15th district, is from Mount Prospect and Sharon Barry, a recent Harper graduate is running for Secretary of State.

It's true that one person's vote cannot change the outcome of too many elections. But that one person does have the power to influence others and to support the candidate of his choice, whoever he or she may be.

Illinois is reporting one of the lowest voter turnouts ever this year and surveys indicate, that young people today are not taking advantage of the vote, as they were a few years ago. Don't let voter apathy be the downfall of your state elections. Remember the results it had on the Harper referendum. Be a concerned citizen and vote.

Journalism student defends McGrath on referendum

Dear Editor,
I was quite disturbed after reading a "Letter to the Editor" in the Oct. 18 edition of the Harbinger.

The letter discussed the referendum and where the finger of blame should be pointed.

The article's author, Tom Allen, thought that President McGrath should bear all responsibility. He also thought that it was probably McGrath's first confrontation with a major problem. He also thought that McGrath would have been given all the credit if the referendum had passed.

Allen should stop trying to think so much, it seems to affect his sensibility.

The facts are that even if Jimmy Carter had assumed the presidency of Harper, the referendum would still have failed. The facts are that the areas where the strongest opposition occurred, were the towns that had just incurred a property tax increase of nearly 500 percent, and where the average population age was well into the 50's. McGrath himself admits that it was bad timing to move for the referendum.

The facts are that when McGrath came to Harper he had the budget problems awaiting him. He didn't cause the problem, so why blame him (solely) nonetheless for them.

The facts are McGrath was the dean of academic affairs at City University of New York. He was responsible for the academic program of the system's graduate school, eight senior colleges and eight community colleges. So Allen can be assured that this was not our president's first confrontation with a major problem.

The facts are that Allen should get the facts and get them straight before he brybarking again. Joseph W. Farin

Peer Counselors tackle student problems

Peter Marahary is a Peer Counselor and a student trustee.

by Mark Framer
Peer Counselors are students attending Harper College who are interested in talking and listening to fellow students. They provide assistance to people with academically related problems.

Sophomores Peter Marahary and Terry Jacobson are two such people.

Marahary is majoring in liberal arts and looks to a future in law or politics. In addition to peer counseling, Marahary is the student trustee, a student senator, a member of the Harper astronomy club and he holds a part-time job.

Jacobson is working towards her associate science degree. Her goal is to become a physician's assistant. Jacobson is the student coordinator of the peer counseling program and business manager for the Harbinger. She also does volunteer work at Alexian Brothers Medical Center emergency room.

Marahary takes time to listen and talk to students, to help them in any way he can with the college and the way it operates. He believes peer counseling is a necessary tie between the professional counselors and the student body. "We provide the flexibility that the counselors don't have with the information the counselors do," Marahary can be found at the Student Senate office in 1414, A and can be contacted through the counseling center.

"To help students become aware of the many services Harper has to offer them," is the main task of peer counseling says Jacobson.

She directs students to professional counselors who are more equipped to assist them in transferring to other colleges. Her job also involves communicating thoughts and problems students have to Harper authorities to help these authorities assess the needs of the student. Jacobson can be found in the student lounge by the fireplace in 1414, A, or she can be contacted through the counseling center.

Students who are uncertain or troubled about their academic future can take advantage of the Peer Counseling service. It is employed with people who know about the school and who care about the students who attend it.

Tours open for students

Harper is sponsoring educational tours to both London and the British Isles this spring. Both are open to college students and adult non-students and may be taken for liberal arts or humanities credit.

The London tour will depart Easter week, April 15-22, 1979. Included in the package is round-trip jet transportation, first class hotels, continental breakfast, three theater tickets and comprehensive sight-seeing tours of London. The cost of the tour is $835.

An informational table on the London trip will be set up in 1414, A on Tuesday. Hours: noon to 3 p.m. and Wednesday from 11 to 3 p.m. An informational meeting will be held Nov. 28 at 7 p.m. in D231.

For further information contact Ms. Mary Jo Willis, in A139, or at ext. 448 or 383 or Mr. E.L. Lancaster, T211, at ext. 47 or 348.

A two-week tour of the British Isles is set for May 26-June 4. The tour will visit England, Wales and Ireland and will cost $990. The cost includes round trip air fare Chicago to London by British Airways, all ground transportation by private coach, hotel accommodations, most meals, sightseeing, gratuities, health and baggage insurance, lecture and discussion led by accompanying instructors.

Participants will also have free time to pursue their own interests. Optional bus and galleys, tapes, films and bicycle excursions will be offered. College students and other adults are welcome to join the program, but the number of participants will be limited to 40. For details students may see Ms. Martha Sammons or Dr. Patricia Smith-Purcell of the Liberal Arts Division, F261, ext. 281.

Generally Speaking..

by Cindy Carravalle

Everyone needs money, right? Well on my own time, I have done some extensive research on the subject of money. I looked for the why, when, and how of making money. The why is very simple. We need money to survive. One of the ways of finding out for a lack of one or a hint of one. The who is very simple also. I already answered that question: everyone needs money. Top executives need money. Low earners need money, and even college students need money. The big question is the how: How do we get our money?

If you're the intellectual type, you'll probably end up working behind a desk the rest of your life. On the other hand, if you're the type that's not so bright, you'll probably end up working behind a desk, any way. These days people aren't just looking for ordinary money, they want the big bucks. If you're one of these people, then don't look to a job much as I mentioned above. Don't search out a job in a factory either. Don't even attempt a job as a politician. What you're looking for is a job in the music industry.

It wouldn't be about how old you are, but...

All you need to do is to write a number one hit song. It's being done every day. Even you, a mere student, can become a long-haired, pot-bellied, fifty-rich, song-writer, millionaire in just a few short minutes. ~~After~~ changing names, or even about your first high school dance. These songs don't seem to be making the charts any more. Instead, write about something we can all relate to. Try writing about your first trip with a marijuana cigarette, or the time the cops beat in your head, or how your best girl got hit by a train.

Don't worry about the music that will go with the song. That's not yours to think about. Somebody in Hollywood will back you up with a record of "Bum, da, bum" or if you prefer, "Heh, na, heh."

Now this may be just a whimsical rumormongering, but I heard that some of the best songs were written while sitting alone or watching the Waitress. Don't worry about rhyming the words either. It's really an option, entirely up to you. Try to throw in a little bit of foreign lingo to keep the listeners begging for translations and interpretations. Say something dirty in French or even in Latin.

To show you just how uncomplicated the lyrics to a song can be, I will attempt to write a song without the aid of a dictionary, thesaurus, or an English grammar handbook. One thing to keep in mind while writing a song is to keep it up to date with the current times. What was once "A Boyz n the Hood" is now entitled with its up-to-date version called "You Love Me For My Maanah."

Now I don't choose to write a song about peace in the Middle East. I think I'll write one about ERA. With all the heat ERA has been receiving lately, why not sing about it? You can make the public happy and get rich on the side.

I'VE GOT THE ERA BLUES FOR YOU BABY

I never was keen on ERA, until I met you, Baby, that fateful day. You talked so long about human rights, I gazed into your eyes all night. You conversed in depth about politics and war, I must admit, baby, you're quite a bore. You discussed the nation's men so wise, Baby, I love your big brown eyes. My mamma told me that it's not right, but how about a date tonight? I was never keen on ERA, till I saw you Baby, that fateful day. I don't want to go to war to fight, but say you'll go out with me tonight. Oh Baby, Baby, it's getting late, don't be ashamed I asked you for a date. Oh I believe in ERA, ERA, ERA, La, La, La, La, La, La, La, La, La. You talked about the oil crunch, please say you'll go with me to lunch. Your intelligence astounds me, you'll go far. But, cousin Han, get in my car. You say you feel funny, cause you're the man, but section 12 of ERA says I can. Oh I believe in ERA, ERA, ERA, La, La, La, La, La, La, La, La, La. !!!!!

Skateboards cause "road rash"

In 1977 more than 375,000 people were injured while riding skateboards in the United States. This raised skateboarding to the fourth most dangerous sport.

There are many dangers and spills along the road to skateboarding competence.

Almost every skateboarder has gotten road rash, the special term for the burns received while the skin scrapes against the hard concrete. The injuries can become more serious, including broken bones, internal injuries and even death.

Cars also are the cause of many accidents. Many times skateboarders will avoid out of driveways and use the streets as areas to practice their skateboarding techniques.

Accidents are caused when the car and skateboarder collide or when the skateboarder must jump off the board to avoid an accident.

Skateboarding accident will also occur when a rider who is inexperienced attempts a complicated maneuver. Many times parents have tried their child's skateboard, only to find that the trick their child performed which looked so easy, really is not all that easy.

Many parents have broken bones, as well as broken skateboards, in the interest of seeing if skateboarding is a safe sport for their children. While the sport can be safe if it is practiced carefully under controlled conditions, the majority of people don't realize the consequences or risks of skateboarding.

Jeff Marise, a University of Illinois skateboarder said he "learned the lesson the hard way. I love the sport, but I'll only do it where it is safe. I've broken my left arm twice, because that's the way I always fall. Now I wear pads."

Wearing pads does cut down on injuries, because they do protect the body. They cost between $70 and $150 for a complete set of elbow, knee and back pads. Padded shorts are also available.

Most skateboarding parks require the use of these pads in order to prevent serious injury on their courses. Skateboarding parks are considered the safest places to practice the techniques of skateboarding. They consist of large concrete arenas, with bowls, dips and spirals to provide a challenge to the skateboarder's balance.

Before attempting use of these courses, the skateboarder should have practiced his basic riding technique in a less difficult area. For the skateboarder who must practice outside, the best ways to eliminate danger are to use a large, flat area where there will be little traffic. Parking lots are an ideal place to practice.

The area should be checked for irregularities and broken glass, sticks or other obstructions. The most important lesson, however, and usually one that is learned early, is how to fall. Falling safely will make skateboarding a much more enjoyable sport.

Display case now open to clubs

Student Activities has required a display case which will be available, by reservation, to display information and events that are related to particular clubs or organizations. The case is located in the lounge and may be reserved for a week at a time. Clubs interested should contact the Student Activities Office, A336.

Animal friends offer contest

A national essay contest, focusing on the use of animals in research and education programs, was announced by Alvin Herrington, president of Friends of Animals, Inc. (Foa). First prize is $2,000. There will be three awards for second place of $1,000 each and six awards for third place in the amount of $500 each.

The question for this year's contest is: "Why should the Congress end funding of research and education programs that involve the use of animals and divert these funds to alternative methods?"

The contest is aimed at encouraging American students to help in the development of a new ethic for the treatment of non-human animals.

In announcing the contest, Ms. Herrington said, "Humans have used animals for their own purposes for thousands of years as a result of ignorance and economic self-interest, we have developed rather deep-seated attitudes about our relationship to other species. We have eroded strong emotional, philosophical and legal barriers that reserve ethical conditions only for ourselves."

"These barriers are beginning to dissolve," she continued. "New technology provides alternatives to the exploitation of animals for food, materials, research, and recreation. We need to revise the prevailing system of human values and ethics and encourage a broader acceptance of the notion that other forms of life are entitled to ethical consideration."

Applications are available at the Friends of Animals, Inc., headquarters, 4010 to The Regina Bauer Freckewitz, Essay Competition, Attn: James Mann, Vice-President, Friends of Animals, Inc., 11 West 80th Street, New York, N.Y. 10022.

Campus ministry; not just for Catholics

By Jean Petersen
The Catholic Campus Ministry organization isn't just for Catholics. It's for any Harpur student interested in reaching out to persons of similar religious and moral outlook.

"It's a social club," said Freshman Mike Halm, president of the club. "It helps students socially and spiritually."

"We're also a service club," the club business manager continued. "We help organize events like the muscular dystrophy dance-

The club is planning different events for the future. On Saturday they hope to have a hayride, square dance and Blue-42 and on Friday there will be a Tonite Roll Drive to benefit the children at the Minneapolis Home for the retarded.

The club holds its meetings every other Tuesday at 4:30. Anybody is welcome to come and join at any time. After each meeting they usually go out for pizza.

There are presently 30 or 35 members in the club including: Vice President Ray Schaefges, Secretary Anne Graham and Treasurer Barb Schaffges. The club is partially run by Sisters Pracy Brenna and Julie Ryan. If one didn't know they were nuns it would be hard to tell because they dress and look like the rest of us. "They are really friendly," Halm said. "They take an interest in you."

Halm says the name of the club sometimes scares people away. "Just because it's a religious club students don't want to join. We're not the holy rollers or anything."

Freshman Mike Halm is the president of the Catholic Campus Ministry Club.

Legal Aid

By E.J. DEMSON, J.D.

Common-law marriage is recognized as valid in a number of states. States which deny validity of a common-law marriage recognize the validity of such a marriage contracted in another state where it is valid, provided other requirements are met as explained in the following Q. and A.

Q. Is a common-law marriage legal in Montana? We are both 18, formerly runaways from our home in Pennsylvania. We met in Great Falls, Mont., where we now live together without a marriage license and a ceremony. We both agreed to be married. On our job applications we wrote we were married, and our minister knows we live together as husband and wife.

A. Montana law (Code Sec. 45-2-1, 101 Mont. 246) recognizes common-law marriage as valid if it is created by an agreement in person or, not in the future by the parties and consummated by cohabitation followed by a holding out to the public, as you did on your employment application.

Common-law marriage is recognized as valid in Pennsylvania.

Q. Is a life estate owner of real property required to pay property insurance? Or do those who take over after the life owner also have to pay the insurance. We live in California.

A. The law (Am. Jur. 3d Ref., Life Estates Sec. 54 et seq.) says holder of a life estate created by deed or a will or by statute has the exclusive use of the real property owned by him or her or to another for the life of the owner.

Such owner during his life is required to pay the insurance coverage.

Q. My husband died without a will. He left me with three children by his first marriage, two by my first marriage and two by my present marriage.

How will his estate be divided? He leaves a sizable estate that earned in business.

A. The law (Cal. Stat. Sec. 252) says the children of the half-blood, yours and his, by your respective marriages and the two full-blood children by your second marriage will share equally in the net, two-thirds of his estate.

To you, the surviving spouse, with two children of the present marriage, will receive one-third of his net estate (Cal. Stat. Sec. 64-24).

Q. My aunt died with many savings certificates and told me that in her will I would get about one-third of their value. She showed me a handwritten will with just her signature. Now I am told that the Alabama law where we live says such wills are not legal. Please check the law for me. I just started work and can't afford a lawyer.

A. Because Alabama (Code Sec. 43-1-24) requires that wills be witnessed, your aunt's will would not be valid. The estate would pass to her immediate kin as the statute of Descent and Distribution provides.

Codes sec. 43-2-1-3. (Campus Digest News Service).

Women's tennis captures title

Krueger-Frick win

by Joe Kueck

The women's tennis team closed out an almost perfect season as they won the Region IV Regional Tournament to claim the Illinois Junior college women's tennis title, and head coach Martha Lynn Bolt was named "Coach of the year."

Leading the team was the untoppable duo of Kris Krueger and Mary Beth Frick as they added another doubles championship to their many list of accomplishments.

The team was also the NAC conference champions, devastating every opponent on its way to an undefeated conference record. The team suffered its only loss to non-conference Wheaton College, a four-year school.

The team edged a closely bunched field as Harper came out on top with seven points followed by Belleville, who had six.

The team advances to the National Tournament being held this year in Waco, Texas. The way the women's tennis team has been playing the Hawks should finish high in the national standings, as also the doubles team of Frick and Krueger.

The speed chased out the regular season by defeating Triton 7-3 to take sole possession of the NAC title.

The team has had one of the most successful seasons for any Harper sport and with many freshmen returning, having any unforeseen problems, the team again is a top contender.

Golf team takes 1st

by Joe Kueck

After following in fourth place most of the season the Harper golf team proved again to be one of the top teams, as they made a late charge to win the NAC conference meet and finish third overall.

Juliet and DuPage tied for first in the highly competitive NAC with identical win-loss records of six, with the Hawks right on their backs at 25-10.

Top golfer throughout the season was Scott Spetsman who won the conference meet, shooting a 74, and finishing second in overall average with 76.

"We didn't play well early in the year, and I believe with additional meet we would have won the conference meet," said Roger Berthold as this is the first time since the meet's conception that Harper has not won the championship.

Also earning all-conference honors besides Spetsman was Steve Ford who finished 18th shooting an 81.

"Our other players were Jeff Chamberlain who was plagued by inconsistency all year, and Tom Martindale who was a steady performer, and I'm quite happy with his steady play," said Berthold.

In the Juliet Invitational the team came in 2nd, their best finish all season with Spetsman and Ford making trophy honors, finishing 8th and 9th respectively. The team finished 3th at the recent DuPage Invitational and placed 4th at Danville.

Scott Spetsman goes out to defend his state crown and coach Berthold said "Scott is definitely one of the top golfers in the state this year, and has the right mental attitude to win, but unfortunately that alone won't win it."

The team again next year should be very strong as Steve Ford who Berthold feels will certainly be one of the top golfers in the state next year, also returning are Mike Schubert, Tim Kahard, and Jim Streibinski. "This coupled with the strength of the golf teams in the area in where we are hoping to pick up a few recruits, should again make us very strong in conference play," said Berthold.

Cross country prepares for NAC

by Joe Kueck

"We'll do our best, and go after Wright who so far has to be the team to beat," said cross country coach Bob Nolan as the Hawks try to out to defend their NAC conference crown.

Harper's hopes on a conference title rest on Jeff Brydges, Jim Lancaster, Jim Langeler, Tom Himmerson and Joe Rizza as Harper has won the NAC two out of three years.

"Wright is the definite favorite, but if we can get our fourth and fifth men, Himmerson and Rizza, to run up with Langeler we could get past Triton for second place," said Nolan.

The team ran the DuPage Invitational last weekend and really did not fare too well, as the invitational had some of the top junior colleges from across the nation. The winner was a team from North Carolina, with Wright, the favorite, in the NAC placing in top five.

Individually the two bright spots for the Hawks were Jeff Brydges finishing 56 out of 180 runners and Jim Lancaster coming in 79.

"Jeff could definitely finish in the top ten of Illinois, if he runs a good race," said Nolan on Brydges making all conference in the upcoming meet this Friday.

The team finishes out a rather disappointing season compared to Harper's of the past, but with five out of seven runners returning next season to build a solid base, the team should be ready to bring back plenty of hardware for the Harper trophy case.

Food Service institutes hike

by Jody Saunders

Students may notice a lack of change circulating in their pockets as the food prices go up in the Harper cafeteria and dining room. This increase, which becomes effective today, was announced last week by Vice President of Student Affairs Dr. Guerin Fischer.

This price hike represents the first increase in eight months and a continuing effort to keep Harper financially stable. The food services budget has been plagued with troubles and the price swelling is an attempt to put an end to the $83,960 deficit in the budget.

"The average price increase in the cafeteria is between five-10 cents and the hot buffet in the dining room will increase by 15 cents. Not all the prices will increase, just the items which have increased in the outside market," Fischer said.

The deficit of the last increase referendum Sept. 19 has necessitated various budget cuts to keep the budget balanced. College officials are wrestling with the $100,000 which needs to be slashed from the current budget. Further reductions in the neighborhood of $800,000, may be necessary as the board prepares for the 1979-80 budget.

Five committees have been developed to study feasible alternatives to insure the cost of operating the college. Specific committees include energy and maintenance, continuing education, advertising and college publications, the second campus site and the extension buildings, such as Willow Park Center, where additional classes are held.

"The easiest area to cut is advertising and college publications, but if this is cut you may lose students and that means revenue. This is an area I'm particularly interested in," Harper president James McGrath said.

Another recent cutback at the college is professors' travel. Virtually all travel expenses accrued by faculty members and administrators, customarily picked up by the college, have been eliminated.

"All travel expenses must now be approved in advance. The only expenses the college will handle is that which is absolutely necessary, instances where the college has to be represented. What this does is cut out travel expenses for professional development," McGrath said.

The faculty senate and board members have become involved in the battle with the budget by submitting plans for possible budget cuts. One suggestion board members have introduced is a closer look at telephone usage and possible cost reduction in this area.

Dr. Guerin Fischer, Vice President of Student Affairs, all the prices will not be increased, just those that have explained the reasons for the price hikes in the cafeteria, gone up in the outside market and dining room at a board meeting. Dr. Fischer said.

A third political party to start?

DETROIT, MI Representatives of over 100 labor, community and political organizations have agreed to establish a "coalition of coalitions" by mid-November to counter organized right-wing activity, and to pressure the Democratic Party to its stated platform.

Some 300 representatives of groups ranging from the International Ladies Garment Workers Union to the Sierra Club have authorized United Auto Workers Union president Douglas Fraser to set up two commissions to work out details of the new coalition. The commissions are expected to meet in mid-November and the official announcement of the group's formation and name will be made then.

The coalition was agreed on last month at a Detroit meeting called by Fraser who said to his invitation, "The time has come" for a vigorous counterattack against the right-wing corporate forces and the political system day conference included 31 labor unions, and over 70 groups active in such diverse areas as civil rights, women's rights, environmental issues, social action, consumer rights, health care, housing, law reform, urban problems, economics, senior citizens' rights, energy reform, education, rights of small farmers, and protection for the handicapped.

Several college-based groups also attended, including the American Federation of Teachers.

National Education Association, American Association of University Professors, and the newly-formed United States Student Association—the result of the merger between the National Student Association and the National Student Lobby.

The coalition's two priorities will be "an effort to develop and pursue new approaches to the racial and economic needs of the people," and "an effort to improve the functioning of the American political system and our political parties."

In reality, the second priority is an attempt to pressure the Democratic Party. "The strategy we propose," said Fraser, "is to make the Democratic Party in fact what is principle it has proclaimed itself to be since the New Deal—a progressive party struggling against the reactionary capitalist money power of the Republicans to transform America into a fair and decent society."

In several cases, notably labor law reform and the energy bill, defeat came at the hands of a well-organized and well-financed right-wing lobbying drive that reached both ends of the Congressional aisle, conference claimed. The breakdown in Democratic Party discipline lead many conference attendees to suggest that the Democratic Party was, as American Indian Movement activist Bill Mene put it, "a crippled horse."

The coalition's first target is likely to be the Democratic Party's Mid-term Convention in December where policy and platform will be debated. According to Fraser, the new alliance will demand that the President and Democratic members of Congress keep party platform commitments, support a move to abolish the Congressional filibuster, and set up a party reform task force to create "a stronger, more accountable, more ideological party."

"Power remains with America's elite and not with its people," Fraser charged. "Time and again in recent months we have seen that power exercised against workers, the poor, minorities and women young and old, and even the middle class in our country America today functions by a set of rules virtually guaranteed to result in a new too familiar outcome—the 'haves' take more, and 'have-nots' get less. Those rules must change and we must develop a strategy to change them."

The Vice President of Academic Affairs, Dr. David Williams, is currently investigating fees Harper charges to students, such as library fines and application fees, to see if cost increases are warranted. "These fees may go up if they're not in line and that's what Dr. Williams is checking into," McGrath said.

The sale of the second campus site, a 17-acre stretch of land located at Shorebrook and Palatine roads is also under consideration. The land was acquired by Harper in 1973 for $2.1 million, after voters approved a bond sale.

"By law the income we would receive from the sale of the second site could only be used to build buildings. We would have to hold another referendum to get the voters approval to use the money for something other than constructing buildings," McGrath said.

Administrative recommendations concerning the ailing budget are expected to be announced at the Nov. 9 Board of Trustees meeting.

Student vote encouraged

Well, it's almost that time. Tomorrow the general election will be held and everyone will be asked to go out and vote.

If this election is to be the same as those in the years past, only 40-45 percent of the people will vote in local elections. In the presidential elections a higher percentage of voters will be expected, approximately 60-65 percent of the population will vote. The presidential elections get the highest voter turnout of all.

These statistics are alarming, and when reading up on the latest voting precinct records a steady decline can be noticed in voting interest. When the election for the highest office in the United States can only draw, at the most, 60 per cent of the people, it is time to do something.

The first step should be to encourage people to vote. If everyone realizes that their vote does count, and that what they have to say really does make a difference, they will be more inclined to participate. If people are invited to share their ideas and opinions, rather than being shoved aside because they are either not rich enough or not popular enough to influence others, they would be more active in their government.

Those who complain about government should be especially encouraged to get involved. If they only realized that there are many facets and channels that are open to them to change the flaws in our system, many of the problems could be solved by now. There are many activist groups that are constantly looking for interested, concerned people who are willing to spend some time and money working for a common cause. Some of these groups are as powerful, or more powerful in making laws and getting bills passed as congressmen. This is one way to get very involved in government. Another way is simply to vote on election days.

The second step in the process to get a higher voter turnout is to get the public informed. Once people start voting and getting involved, it's vital that they know the issues, candidates, and proposals so they can vote intelligently. Much information is at hand for those who will look it up, but for the person who really doesn't want to go out of his way to become informed, information must become more available. If all public places like, libraries, schools, and city or local government buildings were equipped with leaflets, fliers, and manpower more informed citizens would result.

Following these two initial steps would start to get the country back to the days of great political interest. If people could be made to be interested in the body that governs their lives they might be a little more concerned with who is going to govern them, and under what laws they will be governed. Then they can also realize that they don't have to accept everything that is given to them, they do have a say, a powerful one.

Letters to Editor

Advisor commends staff

Dear Editor,
I would like to commend you on your editorial about the Jim Schwab Band. I felt it stated the facts and issues precisely and clearly. I must admit, being new to the position of Activities Advisor, I was somewhat concerned that this story might be blown out of proportion. I'm beginning to realize that although understaffed, the Harbinger is run by an effective and responsible group of people.

If I can ever be of any assistance with your stories or editorials, feel free to call or stop by.

Yours truly,
Fred Waters

Dentist complains — column unoriginal

Dear Editor,
Cindy Caravella's "Generally Speaking" column in the Oct. 3 issue of Harbinger was given to me for comment by a Harper College evening student.
The column really is not original. Hopefully, it stems from reading similar farcical articles, cartoons, etc. rather than from personal experience. We dentists have been trying to overcome their damage for decades.
One, well-known source of competent, humane, dental therapists is the Harper Dental Hygiene Program. Now about a piece extolling their training and services? And, more constructive things like Joan Peterson's article on Junk Food on the facing page?

Sincerely,
Ronald W. Baruch, D.D.S.

Remember, THE HARBINGER ran a "Generally Speaking" column on OCT 1 dealing with dental hygiene.

Photo Opinion:

Are you satisfied with Harper's career program?

John Michels—Drafting yes, I'm very satisfied.

Rosemarie Karalis—Dental Hygiene yes, I feel the program is organized very well and I've learned a lot since I've been in the program.

Pam Scott—Fashion Design no, I dropped it because I didn't like the teachers and the other required courses that went with it.

Generally Speaking... by Cindy Caravello

The emphasis in today's society is to be closely, fresh and attractive. In order to become a more perfect "you," you need to buy only three cards full of name brand beauty products.

If you've visited your local drugstore lately, then you know that the choices that await you are almost make you walk out empty handed. The mountainous shelves of soaps, shampoos, mouthwashes, lotions and soaps beckon you take them home and try them on for size. They seem to be screaming at you through their little cellophane windows. "Buy me, buy me!"

But before you are too hasty, sweating over your checkbook, try to remember some of the television commercials you saw last night, and then ask yourself: Am I normal, dry, or oily? Do I perspire at college dances, while in class, or just by getting up in the morning? In my complete mild, serious or should I have consulted a dermatologist years ago?

Take a good look at yourself in the mirror. How do you stack up to Farrah or Mohammed? Who would ever know you are in your sad state? Your hair doesn't look FBI balanced, your breath is too minty and for a guy, you sure do smell like a lady.

Shampoo, the item on the top of everyone's list, can be quite tricky. You really have to watch what you're paying for. Many of today's shampoos will not only foam up so your head, but some of them double as high protein breakfast drinks. You can run up your shower curtain and be having your breakfast at the same time with a bottle of "Wild Cherry Shampoo," "Punch and Cream" or even "Lemon Twist."

Deodorants can be misleading at times. Many people don't realize it, but there is a difference between a deodorant and an antiperspirant. Deodorants just cover up unpleasant odors, like herbal-scented Litty Litty. Antiperspirants literally back up your sweat glands; they're good to use if you want to impress someone with your ability to control your own armpits.

As you gentlemen already know from the fallpage spread in Woman's Day and Family Circle, any guy who dares to use a deodorant that smells like roses is going to be fired from his job as a macho construction worker.

Mouthwashes seem to promise so much happiness and a new sportscar in the driveway. Will you choose the one that will get you a date with that dynamic cheerleader, that flake or do you just want to get rid of that awful "morning mouth" that seems to plague you at 8 p.m. Be careful not to swallow any of the breath disinfectant because it's pretty hard to eat breakfast when your stomach has that "just brushed feeling."

Instead of going all out to buy a new pair of tight jeans to impress that special someone, why not just invest in a little tube of "Clay Enough." That's the miracle toothpaste that shows the "vices" people mugging up in a roaring fireplace in the Mouse Head Ski Lodge, licking their teeth to see if they still have that "toasty feeling."

Before you purchase any acne cure, you must stop back, take a deep breath, and ask yourself: Do I want to look off, scrub it off, rip it off or scrub it off? Maybe you'll choose the green dish that you have to immerse into every pore while your brothers and sister's point and ridicule you, insisting that Halloween was last week. Do you want to buy the lava rock that's guaranteed to wear down at least five layers of skin with the first application? Let's not forget about the acid-base cleanser that should be discontinued if redness, itching or intense stinging should occur.

Take your time in deciding which of the many popular brands you will be spending the last of your savings on. Don't let any pushy pharmacist sucker you into making any foolish purchases on things you actually don't want or really can't use. Your best bet is to talk to the president with the lowest package or the one with the most customer insurance.

If advertisers aren't lying about their wonder products, make sure each and every night transformation, then it might be well worth the investment you make. Of course, I won't blame anyone for doubting some of these outrageous claims they make to us in television ads and in magazines. The only thing that I'll never doubt is that Farrah's bank account has gone from "flat to fluffy."

Post Office sets letter standards

Beginning Nov. 30, new minimum size requirements will be instituted by the U.S. Postal Service. All letters one-quarter inch thick or smaller must be at least 3 1/2 inches high, five inches long, and 1/16 inch thick.

The change takes effect before the Christmas rush, therefore consumers should be careful when buying Christmas cards. Any mail sent after the Nov. 30 deadline that does not meet the minimum size requirement will not be processed. Christmas cards sent to foreign countries must be 3 1/2 by 5 1/2 or they will be returned.

Harper sponsors tours

Harper College is sponsoring educational tours to the British Isles this spring. The tours, which are open to college students and adult community residents may be taken for liberal arts or humanities credit.

The London tour will be during Easter week, April 15-21, 1979. The package includes roundtrip jet transportation, first class hotels, continental breakfast, theatre tickets and comprehensive sightseeing tours of London at a cost of $615.

An informational meeting will be Wednesday, Nov. 29 at 7 p.m. in Bldg. A, Room 21. For further information call Mary Jo Wilbur, 297-3006, ext. 448 or 280 or E. L. Lancaster, ext. 47 or 308.

A two-week tour of the British Isles (England, Wales and Ireland) is set for May 29 - June 6, 1979. The cost of $980 includes round trip air fare, all ground transportation by private luxury coach, hotel accommodations, meals, travel arrangements, aviation, health and baggage insurance, lectures and discussions led by accompanying instructors.

Council elects officers

The Club and Organizations Council recently elected its new officers.

Elected were Helen Turner, president; Janet Foster, treasurer; Sue Peach, secretary; and Ben Hager, public relations manager.

The major concern of the new officers is getting more clubs to send representatives to C.O.C. Club and Organizations Council represents all the recognized clubs and organizations of Harper College. The council also assists clubs in planning and promoting activities.

C.O.C. meets monthly on the third business day. The next meeting is Tuesday at 3 p.m. All clubs and organizations are encouraged to send a representative. All interested students are welcome.

Legal Aid

By E.J. DEMMON, J.D.

Q. My wife is buying expensive things all over town with her credit cards while our divorce is in process of settlement. I've told all the stores that I won't pay these bills, but they tell me they will honor her cards as long as she has them. How do I get them out of my name?

A. You may advertise in local newspapers of daily circulation that you and your wife have separated and that you will no longer be responsible for her debts.

However, the court in your divorce (dissolution) settlement has the power to determine property division and disposal of debts.

Arizona law (A.R.S. Sec. 35-311), like that in most states, says that when division is made of joint-tenancy property and other property held in common, the credit card charges may be subtracted from your wife's share. Reduced alimony payments also may be considered by the court.

Q. I lived with a wonderful guy for three years in California, and we were planning to be married. Two years ago he took out a life insurance policy and named his mother the sole beneficiary. We agreed verbally with his mother that if anything happened to him she and I would split the insurance $5-50.

He was killed in an accident a few weeks ago, and his mother has taken the insurance money, our van, and everything else that was in his name. Do I have a legal claim for my share of his insurance and possessions? I'm doubtful and don't know where to turn to.

A. California law says that, in the absence of a written contract between a man and a woman living together in a non-marital relationship, the court should require use of the position of an implied contract (Marvin case, Supreme Court, 14 Cal. Reporter 813).

If the conduct of the parties demonstrated such a contract, the court may employ the doctrine of quantum meruit (equitable remedy) to divide assets. Advise with a lawyer. Your case would be another party's parole.

Q. County adoption records in Utah show I was adopted by my stepfather in 1963. He died recently, and his will (made in 1961) does not mention me. There are two biological children, who were mentioned in his will. I know he intended me to share in his estate. Do I have a legal right?

A. Utah law (Code Sec. 74-21) says children of a testator, born or adopted after his will is made, may share in the estate. They share in the same proportion as when he was made. The adopted child would share equally in the net remainder (Utah Code Sec. 75-1-101).

Q. Do owners of real estate in Wisconsin owe Wisconsin state income tax on the income, even though they are residents of Florida?

A. Yes (Wis. State 71-81). An exception is that non-residents of Wisconsin may exclude income if their home state affords a similar exclusion to Wisconsin residents who own property in that state.

Mulack visits Harper

by Joan Peterson
Cook County Sheriff candidate, republican Don Mulack visited Harper last Thursday to inform students about the problems recurring within the Cook County criminal system.

He pointed out that his main concern was improving public protection in the suburbs. He said, "I'm concentrating on three areas in the suburbs hoping that the suburbs will wake up and come out to vote in election day."

In the 1974 election there was a low voter turnout when Sheriff Elrod was elected. About 35-40 per cent of the voters turned out. It was a close race, about 38-38. That means that 12 and a half percent to 15 per cent of the people in Cook County elected Elrod as sheriff and most of his jails are in the suburbs." Mulack said, "I'm hoping the suburban voters will come out and vote and start getting involved in the process of picking and choosing government officials because they will have to live with them in the future as adults."

Mulack said he doesn't expect to get much of the vote in Chicago because they as often vote straight democrat. He said, "They would care less if they had a gorilla on the ticket, they don't care how qualified their candidates are. They come out and vote that straight democrat ticket. That's why they've always been able to control Cook County. So because I'm a republican they aren't voting for me, not even turning to my campaign."

If Mulack wins this election he said he will improve youth services. Today 2,700 people work in the sheriff's office. Only 15 of them work in the youth services section. "That's really terrible in the light of the fact that the FBI has pointed out recently that of the crime committed in the suburbs 42 per cent is committed by young people," he said. "No longer is it the petty offender, now it's the hard core drugs, robbery, murder and rape."

He says he wants to improve the Cook County Jail system. In the past eight years the cost of keeping criminals has more than tripled. "When Elrod first became sheriff, they were spending $8 to a day per inmate in the county jail, now we're spending $28 to a day per inmate," he pointed out. "One of the biggest problems in the jail today is that we have the national record for the highest number of jail breaks and escapes. It has become a revolving door. Eighty per cent of the people today in the Cook County jail are repeat offenders and have proven that crime is a way of life for them."

Mulack has a degree in finance and law and has a minor in Social Studies. He practiced law for several years and was the former assistant attorney general in charge of consumer fraud.

Thirty-six year old Mulack is endorsed by Senator Percy, Governor Thompson, Attorney General Scott, U.S. Representative Crane, Chicago Alderman Oberman as well as many other political figures.

He is married and has three small children. His wife is also an attorney in private practice.

Don Mulack, republican candidate for Cook County Sheriff visits with Harper students and teachers.

Smokey and the bandit come here tomorrow

"Smokey and the Bandit" will be presented at Harper Nov. 7 at noon in ADM. Students are admitted for free.

The film stars Burt Reynolds, Jackie Gleason and Sally Field. Reynolds (Bandit) must get a truckload of Coors beer from Texas to Georgia so he can collect his $200,000 reward. The New York Post said: "It's all action, laced with Cleason's fast Comanches, and made solid with those sterling personalities - best in the Burt Reynolds and Gleason." The film is rated PG.

THE RTA EXPRESS

ANOTHER GREAT RUN FOR YOUR MONEY.

Revised bus route serves Harper College.

More students commute via bus.

The students of William Bantley Harper College will continue to enjoy regular bus service to school. The newly revised 693 bus serves the college as well as Northwestern Community Hospital and Meadows Center for the handicapped. Students who commute to school via RTA's North Western commuter service can catch the bus at the Arlington Heights Station.

The map below shows you the route of the 693. The bus runs at convenient times weekdays and Saturdays. The fare is only 50 cents.

Free schedules for the 693 may be obtained by writing RTA, P.O. Box 2088, Chicago, IL 60690. Or one may call RTA Travel Information toll free 800 972 7000. For best service, calls should be made in the evening.

Inexpensive transfer provides travel in six counties.

For an additional dime, students and other passengers may purchase an RTA Universal Transfer, which is good for transportation on most RTA bus services in the six counties of Cook, Lake, McHenry, DuPage, Kane and Will.

Horoscope

ARIES: (March 21 to April 19)—Expect the unexpected and though activity and changes make it hard to concentrate, events are important to your future. You could be in the limelight and your sales ability is sharp. Everything is looking up.

TAURUS: (April 20 to May 20)—A close friend helps you to establish a firm belief system. Work hard, make it be heavy and you can slouch your ideas easily and cheerfully. Health is good and energy is high. Recharge your batteries with evenings at home.

GEMINI: (May 21 to June 20)—You can discharge your responsibility to career by working steadily, and then finding a stimulating night life. Don't let the know-it-all in conversations—practice restraint and diplomacy. Be appreciative of other's efforts.

CANCER: (June 21 to July 22)—Don't get depressed by other's troubles. Try to be around people who are optimistic and happy—keep a positive attitude. Resist tendency to dwell on the past or to use your energy and leads you into procrastination.

LEO: (July 23 to Aug. 22)—Active days and quiet evenings are favored now. Get some exercise and you'll feel better. A loved one could show you the extent of his or her affection and it sets your doubts to rest. Family life improves and a wish could come true.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)—You may put in some overtime to achieve your ambitions for advancement. Organize your time and energy to show the competition your true worth. Check up on financial drain and resist impulse buying now.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)—As old love could re-enter your life and a new romance may blossom too. The choice could be difficult. Career matters that have been stalemated can be released now. Stick to your long-range plan—don't get sidetracked.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)—You can handle the changes occurring now by organizing routine things to allow time for problem solving. Call on all your self-discipline to avoid extravagant impulses. Stay cool and don't take chances.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)—New challenges and opportunities should keep you enthusiastic and optimistic. You could be expanding your career interests and get a raise or promotion. Good time to take a study course too.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)—Your vitality is high and career success appears a certainty. Personal life takes on a new and glowing meaning and family matters prosper. Recognize and show appreciation for a loved one's talents.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)—An active time when you can make breakthroughs in career and be recognized. Your creativity is accepted and your ability to communicate. Combine business with pleasure—get friends into the act.

PISCES: (Feb. 19 to March 20)—Get out socially and have fun with friends. Good time to work on your image by buying clothes and upgrading your appearance. Get involved in cultural pursuits and intellectual interests. Use self-discipline on the job.

Degree helps chances

New York, N.Y. Herbert Blumstock, who directs the U.S. Division of Labor Statistics' Middle Atlantic Region staff, told a City University of New York conference here that down-reversers who never college degrees don't improve a student's chances of getting a job are simply wrong.

Blumstock related statistics that showed college graduates have an unemployment rate of 3.3 percent, compared with the 4.8 unemployment rate for all males.

Male college graduates had a jobless rate of 3.8 percent, or about a third of the rate of all males. Female graduates had a 4.2 percent rate, versus 5.3 percent for all females.

"The much-heard caution about college attendance," Blumstock warned, "should themselves be viewed with considerable caution. It seems clear that, while the college graduate has in recent years experienced some difficulties in the labor market, we can expect to see the pressures ease as we move into the 1980's (College Press Service).

Jobs open

Illinois unemployment figures dropped to 5.1 per cent from the August statistic of 5.4 per cent, according to the Illinois Bureau of Employment Security of the Illinois Department of Labor. According to the bureau the improvement in unemployment figures is the result of the return of youths to school and the settlement of labor disputes in some areas.

Cadavers help science

by Terry May

In order to aid students in an in-depth study of the human anatomy, the Biology Department obtained five cadavers which have been used for dissection and dissection in the past several years.

The cadavers, which are kept in wooden padded boxes in D26, are wrapped in moist towels treated with a mixture of ethanol, phenol and ephedrine, which is a major ingredient in anesthetic.

The first cadaver was received in 1972. Prior to that time, fetal pigs were used exclusively according to Mr. John H. Thompson, professor of biology. The use of the cadavers has led to first-hand learning that is considered exceptional over the fetal pigs. By pulling a tendon in the lower arm, Professor Thompson can demonstrate how the fingers could be flexed.

A dissection of this kind could not be possible without the use of cadavers. Aged 20-75 years, the present cadavers all died of arteriosclerosis (hardening of the arteries).

The Anatomists' Association of Illinois, a non-profit organization established by the medical schools in Chicago, provide the bodies to various medical schools. No money is transacted in the process; all bodies are donated on a free-will basis before death.

TDK TECHNICS ONKYO

ONKYO.

TA-630D WITH ACCU-BIAS

The cassette deck you've waited for.

Accu-Bias is exclusively Onkyo's... the only adjustable bias in a two-head cassette deck. You get continuous, variable bias settings, not a factory average, which gives you flat frequency response, least distortion and best S/N ratio.

Onkyo's exclusive Accu-Bias lets you set the precise bias signal your cassette demands. No matter what cassette tape you use. Or whose. Without the poorer bias signal, either the high frequency becomes weaker or a peak appears in the high frequency signal.

Accu-Bias in the TA-630D gives you 30 Hz, only on normal tape; 20 Hz, D50Hz with FeCr and CrO₂ "II" tapes give a 50dB S/N ratio, going to 60dB with Onkyo's Super II Dolby B6 system.

Stop waiting and start listening. Come in and see how simply beautiful Onkyo makes it with Accu-Bias. Onkyo... a step ahead of state of the art.

DISCWASHER AND MORE!

AUTOMATIC RADIO Pioneer Sony Mesa Carvin Vega

Generally Speaking... by Cindy Caravella

The emphasis in today's society is to be clean, fresh and attractive. In order to become a more perfect "you," you need to buy only three cards full of name brand beauty products.

If you've visited your local drugstore lately, then you know that the only three that stand out are shampoo, soap, and toothpaste. The mountainous shelves of soap, shampoo, mouthwash, toothpaste and acne cream beckon you take them home and try them on for size. They seem to be screaming at you through their little cellophane windows, "Buy me, buy me!"

But before you go into hysterics, sweating over your checkbook, try to remember some of the information commercials you saw last night, and then ask yourself: Am I normal, dry, or oily? Do I perspire at college dances, while in class, or just by getting up in the morning? Is my complexion sallow, serene, or should I have consulted a dermatologist years ago?

Take a good look at yourself in the mirror. How do you stack up to Farrah or Muhammad? Who would ever even look at you in your and state? Your hair doesn't look PH balanced, your breath is too minty, and for a guy, you sure do smell like a tiger!

Shampoo, the item on the top of everyone's list, can be quite tricky. You really have to watch what you're paying for. Many of today's shampoos will not only foam up on your head, but some of them double as high protein breakfast drinks. Now you can rip open your shower curtain and be having your breakfast at the same time with a bottle of "Wild Cherry Shampoo," "Peaches and Cream," or even "Lemon Twist."

Deodorants can be misleading at times. Many people don't realize it, but there is a difference between a deodorant and an antiperspirant. Deodorants just cover up unpleasant odors, like herbal-scented kitty litter. Antiperspirants literally lock up your sweat glands; they're used to use if you want to impress someone with your ability to control your own sweat.

As you stroll down aisles from the full-page spreads in Woman's Day and Family Circle, any guy who dares to use a deodorant that smells like roses is going to be fired from his job as a machine construction worker.

Mouthwashes seem to promise us health, happiness and a new sportscar in the driveway. Will you choose the one that will get you a date with that dynamic cheerleader, "Hot Girl," or do you just want to get rid of that awful "morning mouth" that seems to plague you at 3 p.m. Be careful not to swallow any of the breath deodorant because it's pretty hard to eat breakfast when your stomach has that "just brushed feeling."

Instead of going out to buy a new pair of tight jeans to impress that special someone, why not just invest in a little tube of "Close Enough?" That's the miracle toothpaste that shows the "rivalry" couple smiling up to a mirror (imagine in the Mirror Head Ski Lodge), licking their teeth to see if they still have that "tingly feeling."

Before you purchase any acne cure, you must stop back, take a deep breath, and ask yourself: Do I want to look off, even if it's off, rip it off or scrape it off? Maybe you'll choose the green stuff that you have to smear into every pore while your brothers and sister's point and ridicule you, insisting that Fallowen was last week. Do you want to buy the lava rock that's guaranteed to wear down at least five layers of skin with the first application? (Let's not forget about the acid-base cleanser that should be discontinued if redness, itching or intense dryness should occur.)

Take your time in deciding which of the many popular brands you will be spending the last of your savings on. Don't let any pushy pharmacist sucker you into making any foolish purchases on things you actually don't want or really can't use. Your best bet is to stick the product with the fastest package or the one with the most outrageous guarantee.

If advertisers aren't lying about their wonder products, miracle cures and over-night transformations, then it might be well worth the investment you make. Of course, I wouldn't blame anyone for doubting some of these outrageous claims they make to us on television and in magazines. The only thing that I'll never doubt is that Farrah's bank account has gone from "flat to fluffy."

Post Office sets letter standards

Beginning Nov. 30, new minimum size requirements will be instituted by the U.S. Postal Service. All letters one-quarter inch thick or smaller must be at least 3 1/2 inches high, five inches long, and 7-1000 inch thick.

The change takes effect before the Christmas rush, therefore consumers should be careful when buying Christmas cards. Any mail sent after the Nov. 30 deadline that does not meet the minimum size requirement will not be processed. Christmas cards sent to foreign countries must be 3 1/2 by 5 1/2 inches or larger, and they will be returned.

Harper sponsors tours

Harper College is sponsoring educational tours to the British Isles this spring. The tours, which are open to college students and adult community residents may be taken for liberal arts or humanities credit.

The London tour will be during Easter week, April 13-23, 1979. The package includes roundtrip jet transportation, first class hotel, continental breakfast, theatre tickets and comprehensive subsidizing tour of London at a cost of $115.

An informational meeting will be Wednesday, Nov. 20 at 7 p.m. in Bldg. A, Room 341. For further information call Mary Jo Willis, 307-3000, ext. 448 or 385 or E. L. Lancaster, ext. 487 or 398.

A two-week tour of the British Isles (England, Wales and Ireland) is set for May 24 - June 8, 1979. The cost of $980 includes round trip air fare, all ground transportation by private luxury coach, hotel accommodations, most meals, sightseeing, gratuities, health and baggage insurance, lectures and discussions led by accompanying instructors.

Council elects officers

The Club and Organization Council recently elected its new officers.

Elected were Helen Turner, President; Janet Foster, Treasurer; Sue Presch, secretary; and Ben Harper, public relations manager.

The major concern of the new officers is getting more clubs to send representatives to COC. Club and Organization Council represents all the recognized clubs and organizations of Harper College. The council also assists clubs in planning and promoting activities.

COC meets monthly in the student activities office. The next meeting is Tuesday at 7 p.m. All clubs and organizations are encouraged to send a representative.

All interested students are welcome.

Legal Aid

By R. J. DEMSON, J.D.

Q My wife is buying expensive things all over town with her credit cards while our divorce is in process of settlement. I've told all the stores that I won't pay these bills, but they tell me they will honor her cards as long as she has them. How do I get them stopped?

A What does the law say that I can do? We live in Arizona.

A You may advertise in local newspapers of daily circulation that you and your wife have separated and that you will no longer be responsible for her debts.

However, the court in your divorce (dissolution) settlement has the power to determine property division and disposal of debts.

Arizona law (A.R.S. Sec. 25-318), like that in most states, says that when division is made of joint-tenancy property and other property held in common, the credit card charges may be subtracted from your wife's share. Pledged alimony payments also may be considered by the court.

Q I lived with a wonderful guy for three years in California, and we were planning to be married. Two years ago he took out a life insurance policy and named his mother beneficiary. We agreed verbally with his mother that if anything happened to him she and I would split the insurance 50-50.

He was killed in an accident a few weeks ago, and his mother has taken the insurance money, our van, and everything else that was in his name. Do I have a legal claim for my share of his insurance and possessions?

I'm doubtful and don't know where to turn.

A California law says that, in the absence of a written contract between a man and a woman living together in a non-marital relationship, the court should inquire into the possibility of an implied contract (Marriage case, Supreme Court, H.C. Reporter B15).

If the conduct of the parties demonstrated such a contract, the court may employ the doctrine of quantum meruit (equitable remedies) to divide assets. Advise with a lawyer. Your case would be against your partner's parents.

Q County adoption records in Utah show I was adopted by my stepfather in 1962. He died recently, and his will (made in 1961) does not mention me. There are two natural children, who were mentioned.

I know he intended me to share his estate. Do I have a legal right?

A Utah law (Code Sec. 74-31) says children of a testator, born or adopted after his will is made, may share in the estate. They share in the same proportion as when he was made.

Thus, after the spouse's share is paid, the two natural children and the adopted child would share equally in the net remainder (Utah Code Sec. 75-101).

Q Do owners of real estate in Wisconsin ever Wisconsin state income tax on the income, even if the income is from a partnership?

A Yes (Wis. State 71.01). An exception is that non-residents of Wisconsin may exclude such income if their home state allows a similar exclusion to Wisconsin residents who own property in that state.

Marathon dancers rock around the clock

by Jean Petersen

Despite the fact that only half of the student Muscular Dystrophy dancers showed up for the Oct. 30-31 dance-a-thon, it was very successful. According to the dance-a-thon committee chairperson, Miss Adrienne Gurry, over $1,179 was raised.

About 20 dancers started and 18 finished in the school's first dance marathon which was sponsored by Clivie R. and Catharine Campus Ministry.

The dance started modestly and after several hours of dance dancing, last year's Muscular Dystrophy poster child, seven-year old Brandon Beach, stepped by to give some encouragement to the dancers: being the boy made the whole marathon seem worthwhile. Brandon's mother assured everybody that the money they were raising would go for much more than research. She said it pays for therapy and leg braces. The leg braces have to be fitted each time a child grows and cost $1,000.

Prestin Langue from Studio 111 gave disco dance lessons and demonstrations.

About half way through the dance WMCT's Fred Brown came on the scene to lend things up a little and give out free record albums.

Beagle Brown, student DJ's played music and kept the dancers going throughout the 24 hours. They were Doug Clavay, Ken Brown, Randy Fritz and John Blum.

Many prizes donated by various area merchants were given away. Dennis Greese and Jean Petersen won prizes for the best costumes.

Stacey Detweiler won the grand prize of a new Jamco portable television set for raising the most money through pledges. Dori Gamble won second prize and Lara Bombra won third.

The Palatine JC's donated the sound system that was used. The Student Activities Office paid for the use of the cafeteria, public safety and maintenance.

Among food donations were: 18 Ye Old Town Inn pizzas; An Italian U Boat, three-foot long submarine sandwich; Burger King, hamburgers; MacDonald's soft drinks.

Jays potato chips, Cookie Factory cookies and Mister Donut donuts.

The dance participants hope that their efforts will bring the Muscular Dystrophy Association one "dance step" closer to finding a cure. They wish that someday children like Brandon will have the privilege of dancing with others instead of having to watch.

Fred Brown was recently appointed as the new Student Activities Advisor for Harper college after being the temporary advisor for several months.

Spielman qualifies for nationals

by Joe Kunk

It was black Saturday for the Hawks golf team, after leading the field on Friday the Hawks scores went up like helium balloons to place them fifth in the Region IV Regional Meet.

The Hawks were led by standout Scott Spielman, who qualified for nationals the second year in a row.

After the first round of competition the Hawks led with a score of 308. To the Hawks' misfortune the meet did not end there. As the second round scores went up to drop the Hawks out of the running for the team title. DuPapa was the winner of the meet.

"The weather was perfect, just serene and anxiety coated our scores to go up after the first day, which was the cause of our demise," said coach Roger Beechfield.

Spielman shot a 74 on Friday to tie Ed Mar, the eventual winner from Triton for the first day lead. But Scott could not hold the lead which would have made him state champ two years in a row, as on Saturday he shot a 77, still making medalist honors not qualifying for nationals.

All of Harper's golf scores went up on Saturday. Backdown of shooting for both days went Spielman 71-77, Beth Dufek 70-82, Jeff Chamberlain 73-87, and Steve Ford 83-87.

"This year Scott could improve his last year's showing with weather permitting," said Beechfield, as nationals won't be until June and are being held at Odessa, Texas.

IT'S MINE: Ready 'Ner tries to get away from a Wright tackler after intercepting a pass. Helping out is Jeff Corrado (13).

by Rick Delair

After a long, hard season, the efforts of the Harper football team are really paying off. In a hard hitting fast moving game last week the Hawks cruised Wright College 36-0.

The Hawks got off to a flying start with Neil Schmidt's pass to Bill Strawn who took it 33 yards all the way for a score. The kick by Mike Cusack was good and Harper quickly led 7-0. The Hawks kicked to Wright, and their attempts to move the ball against the mighty Hawks defense proved to be futile, so the ball went again to Harper.

The offense lines outstanding effort, continued to give Schmidt the time he needed to make key passes and soon the Hawks were on Wright's 10-yard line. Brian Getzelman carried it in for the score and again Mike Cusack's kick was good making the score 14-0. Again Wright tried to move the ball but Harper's defense led by Mike Schell drove them back, giving the ball back to the Hawks, and setting Harper on for their next score.

This time a pitch-out to Dave Goodfellow, who took it 61 yards all the way for a touchdown, the Hawks then went for the two point conversion and were unsuccessful, leaving the score 20-0. The combined efforts of Getzelman and Goodfellow, with 68 and 56 total yards rushing gave the Hawks a 35-0 lead before the first half was over.

Some of the highlights of the second half were a 32-yard field goal, kicked by Mike Avermann. A 28-yard carry by James Vaccarella and a 48-yard carry by Brian Getzelman with Lane LaRum making a key block on the play. The final score was 36-0 and the Hawks left the field Conference champions.

On to Midwest Bowl!

by Joe Kunk

The Harper Hawks clinched a spot in the Midwest Bowl as they defeated the Kennedy-King Statemen 21-13.

The Hawks will host the bowl game on Nov. 18, and it will be played at Palatine High School at 7:30 p.m. Harper will face the state champs from Muncie.

This was a must game for if they lost they would have to depend on Wright to defeat Rock Valley.

The Hawks came back in the fourth quarter with fifteen points to win the game.

Defense was again the key as the Hawks did not allow Kennedy-King a first down the entire second half. Costly turnovers hurt the Hawks in the first half as Kennedy-King capitalized on them and Harper found themselves behind 13-0.

In the second half the Harper defense set up a score when the usual awesome defensive rush forced the Statemen punter to run and they nailed him at the line of scrimmage.

From there Devin Hensley carried for 16 yards, but with three Statemen gave Harper excellent field position. Neil Schmidt hit Chris Jensen in the endzone with a pass to pull the Hawks within one. Mike Cusack did a rare thing as he missed the point after attempt.

The Hawks took the lead when Schmidt threw a 30 yard pass to Cusack. The two-point attempt failed as the Hawks led 15-13.

The Hawks defense nailed the lid shut when Ralph Florenza picked off a Kennedy-King pass to end the Statemen's hopes for a comeback. Mike Cusack then kicked a 38 yard field goal to make it final 21-13.

The Hawks finished the regular season state champs with an 8 win 1 loss record and were champions of the NAC conference.

Early registration begins today

by Debbie Tinschke

Beginning today, currently or previously enrolled full-time students (15 hours or more) may pick up an appointment to register from the Admissions Office, ASU.

Also, beginning today, Student Development faculty members will be stationed outside their divisional offices to sign and assist students with their educational plans.

They will be available today through Friday and Nov. 20-22 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

For those who don't know, the educational plan is a short, available from the Student Development Center or any divisional office, in which the student must list the classes he intends to take the semester he is registering for and a list of tentative classes he may take the following year at Harper.

Appointment cards for registration at the computer terminals will be given only to students with stated educational plans.

The terminals will be open beginning Wednesday from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m. Registration at the terminals will continue Thursday and Friday and Nov. 20-22 at the same times as Wednesday.

Computer printers with copy course and selection numbers are posted outside divisional offices and in the lounge to help students make up their schedules.

Registration for currently or previously enrolled part-time students (11 hours or less) is to be done by telephone.

Part-time students may call 393-1306 (for 5 or 6.5 to 7 p.m. and

Students needing assistance from Student Development faculty members may contact them Monday through Thursday, 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. and 1 to 4 p.m. and Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Tuition and fees for all students, full and part-time, for the Spring 1979 semester, are due in the Business Office by Dec. 15.

Students who need help with registration may contact one of the following Student Development faculty members:

Students protest purchasing South African stock

by Chip Barlet

EVANSTON, Ill. Turning the 1978 school year, the student movement, urging universities to divest themselves of stock in companies doing business in South Africa became, at last, a national force. The movement is just starting to come together again this school year, but the 300 students and activists that attended the Midwest Conference on University and Corporate Involvement in South Africa have their own protests well under way.

Specifically, the delegates from schools in Michigan, Missouri, Illinois, Ohio, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Iowa arrived here to map plans for a regional information network that would help coordinate their varied activities. They also planned more regional conferences, all of which will be working collectively toward a "national week of action against apartheid" March 18-21, 1979.

Their efforts probably represent the first attempt to build a national protest organization like the one that effectively ended campus anti-war protests during the late sixties and early seventies.

Appropriately, then, conference organizer Heidi Gottfried of the University of Michigan formed the new regional committee standing "regional demonstrations to build for the spring activities."

At the heart of the issue, of course, is university ownership of stocks in companies with major investments in South Africa. Students are demanding the universities divest themselves of the stock, saying ownership is both symbolic and objective support for the racist white minority government of South Africa.

Trustees at some schools, however, are maintaining that either universities should not take a stand on the issue, or that U.S. investments actually help blacks in South Africa. Both these arguments were addressed and debunked at the conference by a series of speakers.

To blacks benefit from continued foreign investment in South Africa," asked Drake Koka, founder of the Black Allied Trade Union movement in that country. Koka related that such a contention was absurd: "Blacks have none of the wealth that they produce," said Koka.

According to Koka, white industrial workers earn an average of $400 per month while their black counterparts earn only $70. In addition, the statistics are even worse: black Koka, with white miners earning $700 per month to the black's $14.

Sam Seidman, an economist and professor at Illinois University, backed up Koka's contention by explaining that U.S. corporations employ less than one percent of the working population in South Africa. Meanwhile, "there are at least $1.5 billion in direct investments in South Africa by U.S. corporations," he pointed out, "and indirect investments probably double that amount."

Seidman, who has authored several books about South Africa, added that even a U.S. ambassador to South Africa never reported that blacks in that country want divestiture because they fear investments by U.S. firms prop up the current minority regime. Seidman charged that the U.S. corporate investments are in fact one of the key factors in supporting the apartheid government that uses a variety of brutal means to suppress the black majority.

As an example of the myth of U.S. firms assisting blacks, Seidman cited Texaco, Inc., which in the past few years has actually reduced the percentage of blacks in its workforce.

Also, while supervisory personnel are encouraged to become members of South African companies, the role is to protect U.S. corporate property in case of a black uprising," said Seidman, who produced secret memos from General Motors to the South African ministry to back up her claims.

Seidman urged students to also pressure local banks to stop selling South African gold Kruggerands; and to lobby to force the U.S. government to cut off all aid to South Africa, and stop all tax credits to U.S. firms doing business there. People must realize that every dollar is money that buys guns and equipment to suppress blacks in South Africa," said Seidman.

New drug test used

CHICAGO Local police may soon have a practical blood test to accurately detect if someone has been drinking marijuana, according to an Illinois technological.

Dr. John Spikes, chief toxicologist of the Illinois Department of Health, says his laboratory has developed a "forensic toxicology" to help law enforcement personnel in Illinois that allows them to submit blood samples from people suspected of being under the influence of marijuana. "I don't think it will be too long before the test becomes a routine police procedure," said Spikes.

Laboratory tests for the presence of marijuana indicators in the bloodstream and urine have been available for several years, but this is the first time a procedure that can stand up as court evidence has been made available to police. Representatives from several laboratories have already visited the Illinois lab, and the procedure could be common police practice within a few years, especially as cases where drivers are suspected in operating their vehicle under the influence of marijuana.

The procedure used is similar to that performed in television's Dr. Quinn, when he tests for the presence of drugs using a gas chromatograph and mass spectrometer. A blood sample is placed in the elaborate mechanism and a computer read-out indicates the presence of THC, the active chemical in marijuana.

Registration . . . confusion and frustration

For many people these next two weeks will be the most confusing of their whole year at Harper. The reason for the confusion is registration.

Many people say that being dragged through a torture chamber would be less upsetting than scheduling, and they are right. Those who have had to go back five and six times to re-do their schedule because classes either were; filled up, overlapping, or non-existent, will vouch for this.

There are basically three types of full-time students at Harper. Career program students, transfer students and undecided students, make up the majority of Harper's full-timers.

To start off, there are those who simply follow one of the career programs. These people have their two years of school mapped out for them and they don't have to go through the dilemma of deciding which courses to take. They have their own problems though, one of which is being able to juggle all of the designated courses into the semester at their appropriate times. If someone happens to be in one of the less populated career programs, he will find that the courses are offered at one time only. In this case if their is a conflict, something has to be dropped completely.

Those who are in a program, but plan to transfer are in the second best position for registering. However, because these people don't follow a strict curriculum, they do have to choose their own courses. They do know what area they are interested in, so they can just narrow it down to a specific field of classes. These people are transfer students of one sort or another and most of them have to meet the new universities requirements for admission, as well as Harper's requirements for graduation. This is when good juggling and the aid of a counselor comes in handy. The most important thing for these people to remember is to keep checking that they aren't wasting their time taking courses that won't help them graduate or transfer. Because university standards change frequently, it's very important to keep double-checking with a counselor.

The people who have the most problems are the Liberal Arts majors. These are the people who are commonly called "undecideds." These people have no idea what they want to major in, so they spend the entire first year taking all the general education requirements.

During the second year they can be best described as the people with the very worried look about them. They don't have a major, and as a result when it comes time for them to choose their semester of electives - they panic. They often spend hours looking through "the book" to find something worthwhile to take. They usually end up taking one course in each vocation and are totally messed up by the third week because of conflicting classes.

In order to avoid as many fatalities as possible, some of the important dates for early registration are listed here. Students should be seeing their counselors either in the halls or by appointment by today. After seeing a counselor, students can take their signed educational planning sheet to the Admissions office, A 213, and pick up appointment to register cards. Computers are open this week from Wednesday to Friday and next week Monday through Wednesday. Students may register by phone on Dec. 3 and 6, if for some reason they can't schedule now. Tuition and fees for spring semester 1979 are due by Dec. 19.

Students shouldn't be scared by this, but they should realize that the best way to handle this complicated and confusing process is to be aware. Early planning and scheduling will prevent most problems.

Tea lover upset by price

Dear Editor,

It's not very big - in fact it's no bigger than a book of matches! It says nothing, never talks back, yet it can give you as much comfort and tends to make even the "hard-core" recipient melt under its applied medication!

It's always been one of mom's home remedies; always sat over ice cubes on a hot day, and even better on a cold day when your chilled to the bone!

It's so easy to use - never makes a mess and yet always ready to relieve you on those tough days or when you through your "diet days".

A small, nonchalant, uncommitted object became a "STAR" quite suddenly on Nov. 7, when the price of tea rose from 15 cents - 10¢ per cup, to 20¢ per cup, and 30¢ per cup.

Wow! If the price rise for everything else in the cafeteria as fast and as high as tea prices rose - the $22,000 plus deficit should be cleared up in no time in our food service!

Legal Aid

by R.J. Demmon, J.D.

Equity will not suffer a reversal to be without a remedy.

Q. I attended, as an invited purchasing agent of my company, its board meeting. The company's lawyer at the meeting advised the board to file an equity suit to stop the adjoining land company's trucks from using our driveway, a short-cut, to reach their loading platform.

Our vice president and sales manager heard the advice and would like to know the meaning of an equity suit.

A. Equity defined is a system of jurisprudence developed by the chancery courts of England and adopted by the United States. It denotes the remedy of common law. One of its basic principles is stated in the first paragraph of this answer.

Where the remedy at law, in your case for damages for each trespass is inadequate, the court of equity will act to avoid a multiplicity of actions by an injunction to prevent wrongful acts such as repeated trespass over your company's property.

The court which by the way tries both law and equity cases—in its jurisdiction, a reviewing order against the trespasser. Punishment for any violation subjects the trespasser to pay money for contempt of court. Am. Jur. 3d Real. Prop. 1-10.

Q. If real and personal property is held in joint tenancy in Arizona and South Dakota, does it have to pass to the survivor without probate court administration?

A. In South Dakota real and personal property—bank accounts and stocks and bonds—pass to the survivor and with the tenancy "as either or survivor," and in the trustee deed of real property "as either or survivor" joint tenancy before these properties pass to the survivor without probate. (S.D. Law 10-22-3).

Arizona requires the transfer of real property to those assets which it was held in joint tenancy, the property passes to the survivor without probate court administration.

Personal property bank accounts and investments must be of record in joint tenancy, with the bank and the trustees of the securities before it passes to the survivor without probate court administration. (ARS Sec. 3-3-201 to 3-3-202).

Q. Can I be reinstated as a beneficiary in my former husband's policy? He removed me as a beneficiary shortly after we were divorced. I worked during our marriage and contributed to the family income. The divorce was in Florida.

A. Florida Statute (see 63-14) says that the amount of money maintenance may be increased or decreased by order of the court when circumstances and financial ability change. But when the parties have agreed and the court has approved the amount each shall receive of the property, the family has acquired during the marriage by their efforts, generally one does not need to be paid by other party will cause the court to enter the agreed upon distribution.

How to save money on nearly anything

by Ralph Deangelis

Rising prices and high inflation rates are plaguing the country and robbing the purchasing power of the average consumer a dollar.

College students are particularly hard hit by these occurrences because they normally work full time only for a few months of the year. Their budgets are therefore very limited.

Saving money on some basic items can do much toward creating the spendable income a student or other individual enjoys. A few easy to follow rules will help along this line.

The most important rule to follow when buying anything is to shop around before making any purchases. Often this can be done before leaving the house. Most sales in grocery stores begin on Fridays or the Thursday edition of the newspaper is a good place to start looking for bargains.

Bates on other items are usually announced in the Sunday editions of the papers. Almost all stores will have an ad on one of these days, on the last bargain can be made out. Most times one does not know until there is a sale on an item you need. There the bargains have been found make a list of what needs to be bought and where.

This list-making technique will also cut down on impulse buying. This will save money because often items bought on impulse appeal to the buyer only in the store and are found not to be needed when they are brought home.

When comparing the sales advertised in the newspapers to save the merchandise is really offered at a sale price and not just advertised.

Other ways to save money on purchases are through the use of bulk buying. Many items that have long shelf lives can be purchased in quantity. This technique should be carefully used because often if the items are spoiled or wasted the price per unit will turn out to be more than the single item price in the store.

While buying items, no matter what they are, investigate the less well-known brands. Many stores offer special house brands at lower prices than nationally advertised items. Often the goods are the same, but only through careful comparison can the true bargains be found.

When buying these special brands be careful to check the quality and service contracts behind these products. Some brands are reputable and will back their products because they are of good quality. Other companies are merely interested in a quick sale and won't provide any service after a sale is made.

A good way to guarantee the quality of the products bought is to buy from the reputable merchant, who will many times stand behind the products even if the manufacturer doesn't. Reliable stores can be found through advice and through a success relationship in the past with the merchant.

Smokers urged to quit

Stop Smoking, Thursday, Nov. 15

The American Cancer Society is urging that smokers all across the land abandon their cigarettes, at least for that day and Harper will be participating in this event.

Last year the American Cancer Society estimated that more than 5 million people checked cigarettes during "The Great American Smokeout." The average American smoker consumes 4,500 cigarettes a year, spending enough money that if saved, could increase the bank accounts of most smokers by a sizable sum. A pack-a-day smoker spends approximately $200 a year for the habit that stinks, causes multiple health problems and shortens life expectancy, according to the American Cancer Society.

Per capita consumption of cigarettes has been steadily declining, indicating a growing trend to quit smoking.

One socially prominent psychiatrist called this trend "cultural recommitment." People are aware that cigarette smoking is bad for their health, and it's just not "cool" to be foolish.

Though women used to feel safe from lung cancer because the death rate was low for women compared with that for men, this picture is beginning to change alarmingly. The female lung cancer death rate has doubled in the past 10 years. The risk of death from lung cancer for women who are heavy cigarette smokers is five times that of non-smoking women.

Women who smoke heavily have nearly three times as much bronchitis or emphysema, about 75 percent more chronic sinusitis and 50 percent more peptic ulcers.

Playing cards are available in the Library, Health Service and Student Activities office. Smokers are urged to sign a card and give it a try Thursday during the Great American Smokeout and take a day off from smoking.

Correction

Last week the Harbinger ran a picture near the story about the Murderer, Dystrophy, Dance-a-thon. The picture did not have a picture. It was a picture of Dennis Hygiene's Fashion show and not the Dance-a-thon.

Peers help students

This is the second part of a series of articles about Harper College's Counselors

by Mark Frazer

Compared to last year the peer counseling program has dramatically expanded. During the 1978 spring semester, the program was staffed by seven counselors. This semester it has a record membership of thirteen counselors. Fellow peer counselors Rodger Fuller and Mrs. Elie Lorkowski agree that the program provides a necessary service to Harper students.

Fuller is majoring in liberal arts and is aiming toward a future in counseling or public relations. In addition to peer counseling, Fuller plays defensive end for the Harper Hawks, and is active in a youth organization known as Bus City. Mrs. Lorkowski is a full-time student in psychology, is business management. She has gained admittance to the Harper fraternity Phi Theta Kappa.

Fuller finds it fascinating, informing and exciting fellow students. "Freshmen just don't know enough about Harper and what it has to offer them. We peer counselors provide information about the college in a very sincere person to person basis."

People who are available to listen, interpret, and assist fellow students, characterize peer counselors to a tee," says Mrs. Lorkowski. "We provide an informative and vitally important service to the students." The reason for Mrs. Lorkowski's amiable attitude of the program is that last year she received a lot of advice and understanding from many of the former peer counselors. She can be contacted through the Women's Center which is open 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

To find out about the peer counseling program, contact a student counselor through the counseling center in bldg. A or the Women's Center in P 127.

Peer counselor Mrs. Elie Lorkowski is also involved with the Women's Center.

THE RTA EXPRESS

ANOTHER GREAT RUN FOR YOUR MONEY.

Revised bus route serves Harper College.

More students commute via bus.

The students of William Rainey Harper College will continue to enjoy regular bus service to school. The newly revised 693 bus serves the college, as well as Northwest Community Hospital and the new Center for the Handicapped. Students who commute to school via RTA's North Western commuter service can catch the bus at the Arlington Heights Station. The map below shows you the route of the 693. The bus runs at convenient times weekdays, the fare is only 88 cents.

Free schedules for the 693 may be obtained by writing RTA, P.O. Box 2938, Chicago, IL 60690. Or one may call RTA Travel Information toll free 800-672-3900. For best service, calls should be made in the evening.

Inexpensive transfer provides travel in six counties.

For an additional dime, students and other gas shoppers may purchase an RTA Universal Transfer, which is good for transportation on most RTA bus services in the six counties of Cook, Lake, McHenry, DuPage, Kane and Will.

Horoscope

ARIES: (March 21 to April 19)-Relax, enjoy cultural pursuits or take a short vacation if possible. You can work at a calm and steady pace, inspiring others to follow your lead. Good time to prevent your ideas and gain cooperative help.

TAURUS: (April 20 to May 20)-You can resolve a matter about which you have a legitimate complaint. A constructive approach will allow you to fulfill your desires. Social life is favored, with new people and activities coming into your life.

GEMINI: (May 21 to June 20)-Past efforts are about to "pay off" for you if you continue to do your very best. Work to create more understanding between you and a romantic partner. Retain your individuality—make your position clear.

CANCER: (June 21 to July 21)-Counteract feelings of acidity by being around friends and "counting your blessings." A domestic matter you've been putting off needs doing now to avoid feelings of guilt. Watch diet, health and get lots of rest.

LEO: (July 22 to Aug. 31)-Get your mind off yourself by doing things for others. Guard valuables carefully, be constructive and responsible. Don't allow excessive social life to sap your energies. A new relationship could come into your life now.

VIRGO: (Aug. 31 to Sept. 22)-Make contracts—start a study program or plan a trip. Don't allow day dreaming to interfere with your efficiency on the job. Not a good time for making important decisions. Keep social life calm and lowkey.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23 to Oct. 31)-Elderly family members or friends may need your attention now. An old friend or romance could "reappear" and "that old feeling" may still be there. Take care of home repairs or maintenance to avoid bigger problems later.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 31 to Nov. 31)-Take a seat on the sidelines and carefully observe the actions of others. Good time to study in the areas where more skill is required on the job. To deal best with competition, be progressive in your thinking. Craft impulse and extravagance—make no promises or commitments you cannot keep.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)-Organize your work and concentrate on efficiency. Don't allow pleasure activities to interfere with duty. Take care of domestic matters, such as repairs and maintenance. Exercise patience with family members.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22 to Jan. 31)-Your hopes and dreams could be quite unrealistic at this time. You may want to touch and be rid or detached with a loved one. Try to be more relaxed emotionally. Respect other people's opinions.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 31 to Feb. 28)-Take care of budget matters—taxes and bills. Fix things around the home that you've been putting off. Try to solve disagreements with loved ones through open discussion and resist emotional displays.

PISCES: (Feb. 29 to March 20)-You may have many trysts in the fire, but your energy is high and you can do it! Single Pisceans could begin a romance and those who are married should resist the temptation to get involved in no new situation.

Students visit radio station

by Tom Schneke

One of the main objectives of the Harper College Electronics program is to apply concepts as they relate to industry. On Nov. 1, 14 students from Dr. Richard Bernstein's EIT 83 class visited the transmitter facilities of WMAQ Radio in nearby Bloomington.

The tour of the facilities, which date back to the early 1920's, when a Westinghouse Company experimental station broadcasted from the site, included a fallout shelter, buried underground for broadcasting during an attack.

WMAQ's transmitter supervisor, Ken Steininger, explained how the various components of the operation, such as the actual transmitter and the antenna which stands over 70 ft. tall, apply to the concepts being taught in the electronics program.

Most of the students found the tour quite interesting, because most had never realized what went into the actual broadcasting of radio. The EIT 83 class is a second-year course in the Electronics Technology career program.

Generally Speaking..

By Cindy Caravella

Think of how many times you have been harassed by your family with the little things that they manage to do to you. I'm not talking about brutal force or physical abuse. I'm referring to their annoying ability to do things that really irritate you, like hounding Ann Lander's column in the refrigerator where they're sure you'll see it before attacking the food that awaits you inside.

How is it that every time your mother or father reads her column, they automatically think of you? Instead of simply asking you to read her column, they feel compelled to point it to the refrigerator accompanied with a little note especially for you. "Please read this Johnny. Love, Mom." Even though they realize how it disgusts you, they display her advice for all to see as if it were the American flag. It can get pretty tedious to be subjected to looking at letters like, "Lonely in Louisiana," or "Virgins at 25" every time you walk into your kitchen.

In you ever feel that Ann or her sister, Dear Abby, are running your life? It's amazing to think about how many people actually take their advice so seriously. If you've ever looked at either Ann's or Abby's column, then you know that they'll not only tell you what to do but your weekend barbecue, but they'll also tell you how many cherubs to put on the grill and how much butter to use.

What about the 15-year-old, let's pretend girl who writes in for some solid advice on the best form of birth control? The letter editor joins with every sentence and you're almost embarrassed to read any further. Then comes the advice: The best form of birth control is the pill, stick it between your legs. Besides dropping the poor, confused girl on her face, they probably had someone telephone the girl's parents to let them in on the latest gossip.

How about the depressed, overweight drug-dependent teen who's on the verge of committing suicide and all the advice that he can get is to consult a physician if things should get worse. Who can help but become confused when someone tells you to have more respect for your parents even if they do beat you every night just for the fun of it?

It's getting to the point that if Ann tells you it's rude to leave the dinner table even though you just realized your left contact lens, then you'd better not get up until you've finished that last bit of gristle on your plate.

You may want to look at it from Ann Lander's point of view. Maybe she's just sick and tired of people bending her ear with their trivial problems like, "What do you do with a mother-in-law that's 10 years old and going strong?" By giving us absurd solutions to our problems, Ann Lander and Abby could be telling us to log off and figure it out on our own.

But then again, maybe they get a real kick out of reading about somebody else's psychic, marriage or failed-up marriage. Perhaps it's a form of entertainment for them. Try to picture yourself as the giver of advice. If you were experiencing problems of your own, wouldn't you love to read about somebody else who is headed up every night by their drunken spouse? It would make your worries seem so little.

If that's the case, then "Suicide Sally" had better look elsewhere for some practical advice on how to cope with her life or she'll never amount to more than a cobweb hanging on someone's refrigerator door.

Service planned

In the name of Harper College President James McGrath welcomes all students, faculty and staff to join in a Thanksgiving Ecumenical Service. It is a time for people of all faiths to gather together as one community giving thanks and praise to God for all of our blessings.

Pastors of all denominations from the churches of the northwest suburbs have been invited to participate in the celebration.

The Concert Choir, under the direction of Mr. Jerry F. Davidson, will be present to perform two selections. The service has been planned by McGrath, Davidson from the Music Department, Mary Jo Willis from the Drama Department, students Faith Gelfand and Mike Hahn, and Campus Ministers Sister Peggy Breunert and Sister Julie Flynn.

On Nov. 20 it might be good to take time from your daily routine to join in the Thanksgiving Ecumenical Celebration from 10:30 A.M. to 1:30 P.M. Refreshments will follow.

Cabaret opens here

by Sue Conroy

For the next week certain performances will be given that no one should miss, but unfortunately some people will have to:

Every showing of "Cabaret" at Harper is sold out from opening night Nov. 5 to closing night Nov. 19. The fact that the play is sold out already, is one way of telling a truly deserving show. After seeing the production anyone will note that the show is truly spectacular. The play is set in Berlin, Germany during the years 1930-31 just before the starting of the third reich. The master of ceremonies, ruminations and strange is played extravagantly by Brian Crow. He starts off by welcoming us to the cabaret where everything is "underful." Bad situations, politics and even marriage are taken so lightly by the people in the cabaret that the issues become non-existent. Everyone has a good time at the cabaret.

We are then introduced to a struggling American author who has traveled Europe extensively to find the proper surroundings to write his novel. The first German he meets takes advantage of him and sets the scene for the rest of the young man's encounters. Dan Crowley portrays the naive yet sincere Clifford Brundage, who gets wrapped up in the exciting lifestyle of Berlin that he never starts his novel.

Next we are introduced to the leading lady, if you will, Sally Bowles. Peggy Gier is this bizarre woman who drives on the fantasy lived by all the members of the cabaret. The performance is truly unpredictable and unbelievable, as one can never be sure what the eccentric female will do next.

After the introduction to our male characters a series of events begins to fall into place leading to the Nazi take-over of Germany. A Jewish-German engagement is formed and then abruptly ended. Bruce Weaver and Catherine Crump are able to tear emotions out of the audience after their short but delightful romance is ended, all because of their conflicting deviants.

A lady of the evening, or the day, or the morning, or whenever she feels like it is played seductively but harshly by Linda Mueller. Later as she joins the Nazi ranks with Ernst Ludwig, a shifty smuggler played by Harold LeFevre, her stony tough appearance makes the audience realize that they are in the audience and not a stage-confessing her. Throughout the trouble, despair, and heartache, the master of ceremonies sits strolling near the stage and sings that he is "Killing Pretty" while everyone else is falling apart.

The mood and the setting of the musical drama, are as real that the audience is pulled through each scene by all the intensity and emotion of the characters, because the suspense never ceases. For those who have tickets to this performance enjoy. For those who don't GET SOME.

The Women's Center's Wednesday lunch program moved into the hallway in Building P to make room for a demonstration of Japanese Floral Arranging given by Ms. Akiko Tomoka.

This Wednesday's lunch program will center on "Women in Traditional Occupations," a discussion based on recent articles in Time Magazine. The Nov. 22 session will feature an open discussion in the spirit of Thanksgiving. (photo by Mike Woodard)

Harper Hawks host Midwest Bowl

The powerful Hawk offense led by quarterback Neil Schmidt, hopes to put the football in its proper place, 7:30 p.m. (photo by Mike Wenden)

Defense, Offense ready for big victory

by Joe Kueck

Harper's football team overcomes their most successful season in its history when they face the state champion from Minnesota in the Midwest Bowl this Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at Palatine H.S.

The Hawks ended the season state champs and NAC conference champions with a 7-1 record, and 8-1 overall.

The Hawks offense was no less than awesome as they averaged over 30 points a game and rolled up 300 yards in total offense. The defense held their own as they held the opposition to 18 points per game. The defense had two shutouts in their credit and had three games where they gave up only one TD.

Fourth-down leaders for the Hawks were quarterback Neil Schmidt with one, following him was Brian Getelman with seven and Dave Bodgesheimer with five.

Leading ground leaders for Harper were: Getelman 97 yards for 456 yards, avg. 5.2; Bodgesheimer 81 yards for 512 yards, avg. 5.6; Devin Heasley 87 yards for 496 yards, avg. 5.7; Schmidt 181 yards for 307 yards, avg. 2.4. Schmidt, also passed for 1190 yards, completing 45 percent of his passes.

The team averaged 380 yards per game while the Hawk defense only yielded a little over a hundred.

The Harper secondary killed many drives as they intercepted 22 of their opponents' passes. Leading the left ring was Randy Nys with six.

A recap of the Hawks games are as follows: Harper 14-Dubuque 7; Harper 17-Tri-8 (Irford); Harper 36-Rock Valley 28; Harper 27-Thornock 7; Harper 31-DuPave 28; Harper 16-Minns Valley 66; Harper 36-Concordia; Harper 36-Juliet 7; Harper 36-Wright 8; Harper 21-Kennedy-King 13.

A victory in the Midwest Bowl would not give Harper the junior college championship, but would put them high in the national rankings.

So remember your last choice to see the Illinois state champ this Saturday, 7:30 p.m. at Palatine H.S.

Brydges finishes fifth

by Joe Kueck

The Harper cross-country team ended its season on an upswing as they finished third in the NAC conference race, being edged by Triton by eight points in the battle for second. Wright college ran away with the title as they totaled 22 points to Triton's 71 and Harper's 79. Sam Polkian of Wright was the individual winner covering the five-mile course in 25:35.

Jeff Brydges was the first man for the Hawks as he placed 5th making all-conference honors, with a time of 26:34, which occurred to coach Bob Nolan was his best race of the year.

Jim Lancaster and Jon Langelier ran their best races for the year. Both narrowly missed making all-conference with Jim finishing 10th and Jon 12th with all-conference being the top ten. Lancaster's time was 27:55 with Langelier right behind at 28:36.

Joe Hiza came in at 31:36 good for 22nd and Tim Henneman finished 29th with a time of 31:44.

"We ran a good race last year, if we could have gotten Henneman a little further up we might've taken Triton. I really have to commend that team on how they prepared for every race. Their practice attendance was good and they worked hard every day," said Nolan.

Coach Nolan said even though Brydges did not qualify for nationals this year, this race still proves him as one of the better runners in the state. Nolan figures him to be one of the top runners in track in the 5,000 and 800 meters.

Nolan then went on to talk about the other individuals on the squad. "Jim Lancaster was our number two man all season, a steady performer and next year should be one of the top 10 to 15 runners in the state."

"Joe Langier, like Lancaster, has the potential to be in the top ten. A season of competition should help them very much."

Joe Hiza really hoped this team he did a tremendous job considering he never ran college cross country before, he was the junior college state champ in wrestling at 188 lbs. last year.

"Tom Henneman was somewhat inconsistent, as his work schedule probably was a factor. He should have a stronger track season."

"Mark White deserves credit for sticking with it and could improve greatly next season as he did not have a very strong cross country background."

Coach Nolan was in preparing for the upcoming indoor/outdoor track season. "We have a lot of track talent in the school," said Nolan, as he feels the team should be strong in the running events and field events are always a question, especially now as the team lost an all-American weight man. He is hoping the team will be factor in the conference and regional meets.

There will be a meeting for those interested in track early in December and students should watch for announcements posted around school.

and the team plays in two tournaments.

The team plays its first game of the year Nov. 21 vs. Chaffin at St. Viator, at all home games are and they all start at 4 p.m.

Basketball prepares for season

by Joe Kueck

Harper Hawks basketball starts its '79-'80 season 30 miles over a week and head coach Roger Berthel told his made final roster cuts.

The team, like most Harper athletics, has few returning lettermen. The only two returning on this year's squad are Jeff Chamberlain and Ron Warren.

The rest of the team members are: Craig Chappell, Bob Dorsey, Jeff Martinson, John Moran, Craig Hixson, Scott Hawkins, Brad Slicker, Brian Wright, Ron Drake and Faurice Rojas.

"We should be a little quicker than last year, and better off in bounds," said Berthel, as he will work his team to improve their win loss record of last year.

The team plays approximately 18 games, 12 of which are at home.

Building M nears completion

by Judy Saunders

After several years of planning and 17 months of construction, Harper's $5,675,000 athletic building, labeled Building M, is nearing the final stages of completion. The opening of the athletic center is slated for late spring.

Building M, which covers 97,100 square feet, was included in the college's 1968 master plan for campus construction. The structure was originally designed as three separate buildings, but was incorporated into one facility for an approximate savings of $200,000.

A fee structure for use of the building by students, faculty, administrators and community members was developed to absorb some of the expense of operating Building M. Estimates for yearly operating costs for the center include heating-$17,756; electricity $67,800; and water and sewage $6,000.

This new physical fitness center replaces the athletic barn which was destroyed by fire on June 3, 1972. The barn was a temporary facility used to conduct physical education classes and an area to hold team sports.

"Harper's insurance company held an investigation to determine the cause of the fire and they ruled out arson. The fire was the result of spontaneous combustion in the shed which we used to store equipment. The entire building was destroyed, nothing was saved," said Dr. Guern Fautner, vice president of student affairs.

As a result of the loss of adequate athletic facilities, Harper cut numerous physical education courses and lost many students interested in the program. Approximately 70 percent of the physical education and intramural programs were cancelled. Severing off-campus facilities was a difficult and time consuming task for the athletic department.

"Not having proper facilities had a direct effect on our program. We had to find off-campus facilities that met our needs and the losses that we could use them placed a hardship on the coaches and players. This discouraged some students from participating in our program and on our sports teams," said John Gelch, associate dean of physical education.

After several years of "making do" with available space and equipment, the athletic department is preparing to occupy the new building. The staff has examined programs at other colleges and reviewed reports of the Illinois Community College Board and the Illinois Association of Health, Physical Education and Recreation. Existing courses and future curriculum plans are being investigated.

Physical education courses which will be offered next fall include archery, golf, bowling, badminton, tennis, modern dance, racquetball, basketball, weight training, aquatics, volleyball and numerous other classes which are still in the planning stages.

Harper board member Shirley Mason said "the new building will serve the college and members of the community as a recreational and cultural center, as a large auditorium for such functions as commencement, and as a competition center for sports and cultural events. It is designed to provide the kind of instructional space the college has lacked for so long, and which is a necessary element of a comprehensive community college."

The massive structure houses numerous educational and recreational facilities. The largest teaching station in the center is the multi-use gymnasium which is surrounded by a 10 lap mile track.

Nets can be dropped from the ceiling to section the gym into four separate modules enabling four different activities to be held simultaneously. Spectator seating will be available for approximately 2,700 people.

Also included in the gymnasium is a permanent stage, designed for concerts and lectures, with overhead lights hooked into the ceiling.

The swimming pool, which is located on the first floor of the building, stretches across 35 yards and can be viewed through second floor windows. The movable bulkhead in the swimming pool is an option which enables the pool to be converted from yards to meters for swimming competition.

The swimming pool with the bulkhead is a real plus for our overall recreational needs. It can move without any problems, Gelch said.

There is a total of 14 different teaching stations. Each room or area is designed to be used for several different activities. There are separate instructional areas for wrestling, gymnastics and weight training, with a dance studio located on the second floor.

Both the men's and women's locker rooms are fully equipped with showers and sauna facilities. There are also six indoor tennis courts and six hand-ball courts, two which have spectator seating for tournament play.

"The value of our facility is that we have so many things in the building. We have an adequate size fieldhouse which enables two or three teams to practice at the same time. This is very important to the athletes and permanent to the college." (continued to page 2) need athletic teams." Gets said. Eventually a cardio vascular fitness center will be installed in the building. This center was included in the earlier plans for the building, but because of the enormous expense involved in implementing the program it was dropped.

"We would need a full time director who was trained in physiology and it would also require close medical supervision. Some of the equipment is available now but our budget can't absorb the cost of the program. It is a possibility for two or three years from now," said Fischer.

College officials have received several requests from groups in the community to use the building, including the Olympics for Retarded Citizens in the Northwest Suburbs and the local YMCA. A campaign will begin soon to inform the community of the centers availability for rental. During the spring an open house will be held for coaches of area elementary and secondary schools.

"This center is one of the best awareness efforts with regard to our local high school students. Because of a full curriculum we hope to see an increase in students in the physical education program and have it carry over to the other programs," Fischer said.

Harper bands perform

The Harper College Wind Ensemble and Jazz Band will present a concert on Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Lounge, bldg. A. The program is open to the public free of charge.

The Wind Ensemble, directed by Dr. Robert Tillotson, will feature two original works for wind instruments, "Crede" by Father Tall and "Sister Dances" by Norman Davis. "Crede," organized in a tripartite form, is in the nature of a profession of faith while "Sister Dances," commissioned by the Town of Concord, Massachusetts, to commemorate the Bicentennial of 1776, is a three movement work for a comedy by Aristophanes.

Other works to be performed include an arrangement by John Krance of "Lola Flores," a traditional Spanish paso doble; "O Saved Head Now Wounded" and "Now Thank We All Our God" from "Three Chorale Preludes" by William Latham; and "Two Marches for the Sultan Abdul Medjid" by Gaetano Donizetti and Gioacchino Rossini.

The Jazz Band, directed by Roy Vumbrack, will perform two works from the Coast Radio Library, "Major Vee" and "May Bummer." Jay Chattaway's "Superbone meets the Badman" as recorded by Maynard Ferguson; Greg Tippa arrangement of "Caravan"; and two arrangements by Roy Vumbrack of "Cool Fool" and "Minor Blues."

The concert is one of a series of programs made possible through the Harper College Music Department. Further information is available from Dr. Tillotson at 307-0000, ext. 569.

Generally Speaking..

by CINDY CARAVELLO

Everyone knew it would happen sooner or later. The traditional Thanksgiving Day turkeys finally made their long anticipated break for freedom. Pictured above, is the leader of the turkeys, who didn't quite make a clean getaway.

Last night there was a violent outburst at the Pontiac State Retention Center for Turkeys. It seems that the turkeys have been planning this escape for months.

According to the head guard, everything was quite calm until about midnight when all hell broke loose. "I was making my usual rounds to see if the turkey count was correct," he said, "when all of a sudden I heard what seemed to be a loud chewing noise."

That loud chewing noise was the army of 3,000 turkeys who were chewing their way through the wooden gate that kept them prisoners for so long. Ballistic reports showed that there were over a million teeth marks on the gate and on the surrounding posts that held the pen together.

It seems that the turkeys knew that this was going to be Thanksgiving week and they wanted no part of it. Only 200 of the turkeys could not make the climb over the high retention wall that surrounds the entire prison. It was believed that the escapees are probably half way to Canada by now. The National Guard was alerted and roadblocks were set up at all major intersections and at the state lines.

I managed to get an exclusive Harper interview with one of the Turkeys, Tom Turkey, a 3-pound Butterball who was very cooperative with my questions. I was especially interested in the reason behind all of the turkey unrest. Tom seemed very aggravated with this particular question and began to go on a rampage. "We can't put up with these conditions anymore. The pens where they keep us aren't fit for pigs! There aren't any recreational facilities and the food is just terrible. Our main grievance is that every year around this time, this place turns into one big bloodbath. Things are really fouled up."

Tom took the time to inform me that for generations, turkeys from all over the U.S. have been brought to the Pontiac State Retention Center for Turkeys and left there until Thanksgiving week, when they are mercilessly slaughtered, plucked, and delivered to supermarkets across the nation only to become somebody's main course. But not all of the violence was on the part of the turkeys. The guards brutally roughed up most of the turkeys and then sent them to the head of the corrections division. The guards were ordered to put the turkeys in solitary confinement until they are certain as to who instigated the uprising. The turkeys will be allowed no fresh air, no clean cells, and no bathing privileges until further notice.

I later found out that Tom Turkey was removed from his cell, handcuffed and brought downtown for an indepth interrogation to get to the bottom of this problem quickly. Officials finally got Tom to spill his guts about the whole operation. He reluctantly revealed that the escapees were not on their way to Canada, but they were on their way to Washington to put the pressure on Carter to support an Anti-Turkey Day bill, which would make buffalo the official meat for Thanksgiving. This would, of course, mean that Americans would have to refer to Thanksgiving as Buffalo Day instead of Turkey Day.

The warden at the Pontiac State Retention Center for Turkeys commented that he hasn't seen this much trouble since the Easter Bunny riots of 1967 where 500 rabbits from all over the U.S. burned their Easter bunnies in the Civic Center Plaza to protest being forced into painting and delivering eggs to kids they didn't even know.

The Harbinger Christmas issue will be Dec. 11. Students wishing to submit original prose or poetry for this issue must do so by noon Dec. 5.

Bike path proposed by Senate

by Cindy Caravella

A bike path that would help students who ride their bikes to Harper was proposed by the chairman of the task force of the Student Senate, Greg Moore, at a recent meeting. This would allow students the opportunity to ride a bike to school without having to travel under roads such as Racine or Algonquin.

Not only would these paths help out Harper students, but anyone else who frequents the busy roads would be able to use them also, said Moore.

A petition will be in the senate office by Monday where students will be able to sign it and as it is taken to the Student Senators about the new bike path.

Moore, along with the other four members of the task force, Pete Minichiusi, Linda Mueller, Dave Fleischer, and Debbie Wandler will be contacting other communities that already have bicycle paths for their residents, to see what is actually involved in getting a bicycle path for the Harper Community.

Students are urged to make suggestions or comments on this proposal. Any comments or additional ideas should be submitted to the Student Senate (Write on the third floor of B-A).

Movies

"The Twelve Chairs," "I Love you, Alice B. Toklas" and "Casino Royale" will be presented at Harper this Wednesday from 10:30 a.m. to 12 p.m. in A321. Students are admitted for free.

"The Twelve Chairs" is directed by Mel Brooks and stars Dom DeLuise and Mel Brooks. "I Love you, Alice B. Toklas" stars Peter Sellers. "Casino Royale" also stars Peter Sellers, along with David Niven and Woody Allen.

These movies are sponsored by the Program Board.

'Heroes'

"Heroes" will be presented at Harper Dec. 1 at 8 p.m. in E328. Students are admitted for 75 cents. One guest is allowed per student.

The film stars Henry Fonda and Sally Field in a story of a Vietnam veteran's reintegration into society who along the way meets and falls in love with an equally confused man.

The film is rated PG. Sponsored by Program Board.

Blood drive

All interested students are invited to give blood at a blood drive Nov. 26 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in A321. The donation will cover both the donor and his immediate family.

The donor must be in good health, be between the ages of 17 to 40, weigh at least 110 pounds and wait eight weeks between donations.

Over 10,000 pints of blood are transfused in the United States every day over 7,000,000 pints a year. The need for blood keeps increasing and the only way this need can be met is through an equally increasing number of active volunteer blood donors.

The North Suburban Blood Center is the agency that will be on campus for the drive. This agency provides the blood for our major north and northwest suburban hospitals.

Volunteers are also needed to assist with registration. For more information students may call ext. 340 or inquire at the Health Service office, A321.

Drinking

What can you do when the person you're riding with has consumed too much alcohol? A film on the subject, "Drinking Driver-What Could You Do?" will be shown Tuesday at noon in the lounge, bldg. A.

Nationally, since 1970, there has been a 38 per cent increase in the number of alcohol related traffic accidents involving the driver under 20 years of age. A large number of traffic accidents are also caused by those persons over 20 years of age who also drink and drive.

Don't become a national statistic over the Thanksgiving weekend. If you drink, don't drive.

Thanksgiving

All students, faculty, and staff are invited to the Thanksgiving Ecumenical Service at 11 a.m. today in F202.

It is a time for all faiths to gather together as one community giving thanks and praise to God for all of our blessings. Refreshments will follow.

THE RTA EXPRESS

ANOTHER GREAT RUN FOR YOUR MONEY.

Revised bus route serves Harper College.

More students commute via bus.

The students of William Rainey Harper College will continue to enjoy regular bus service to school. The newly revised 693 bus serves the college as well as North-Western Community Hospital and Meadows Center for the Handicapped. Students who commute to school via RTA's North-Western commuter service can catch the bus at the Arlington Heights Station. The map below shows you the route of the 693. The bus runs at convenient times weekdays, the fare is only 30 cents.

Free schedules for the 693 may be obtained by writing RTA, P. O. Box 7038, Chicago, IL 60640. Or one may call RTA Travel Information toll free 800 472-7860. For best service, calls should be made in the evening.

Inexpensive transfer provides travel in six counties.

For an additional dime, students and other passengers may purchase an RTA Universal Transfer, which is good for transportation on most RTA bus services in the six counties of Cook, Lake, McHenry, DuPage, Kane and Will.

Legal Aid

Q. Our one-half acre family homestead in California adjoins open field acreage. Our private hedge slightly over laps into the adjoining field. We are anxious to know if the owner of the field can chop down our hedge.
A. Land boundary questions from adjoining land owners frequently appear in our mail.

To save your hedge, the common law (AM. Jur. 3d, 1st ed. Boundaries Sec. 77:14) offers several ways of settling uncertain boundary lines: (1) by acquiescence of adjoining land owners where the line shall be mutually recognized in the true line. (2) by a written agreement, conveyance, or an oral agreement if the line is in dispute, but such oral agreement becomes conclusive only against the owners and those claiming under them.

Finally, if a court action is filed to establish a line of record, either adjoining owner can file for ejectment or trespass. Some states have a statutory procedure for such actions.

Q. My brother died on June 1, 1978. My letters to the administrator of his estate are unanswered. The bulk of his estate was paid in the summer of 1977 to a woman who has been planning herself off as my brother's sister but who is in relation at all to him, and has managed to get herself in the position of joint tenant and beneficiary. What can his folks do?

A. If your brother was a resident of Florida, his estate would be administered in the county circuit court, probate division, in the county where he lived. The clerk of the court will inform you, his sister, to whom his estate was distributed (Fla. Stat. Sec. 36.02).

Your letter states your brother was "retarded and somewhat illiterate," and the heir to his estate is a woman who misrepresents herself as his sister; if proved, the law says the woman used undue influence amounting in fraud which gives the court the power to invalidate your brother's actions (AM. Jur. 3d, 2d ed. Undue Influence, Fraud).

Q. My husband died without a will. Our home in Hawaii where we live was held in joint tenancy with both of our names on the deed. The administrator of my husband's estate says that the deed shows both of our names, but if I don't show it was held in joint tenancy with the right of survivorship. I will not become the sole owner of the home without probate court administration or any husband and I planned.

What does the law say about this?
A. The deed, beside your joint names, also must show it was intended as a joint tenancy with the right of survivorship before you can claim your home as sole owner without probate court administration (Ha. Rev. Stat. Sec. 388.1).

Have your lawyer check the law on tenancy by the entirety (Carnegie Digest News Service).

Movie actor visits Harper

In preparation for his upcoming film, "Hush," actor Paul Servino spent some time here at Harper with the deaf students and faculty.

"Hush" is the true story of Donald Lang, a black deaf mute who is accused of murdering a prostitute. Due to his inability to communicate in his defense, Lang is deemed incompetent to stand trial.

Lang, a former shopping dock loader, communicated with his fellow workers by simple gestures as opposed to sign language and deaf education. LaVar Burton portrays Lang in the movie. He shows movie scheduled to air early next year on CBS.

Norris, who has starred in "Oh, God," "Blind Brothers" and "A Touch of Class," portrays Lowell Myers, Lang's deaf attorney. Myers asks out to expose the frustration and discrimination the deaf must endure in today's society.

Paper aids Journalism majors

by Joan Peterson

Since professionalism is the key to success in the business world, the Harper Journalism program is designed to make sure that its students through the Voice, a tabloid newspaper published by the Copy, Hearing and Editing class. It provides students with experience in all aspects of newspaper production.

Students write news, feature and short stories and edit all copy. They work in publicity, circulation, advertising, and layout.

"The Voice is a unique learning experience," said Suzanne Marie, coordinator of the Journalism program. "I know of no other college or university in the state that uses the laboratory newspaper as a teaching technique. Students are able to touch all aspects of newspaper publication."

Joe Furlin, Schaumburg, said as promotion manager, he is confident of his campaign which includes live ways of "Redeemer Specials" from the Playboy Resort and Country Club in Lake Geneva.

It's a weekend vacation at the resort, including free food, lodging and so on. Furlin explains that it's only the beginning. Many Harper Journalism students have been successful such as John Watkins, the news director of a San Francisco radio station. The lead writer for the Harney Miller show, Reinhold Weese, is one of the ten highest paid writers in the country and a graduate of the program.

Fall sports end winning year

by Joe Kueck
This fall, Harper athletic teams were a dominant force in Illinois as the Hawks had two state champions, a state team qualify for nationals, an individual named "Most Outstanding Player in Illinois" in his sport and another qualified for nationals the second year in row.

The outstanding player was quarterback Neil Schmidt who led the Hawks to a NAC conference title and a spot in the Midwest Bowl. But he did not do it alone as every member of the team had outstanding performances to make the team state champions.

The football team played four members on first team all-conference: Neil Schmidt, quarterback Mike Schell, linebacker Bill Coopreiter, offensive lineman, and Brian Getzelman, running back. They had two on second team: Bill Strawn wide receiver, and Ralph Florenza, defensive halfback.

Making honorable mention were Paul Passaglia, Randy Nys and Lane Jeffries. The team had its most successful season ever finishing 8-1.

This year's team was made up of mostly freshmen and a high turnout next season could keep the Hawks at the top.

The other state champion was the no less than excellent women's tennis team as they cruised through NAC conference play undefeated, winning both Sectional and National Region IV tournaments. The latter to claim the state crown and qualify for nationals this May in Waco, Texas.

The doubles team of Mary Beth Fryck and Kris Krueger were untouchable as they went through the season without a loss and took the regional title to become state doubles champs. Coach Martha Lynn Bell was named "Coach of the Year" to cap off one of the most successful seasons for any Harper athletic team.

In golf the team did not do as well as in past years, but Scott Spielman qualified for nationals his second year in a row. Last year Scott was Judo state champion, this year he again finished in the top five for a free trip to Odessa, Texas this spring. The team as a whole ended up third in the highly competitive NAC with Spielman and Steve Ford making all-conference.

Cross country faced a rebuilding season, but improved with every meet and finished a strong third in the NAC conference meet. Jed Brydges was the only returning letterman from last year, again made all-conference honors as he placed fifth, but failed in his attempt to qualify for nationals this year as last year he placed fifth in the national meet.

The coaches of their respective sports have devoted much time and effort to their teams and should be recognized for their outstanding efforts: John Eliaak, football; Martha Lynn Bell, women's tennis; Bob Nolan, cross country; and Roger Bechtold, golf.

All of these people also coach spring or winter sports and are already making plans to prepare these teams in hope of a conference title and accomplish as much as their fall counterparts did.

With these teams made up of mainly freshmen and hopefully many will be returning next year, watch for the Hawks to be a major power in Illinois junior college athletics.

All conference football

flash talent in the state.

If one needs to pick out one person responsible for Harper's most successful season ever, Schmidt would be the only logical choice. He alone accounted for over one-third of the Hawk's total offensive yardage with 1100 yards passing and over 300 yards rushing.

There aren't too many awards left for Schmidt to earn as he was first team all-conference and named "Outstanding Player in Illinois" which is about as high as one could get considering all of the junior colleges and all of the top

Schmidt also led the team in scoring with nine touchdowns and passed for ten more, so totally he accounted for 114 of Harper's 277 points.

Defense often defense this year found it tough to stop him as he can run inside or outside exceptionally well and throw scoring strikes from either the pocket or on the run.

With Schmidt leaving next year Coach John Eliaak is going to have to search near and far to find someone to fill Schmidt's shoes if they can catch them.

Hept his teammates ready to pounce on the ball. When opposing ball carriers were hit by Mike they knew it and they also know there was no meaning as he stopped running back after running back for no gain.

I always try to be leader with actions. There is a difference from talking about running wind sprints hard and leading them yourself.

Mike had the responsibility of deciphering the coaches signals from the sidelines, relaying them to his teammates for every play and making the necessary adjustments to stop many a offense.

Mike said he is definitely going to continue playing football, which is bad news for many running backs who have yet to face "the every where" 402.

as he made many diving, tumbling catches to keep Hawk offense alive.

A two-year starter and captain for this year, Bill tried to keep the team ready for every game. "It was tough to get the team up for every game as the season wore on" but he must have done a good job as the team was ready for every game, Ada Concorde or Wright.

He feels his size is somewhat of a hindrance for playing a larger school as he does not fit the prototype of a wide receiver who is tall, rangy and has baskets for hands, as tall is only 5'8" but uses his speed and quickness effectively for consistently making the long

Brian Getzelman

Getzelman was a somewhat overlooked member of the Harper backfield, but when the Hawk's needed first down yardage he got them. Getzelman was the teams leading groundgainer with over 600 yards, averaging 6.2 yards every time he carried the ball. This might not seem much of a feat, but that's a first down every other carry, and 34 yards is considered good for college ball.

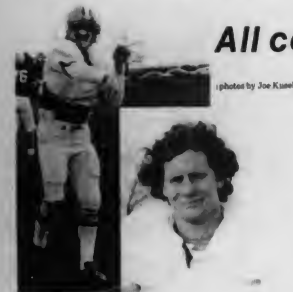

He was second on the team for scoring hours with a total of eight touchdowns, seven rushing and one on a pass reception.

Getzelman is not big by football standards at 5'8" but can break tackles as if he was 6'5" and sure in a while showed break away speed as he broke one run for 71 yards outlasting every one.

In the receiving department he caught eight passes and averaged 18.5 yards every time he caught the ball.

Getzelman should be returning next year, and if he does it gives Coach Eliaak one less position to worry about.

can. But hope do go down to Southern for spring practice and with a good showing who knows as he's surprised many people already.

You might not have heard his name much over the loud-speaker but it was Bill Coopreiter who was responsible for those holes for Brian Getzelman to run through and it was Bill who kept defenders from dumping Neil Schmidt on his

Mike Schell

When Harper's defense was on the field one could not help but notice "32" being almost everywhere at once. That was Mike Schell, defensive captain who anchored the Hawks defense and it, either tipping the ball to a teammate or taking it himself to steal another Harper return.

Haigh should be returning next season and will be a mainstay on Harper's defense.

Bill Strawn

When Harper needed a quick touchdown or faced long yardage situations, Bill was the man they looked for as the speedy wide receiver caught six touchdown passes and averaged an astonishing 12.3 yards per catch.

Bill was the leading receiver for the Hawks with catches and could catch almost anything near him.

usually at the bottom of all those massive pile-ups, which opposing running backs faced every time they carried another the Hawk defense. Haigh was the one holding on to the question mark sure he went no further.

Haigh didn't make many spectacular plays in defense but he also didn't make any glaring mistakes as opponent teams knew about Haigh as he was always near the ball. He was a steady performer, always there when the ball was and was always there to stop it from coming any more yardage.

When a big interception was needed he constantly taking part in Fall teacher evaluations eliminated

by CINDY CARAVELLO

Due to a change in Harper policy, students will not have the opportunity to evaluate their teachers from their fall, 1978 classes.

According to Dr. David Williams, vice president of academic affairs, students are ordinarily asked to evaluate their teachers at the end of each semester by filling out a form prepared by the University of Illinois. Teachers are expected to have at least two of these sections fill out the forms in which students evaluate them.

Williams stated that it is not necessary for every student to evaluate each teacher since the attitude taken towards a teacher should be consistent throughout each section that the faculty member has.

The forms are computerized and must be sent back to the university to be tabulated after the students have filled them out. Williams estimates that it costs around $5,000 per year to purchase the evaluation forms and tabulate the results. Harper will be saving about $1,300 by cutting out the fall semester evaluations.

Williams stated that the forms are not used as a method of deciding which teachers will be staying on or leaving, but are referred back to when a question arises about the credibility of a teacher.

According to Williams, there have been some complaints from faculty members about the student/teacher evaluation that is presently being used at Harper. Some teachers feel that the evaluation is inappropriate and does not reflect an accurate reading of student opinions.

Williams stated that the failure to pass the referendum was not the reason for cutting out this semester's student/teacher evaluation, but he added, it did help to give the final push in eliminating it.

In comparison to Harper's student/teacher evaluation, the evaluation used at Oakton Community College is actually the basis for deciding which teachers will be eliminated from their staff. Dr. Richard Jordan, vice president of circulation and instruction at Oakton, stated that the evaluation is especially helpful in making decisions about part-time teachers who are employed by Oakton.

The student/teacher evaluation used at Harper is also employed by Elgin Community College and some of the schools at the University of Illinois.

Although there is a possibility of changing the evaluation form altogether in the future, "It's a valid, well-researched instrument that is used elsewhere other than here. It is not one that we have developed ourselves that would tend to be difficult to justify its validity," Williams said.

Snow slows down building A repairs

by CINDY CARAVELLO

Repairs to the roof on Bldg. A, scheduled to be completed Nov. 20, have been delayed because of recent snow. The completion of the repairs to the roof, that began in the middle of October, are almost finished. According to Dr. James Perry, Vice President of administrative services, the delay has resulted from workers not being able to lay the roofing while it is wet.

Dr. Donald Mann, the director of business services, said that the new roof will cost about $50,000. The money is coming from the State and Construction Fund, which is interest that was earned by bonds sold at the time of constructing Harper College. After the roof on Bldg. A is completed and paid for, there will be only enough money for one or two more roofs to be repaired.

Even though the roof is only part way completed, Dr. Perry said, it is better off the way it is now than it was before the workers began to rip off the old roof. Moisture was seeping through and the insulation that lay underneath the roof was saturated which did not help to conserve heat or to serve as a guard against a roof, Perry said. The water proofing that has been laid down is the first step of the repairs.

The new roof, designed by Erickson, Kruttschnitt, and Stillmuth, is divided into four sections and each section will have its own drain to remove the drainage problems experienced in the past. According to Mr. Mann, the architects believe that this roof will be better than the old one.

Building A, along with Buildings B through F, were the first to be constructed at Harper. They were completed in 1967 at a cost of $5 million. According to Dr. Perry, a roof should last about 20 years, but the roof on Bldg. A has lasted only nine years. The warranty on the roof was for one year only and the warrant for the new roof will be for five years. The maximum amount of time that Harper could get any contractor to warranty the roof was for five years.

The new roof will be made out of tar paper, insulation, and asphalt. It is commonly referred to as an "all-weather crete." It will be made up of several layers to insure performance. "Hopefully the new roof will last 20 to 30 years," said Dr. Perry.

Repairs to the roof on Bldg. A have been slowed down by the snow. Unexpected weather conditions have put the repair project behind schedule.

Speech team places sixth, duet act takes first

by CINDY CARAVELLO

Harper's Speech Team placed sixth at a tournament held at Illinois Community College on Nov. 10-11.

The Speech Team coached by Marvin Lavette took home a first place trophy when Kay Hutchinson and John Loretto both participated in duet acting. They performed a cutting from the play, "Where Boys All the Lightning Spies Come."

Paul Harshbarger won fifth place in the category of Impromptu Speech. Participants in this event are given a total of seven minutes to prepare and deliver a speech on a topic given to them.

The Reader's Theatre Program, entitled, "Giving You Time" placed fourth among all the other college entrants. The actors included Bruce Zanca, John Leggett, Joe Pello, Kay Hutchinson and Lu Williamson. This performance was a collaboration of cuttings from three separate works of literature, with the central theme, "man's search for truth." Included in the performance were bits of modern dance performed by Lu Hutchinson and Kay Williamson.

Other team members included Mona Tavenor who participated in Short Acting along with Joe Pello; Bev Hager in Extemporaneous Speaking; Sara Kehring in Informative Speaking; Tom Alberti in Informative Speaking and Persuasive Speaking; Jim Trevisan in After Dinner Entertainment and Impromptu Speaking; Marvin Hays in Informative Speaking; Cindy Caravello in After Dinner Entertainment and Impromptu Speaking; Bruce Zanca in Informative Speaking; and Paul Harshbarger in After Dinner Entertainment.

EDITORIAL

Congratulations... Harper athletes

This year's Harper Hawks have had a very successful season so far, and only about one-fourth of the students probably realize it.

Harper's athletic teams deserve a hearty round of applause for their excellent performance in the NAC conference battles. Every Harper team, despite lack of crowds and cheers, came out their best ever this season.

Not many people went to the Midwest Bowl and encouraged the Hawks football team, who battled their way to win a state championship, and were contenders in the race for midwest champion. Even though they didn't win the bowl, all of Harper can be very proud of the team who had their best season ever this fall with an 8-1 record.

In addition to their NAC conference title Harper football also had even more honors. Quarterback Neil Schmidt made first team all-conference and was named "Outstanding player in Illinois." Three other players made first team all-conference; two men made second team, and three players were listed as honorable mentions.

The women weren't left out of this display of excellent athletics at all. Helping the team along was the unbeatable doubles team of Mary Beth Frick and Kris Krueger who became state doubles champions. The women's tennis team took the NAC title by being undefeated in conference play. The team won both Sectional and Regional Region IV tournaments, making them state champions. This May the team will go to Texas, with "Coach of the year" Martha Lynn Bolt, for the Nationals.

The Hawks golf team came in third in the NAC conference. Scott Spielman qualified for Nationals for the second time. He and Steve Ford also made all-conference team.

We congratulate the Harper Hawks and their coaches for a fine season and hope they will continue to reach such high goals.

Legislation against abortion clinics

After investigations by the Better Government Association and the Chicago Sun-Times, finally a legislator is going to start action against the abortion clinics in Chicago. It is very unfortunate that it took several cases of cruel and dangerous treatment, and even several deaths to prompt action by government officials, but at least it is being done.

State Representative Eugenia Chapman will introduce a bill to the House of Representatives which will allow the Illinois Department of Public Health (IDPH) to inspect abortion facilities any time, either announced or unannounced. The IDPH will then have the authority to immediately close a facility if the safety of the patients is in jeopardy. The minimum number of inspections will be increased to four to six times a year.

Representative Chapman's bill will also require amending the Abortion Law by requiring that all abortions must be performed in approved facilities. Right now the only requirement for abortions is that they be performed by a physician, no reference is made to the type of facility they are performed in.

Other requirements of the bill will: force financial and ownership disclosures to be made by facilities, require posting of licenses and of any notices issued by the IDPH concerning suspension of a license, increase penalties for violations and require initial and renewal license fees.

After five months of investigation it looks like the Sun-Times and the Better Government Association finally got through and convinced some people that the abortion clinic issue is important.

It's great to see someone trying to prevent the sadman slandering of women. It is a woman who's trying to end it.

THE RTA EXPRESS

ANOTHER GREAT RUN FOR YOUR MONEY.

Revised bus route serves Harper College.

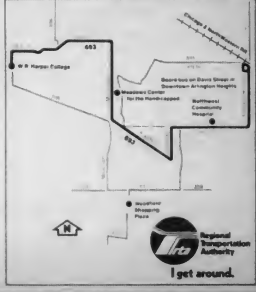

More students commute via bus.

The students of William Rainey Harper College will continue to enjoy regular bus service to school. The newly revised #93 bus serves the college as well as Northwestern Community Hospital and Meadows, Center for the Handicapped. Students who commute to school via RTA's North Western commuter service can catch the bus at the Arlington Heights Station. The map below shows you the route of the #93. The bus runs at convenient times weekdays. The fare is only 50 cents.

Free schedules for the #93 may be obtained by writing RTA, P.O. Box 9728, Chicago, IL 60680. Or you may call RTA Travel Information toll free 800 872 7300. For best service, calls should be made in the evening.

Inexpensive transfer provides travel in six counties.

For an additional time, students and other passengers may purchase an RTA Universal Transfer, which is good for transportation on most RTA bus services in the six counties of Cook, Lake, McHenry, DuPage, Kane and Will.

Students plan vacations

By RALPH

With the first onslaught of the winter weather upon the northern areas of the country many college students, like the birds, are planning the annual migration south.

Christmas and spring breaks are an ideal time for students to escape from the burdens of classes and the harshness of winter to a warmer climate. Through poor planning, students who would like to go to Florida over vacation never make it. Hotel reservations and travel plans often must be made months in advance to obtain any guarantee.

Students often who receive their income tax refund check only a week before vacation time find themselves with enough money for the trip but are unable to get rooms in day in, and consequently lose out. They are faced with returning home to the same cold weather they left.

In order to insure a pleasant vacation, plans and reservations should be made early in the year. Often hotel reservations can be made months in advance by placing a small deposit on the room. Hotels in Florida and the larger hotel chains often have full-fare numbers that can be called when reservations are made.

Thus can save the student money because he will be calling at the hotels expense and won't have to pay for a call to a hotel that is already full.

When reserving the room make sure the proper rates are given because the room will be forfeited if not claimed in time. There are always people waiting in line for cancelled reservations so another room will be hard to find.

Additionally the initial deposit is usually lost if the room is not claimed. Be sure to find out the hotel's policy concerning the time the rooms must be claimed by. Hotels won't hold the rooms more than a few minutes after the check time so if you are delayed on the road be sure to call and inform the hotel.

After reservations have been made the only other problem confronting the student is a method of transportation.

There are several popular methods. The first is the car. This often the least expensive because the cost of the gas can be split between several people, as well as the driving chores.

Next on the list is the airplane. Generally this costs more than the other ways, especially during the tourist season. Bargain airlines and charter flights are worth investigating, however.

Usually there are also buses and trains which service many of the major cities in Florida. These ways may take the longest, but are not as expensive as flying.

Travel agencies offer package deals on both the rooms and transportation in many of the popular areas in Florida. Some of these trips include meals which are probably the most expensive items on the trip, including the hotel room. This can be a money-saving device for those who are careful and watch for hidden costs.

Some colleges also offer package deals such as the ones above to students. Generally these are at a lower cost than the other types of programs. There are many options open to the student as long as he plans ahead and takes the time to make wise choices.

Ski trip offered

Harper College Student Activities Office is sponsoring a ski trip to the Canadian Rockies resort of Banff from Jan. 4-11, 1979.

The trip includes roundtrip jet transportation; accommodations at the Voyager Inn, which boasts of an outdoor heated pool and sauna; and six days of lift tickets at any of the three major ski areas: Lake Louise, Sunshine Village and Mt. Norquay.

The per person price is $47.35 for quad, $67.35 for triple or $82.35 for twin occupancy. Backpacker skiing and dog sled or sleigh rides are available at an additional cost.

Secretarial Science offered

A number of courses are being offered this Spring in the Secretarial Science area. These courses are designed for students looking for opportunities to learn skills for office employment, for those who are currently working who wish to develop their skills to a higher level, for those who wish to break up on their skills in order to return to the working world or for those who just wish to learn how to type.

Courses in typing, shorthand, machine transcription, business machines, secretarial procedures, word processing and specialized courses in the medical and legal secretarial fields are all being offered during the day and evening hours.

Mary Ann Mickins, Coordinator of the Secretarial Programs, says there is an increasing demand for office help in the Northwest Suburban area. Because of the great number of businesses moving into the Harper area, job opportunities are unlimited in either a part-time or full-time basis.

For further information on any of the secretarial courses, students may contact the Business Division Coordinator in U2B or Mary Ann Mickins in F248.

Basketball wins first two games

by Joe Kuech

Harper basketball has taken a cue from its fall counterparts by winning its first two games in convincing fashion.

The Hawks won their home opener, Ironsides, 91-69. The game saw both teams ice-cold in the beginning as neither team made a shot in during the first three minutes. Harper's first basket of the season was a role shot by sophomore Brad Sinclair, who also during the first half controlled both offensive and defensive boards.

Harper never trailed from then on. The Hawks built up a slight lead during the first half as freshman John Marwanise off the bench to give the Hawks the offensive spark they needed as late, but his first four-out-of-five shots. The first half ended with the Hawks leading by a slim seven point margin, 32-25. In the second half the Hawks forced it into a layup as freshman guard Jeff Martiniski and Craig Chappak didn't allow the Oakton guards to get near the basket as they used their height advantage to knock away Oakton passes and turn them into 3-on-1 fastbreaks.

At one time Harper led by over thirty points and just coasted to a 30-point victory.

Head Coach Roger Reichold praised sophomore center Ron Warren for his excellent defensive play in shutting off Oakton's high post. Bob Turner also came off the bench to pass well and score crucial baskets to put the game away. Leading scorer for the Hawks was Craig Hawkins who rumbled in 19 points.

Harper picked up their second win as a run over Washburne in the Ind-Pac tournament as the Hawks won easily 86-54. The Hawks had five players in double figures for a balanced scoring attack, a sign of a good team. Top scorer for Harper was again Craig Hawkins with 20, followed by Hawkins, Jeff Martiniski, 11, Brad Sinclair, 12, 10, Turner, 12, and John Marwanise 10. In the championship game the Hawks ran into trouble as they lost to the powerful Tri-Pac Chapparral 86-60. Leading scorer for the Hawks was Jeff Martiniski with 20. Brad Sinclair had 15, and Craig Hawkins had 11.

The Hawks next two game away as they play Wright tomorrow and Thornton on Friday. Both are conference games. The Hawks next home game is Dec. 12, vs. Washburne at 8 p.m. at St. Victor.

All-conference golf, cross country

Golf Scott Spielman

Scott is one of the premier golfers in the state of Illinois. Last year he was junior college state champion and this year he was runner-up. This is his second year in a row to qualify for nationals and hopes to improve his finish from last year in Waco, Texas. The weather could be his only setback because nationals are not until June and he is at the mercy of the cruel Illinois weather for practice time.

He is two-time NAC conference champion and has finished second in overall average both years.

Scott always finished near the top in almost every tournament he played in and is always a threat to take top honors in any meet. Coach Roger Reichold said Scott is one of the finest golfers he's ever coached and hoped Scott can continue playing for a four year school, which he undoubtedly will as talent like this is not looked over.

Steve Ford

Steve was the number two golfer all season but that's not too bad considering who was number one. Steve did well in all of the team meets but really finished up strong as he placed 10th in the NAC conference meet to take all-conference honors.

Steve is only a freshman and coach Reichold is expecting some big things out of him as he is one of the most likely rated freshmen in the increasingly competitive NAC.

If Steve improves next season as much as he did this year no reason why he could not take another individual state championship to Harper's athletic program and lead the Hawks golf team to the top of the NAC where they belong.

Cross Country Jeff Brydges

Jeff has been the number one runner for Harper's cross country team for the last two seasons and last year led them to a conference title and a third place finish in the state meet.

This year he was the only reference letterman but still led an overworked team to a third place finish in the NAC. Jeff himself placed 5th making it the second year in a row he was all-conference. Last season he also qualified for nationals, placing 49th. This year he did not make it as he was "outweighed" by sickness and minor injuries early in the season.

Jeff will most likely be attending Northern. If true, it'll only be for the fun of it, with Jeff as he might not have time with classes.

He also runs track and coach Bob Nolan is expecting a strong track campaign from Jeff in the 800 and 1,500 meters.

Wrestlers begin trip to nationals

by Paul Preising
Hobbled by injuries and forfeits the Hawk wrestling team went down to defeat by a score of 24-51. The surprising loss to Lake County left the Hawks stunned.

Freshman 118 pounder Paul Preising started things off on the right foot with a second period pin. He had been winning 1-0 and then went on to mercifully put his opponent.

Sophomore standout Joe Raza went on to overcome his opponent with a third period pin after a shaky start. As one of Harper's three returning national qualifiers, Raza made use of his physical conditioning and experience to pick to win. This gave Harper an early but short-lived lead.

Freshman Jay Evans and sophomore Tim Smith dropped the next two bouts by a decision and default respectively.

Harper rebounded with a win by national qualifier Mike Relf, in the eighth rounder bout. Relf outscored Lake County's Jeff Jenkins also a national qualifier to pick up a win for the Hawks.

Fresh 104 and Gene Holmquist '87, both suffered defeats, with Moll going down by a pin.

The next two bouts went to Lake County via a forfeit at 177 and a pin over Harper's Jeff Richard.

The meet ended on an up note for the Hawks with freshman heavyweight Sean Mual who pinned his Lake County opponent in the third period.

Piers, Head coach Norm Furelsone was inspired by the loss but saw a reason for hope. "I really thought we could do some better if Weber had strangled and Stuffy hadn't got hurt." Weber will be invincible until next semester, and as a returning national qualifier his absence is felt.

"Takeaway" Evans (stunned by his defeat) commented "I should have strangled that screwdriver."

The wrestling Hawks hope to bounce back at the Whitewater Invitational/Ohio Saturday.

Students can't evaluate teachers

Teacher evaluations have been eliminated. The reason given was that they cost too much. The vice president of academic affairs said that the school would save a lot of money each year by eliminating the purchasing and tabulating of these forms.

By eliminating the evaluations the students as well as the teachers are being denied a privilege. It was said that faculty members have been complaining that the evaluation forms used at Harper are inaccurate and inappropriate. Instead of dropping them completely, we should correct in the forms used by Oskan, or some of the other schools with better evaluation procedures. There are many students and teachers who take the forms seriously and use them constructively. These people would like to keep some form of student/teacher evaluation.

Teacher evaluation forms are very important to both students and teachers.

One reason that the forms are very important is the incentive that is provided for the teacher by having their students grade them. A teacher will try harder and prepare a better classroom procedure if he knows that each student will be grading him at the end of the course. Most likely the teacher will try to make the course more appealing and more interesting if they are going to be graded.

As a result of the forms being eliminated, we may see teachers sliding down in their level of teaching. The standards of teaching may be lowered because the teachers will know that the students won't be able to do much about it.

Another reason for the evaluation is for the students. If a teacher is unfair, biased, or preferential in the treatment of certain students, other students have the right to try and make the teacher aware of his or her misbehavior. Students have the right to let the teacher and the teacher's superiors know what is going on in the classroom. Students can be more objective about the situation, than a teacher can be.

With the forms being eliminated teachers can continue, or begin to, show preferences for certain students. Teachers won't have to make the courses appealing to everyone, just their favorite students. All students will not get the same quality of education.

One other reason for the evaluation forms is again for the teachers. Many teachers do like to look at the evaluations and use them for bettering their standards of teaching. Good teachers who are interested in providing quality education for all students, will be interested in seeing what the students think of them.

Just because the student/teacher evaluation forms have been eliminated doesn't mean students won't have any say regarding teachers. It will just be harder for students to convey their feelings about teachers. If there is a teacher that is damaging in his way of teaching, or commendable for his methods, students should talk to that teacher first, then if necessary, talk to Dr. David Williams, vice president of academic affairs.

Christmas comes as a welcome break

It's the last week of school for Harper students and they are all thinking about winter break and Christmas presents right? Well that's only half right, they are thinking about final exams.

The real celebration of the semester break doesn't begin until after finals are over. After the pressure is off and everyone realizes they won't have any more studying or homework for an entire month, the fun begins. The week of exams is placed strategically during the middle of December when everyone starts their mad dash at last minute Christmas shopping. During that week students try to read the whole book for every course they have and get in on the Christmas sales to buy gifts for friends and family. Usually the days grow shorter for some odd reason the last night before exams to start studying.

But, after the hectic week of exams, everybody can enjoy a break. By this time there is always a lot of snow on the ground and that opens a path for many winter activities.

Winter break is a long, awaited time for relaxing and enjoying one's friends and family. Even though the time does go by very quickly, there are many opportunities to participate in the various winter activities. If people pursue their activities early in the break, they will have plenty of time to accomplish everything they wanted to.

Peer counselors in women's center upset with "Voice"

Dear Editor:

We, the undersigned, the peer counseling staff of the Harper College Women's Center, wish to express our displeasure with the article titled "Home-away from home," which appeared in the Nov. 20, 1978, issue of the "VOICE," published by the class of students in Journalism 233.

We have spent three semesters attempting to dispel the image of the Women's Center as being "an exclusive club." Everyone is welcome in the Women's Center.

One does not have to be a woman, nor are welcomed, in fact, one will occasionally find a male peer counselor on duty in the center.

One does not have to be a student at Harper; anyone from the community is large is welcomed.

One does not have to be a returning student; all students are welcomed. Nor does one have to be a volunteer; the music in the cafeteria is played, surprisingly, some of us do like it.

The Women's Center is a special place that fills special needs, and anyone can have those special needs. The center, as PCT, offers a place to have coffee, companionship, conversation, a place to share the joy and triumph of getting an "A," or the disappointment of doing worse, a place to find new friends and encouragement, a place to ask questions about the college and to receive information about courses, transferring, scholarship, etc.

The peer counselors have been trained to be good listeners, trained in the soft-gritty information about Harper College, trained in when and where to make referrals. We are not professionals, we are students just like most of our contacts, but we do have empathy for those who find us in the Women's Center, no matter who they are, and that is what counts the most. That is what makes the Women's Center, for many, a Letter to the Editor

Rebuttal to Voice letter

Dear Editor,

I would like to reply to the letter from the peer counselors of the "Women's Center" regarding the article I wrote in the November 30, 1978 issue of the "VOICE."

Having visited the center many times and having interviewed the three counselors, Barbara Baker, Ellen Lorkowski and Lenore Palis, individually in the center, I must say the presence of men was striking by their absence. And why not? After all it is the "Women's Center." I am sure, from time to time, they have a male speaker at their Wednesday meetings but when one male speaker was unable to attend - he sent his wife as his substitute. That was on November 1, 1978, when Harper College President James McGrath was represented by his wife.

C'mon now, it is not the "People's Center" it is the "Women's Center" and it serves a vitally needed function on campus.

As for it being available to the community at large - I would hope so, because Harper is a community college and all services are available to the community. However, you will find it is used by students continuing at completing their education here at Harper.

As for "escaping the hard rock music in the lounge or cafeteria," that was a direct quote from one of the women enjoying their "home away from home."

Sincerely,
Pat Moore

Faculty salaries cause suit

When John Redding, editor of the Weber State College Signpost, requested a list of faculty salaries last spring, it didn't seem like an unfair request to him. After all, students help pay for salaries through tuition and tax dollars, and it seemed to him students would like to know how much teachers at the Utah college are paid.

Besides, Utah officials had proclaimed such records public the preceding summer.

Nine months and many repeat requests later, Redding realized only too well it wasn't just a matter of course to get the salary listing.

Since March, school administrators, backed by state officials, steadfastly refused to release the salaries for publication. Thus, Redding filed suit against the school and the state.

Redding's suit is the first of its kind filed in Utah. If the suit is successful, the Utah State Records Committee, which judged in July, 1977, that "all names and salaries of all state employees at all state institutions be retained as public data," will compel Weber president Rodney Brady to release the information.

Redding, in turn, is waiting for a Idea box taken down

by TERRY MAY

A few days ago the suggestion box, previously located at the entrance of the service area in the cafeteria, was torn off the wall. A fellow student was obviously voicing his opinion toward the concept of a suggestion box as possibly even the food service staff.

Some of the less violent comments in the box include lower prices, a larger variety of bakery goods and pizza and chicken more often.

According to Mr. Cliff Weiser, director of food service, the suggestions that are financially feasible are enacted upon. "Lower prices is not one of them. I suggest that complaints be sent to the Prosident as we are not in the position to do so at this time," commented Weiser.

The food service staff does not feel that a larger variety of bakery goods is practical because of the large selection now offered, which include donuts, sweet rolls, cake slices, pie slices and cookies. All of the bakery goods are baked each day to insure freshness.

Pizza and fried chicken are now offered every other week because of their popularity. This is one of the suggestions that was decided to put in action.

Students are encouraged to express their suggestions and comments by use of the suggestion box which will be nailed securely back in place in the near future.

Senator talks to political science class

by JOAN PETERSON

Illinois State Senator David Freer from the third district recently spoke to political science students from Mady Watta's Suburban, Urbana and State Government class.

One of the topics he talked about was why the legislature votes the way it does. "There are a couple reasons really," he said, "one is representing the constituency and what their feelings are and many times what is right for the state. We don't just take office to represent our district, we represent the state of Illinois."

When asked about the personal property tax issue, Senator Freer said he voted yes on it. He said that legislation on the issue must be passed by March 30 and not Dec. 31, as was written in many newspapers. This is because the tax assessments on personal property are made April 1. "So in spite of what is said, we don't have just these weeks we have three months and three weeks to work on it," he said.

Senator Freer said he voted no on the legislative pay raise. He said, "I have two objections to a pay raise, one is that it was done at the wrong time if people are going to push a pay raise they should do it during a regular session before an election and let the voters know how they feel. I think it's absolutely wrong to do anything pay raise-wise in a lame-duck session." He also said he didn't like the way it was done so quickly, sent to the governor where he hurried up and vetoed it by phone while they stayed there and waited to override it. He said that if the governor had let it wait for a week, it would never have been over-ridden.

Another reason he voted against the pay hike is because he doesn't think there should be full-time legislators. He said, "When I first went to Springfield we had three people in the house and one person in the senate who declared their profession as legislator, full time. Today we have about 30 in the senate who do nothing else except legislate. Look what's happened to congress with their spending habits the proliferation of government and bureaucracy. It's just the fact that we're there all the time. The first of the year, the first session we had 85 days in session in a two-year period and the state still functioned. Now we have 20-25 days a year and we spend half the time talking to ourselves."

The Senator said he voted no on the Veterans tax exemption bill because he did not feel that all the points were non-profit. He said some contain money making bars, slot machines and pinball machines.

He also said he felt that the newspapers were not doing a well enough job covering issues in Illinois. He said they just cover the emotional issues.

Christmas shopping hints to help out consumers

One of the most expensive times of the year for any American is Christmas time. Spending becomes the major occupation of many individuals.

Saving money in this time of giving is often difficult as time passes toward Christmas day and the frustration of crowds and long waits grows intense.

There are some ways the careful consumer can save himself money, time, and frustration. Careful planning and prudent gift choosing will provide the best gifts at the lowest costs in money and energy.

Often many stores have catalog sales programs. This is the first way to avoid the hassles of shopping in a crowded department store. Usually the larger stores will have their entire line of merchandise available through their catalog.

The prices are as competitive as the counter and often it is easier to pick out sales because the whole catalog can be surveyed without the hurried atmosphere of a shopping center.

Catalogs are also available through specialty stores selling only one line of merchandise. These gifts can usually be sent directly to the recipient, preventing the problem of gift wrapping and then sending them yourself.

Three methods of home shopping allow the consumer to circumvent long, frustrating, and sometimes unproductive shopping in the stores. This can result in large savings of money also because there is time to compare prices and get the best buys.

Many people could benefit from this type of shopping, but it must be done to insure the items are delivered on time. Often college students will use this method while they are at home during Thanksgiving vacation so they can avoid shopping at school and the last minute crowds of the stores at Christmas when they return home.

For those who will brave the stores there are still ways to avoid long waits and also save money. By shopping during the off hours of the store many of the crowds can be avoided. Usually the dinner hour and late at night are the best times for the shopping early in the season will also help to prevent frustration. Things will be more relaxed and less crowded therefore it will be easier as the shopper.

A good way to save both time and money in many stores is to avoid their gift wrapping department. These departments can add long waits to your shopping as well as a hefty bill.

Often the salesclerk can provide boxes at the counter for you to place the gifts in. Then buy wrapping paper and some ribbon and wrap the gifts in your free time at home. In many cases the time spent wrapping the gifts at home is less than the time spent having them wrapped in the store.

The savings this provides is often very welcome at an expensive time such as Christmas. The other savings in time and money will hopefully make the holiday season more enjoyable.

ARIES: (March 21 to April 20) Check your budget before you go holiday gift shopping. Social plans may be unpredictable to be patient with an inconsiderate friend. Define and organize your career ambitions and activities. Move ahead with discretion.

TAURUS: (April 21 to May 21) Don't try so hard to please others and not as example. Be fair. Be yourself and allow others the same privilege. Social life is bright and you could be the center of attention. Be patient with "hangers-on."

GEMINI: (May 22 to June 21) Career brings comfort and fulfillment to you now. Get errands, mailings, etc. Crowds annoy you, so get some quiet time for meditation. An unexpected turn of events could depress.

CANCER: (June 22 to July 22) Things are looking up and your involvement with other people has a progressive note to it. Promises won't bother you, and things that were previously bogged down will now give way. New friends can become important in your life.

LEO: (July 23 to Aug. 22) Party and socialize with moderation or your health could suffer. Take care of business matters and don't procrastinate. You could be included in a "special" group now, so dress well and look your best. Curb extravagance.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) Take time to relax, kick back and take it easy. Maintain a low profile and "go alone" with what others want. Later in the week you have energy to get work organized and take care of details quickly and efficiently.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Your close relationships with the opposite sex are interesting now. New people are coming into your life too, and their importance or accomplishments could be of great benefit to you. Make the most of the opportunities!

SCORPIO: (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You could accomplish an important goal now and surprising events may be connected with the venture. Concentrate on communication matters and get them rolling again. Keep a long-range view in mind.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Concentrate on a project and eliminate superficial activities that scatter your energies. Cooperate with others for greatest accomplishment. Curb impatience and short-temper. Hold your tongue.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) Balance out your hard work on career with enjoyment suitable to the holiday season in the evenings. Overcome feelings of resentment toward a close relative and show them love and affection. Listen to your mate.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) A friend from the past could reward your life. If your past efforts have been productive, you could reap great rewards. Contact those who can help you with new ideas—especially related to writing or advertising.

PISCES: (Feb. 19 to March 20) Cooperate with others in team work ventures. Not the time to "go it alone" or start a large project. Complete detail work get organized! Old issues could come up—avoid careful research before committing yourself.

Thoughts of Christmas,

HARPER HYSTERIA

Well, it's finals week at Harper and Christmas is so near Some mothers will be studying instead of spreading cheer
I've bought no gifts and hung no holly
I've got to cram for the lab in Biology
"No time to spare" is her time
I've got to "ace" in Espanol
Some students have a Christmas cause everything is done
Their mothers bake and decorate
So kids can have their fun
But, we women here at Harper who by age are more "mature"
Have to wait in the shopping till finals are assured
That's why we look so "wild-eyed" as finals week is here
It's not our grades we fret about
It's getting into gear
To shop, to bake, to decorate so no one will complain to us That Christmas just is not the same since "Mom's" become so studious

MR. TREE

How tall you are Mr. Tree,
Your body so strong and bold.
Your bark may lose pieces
But are soon repeated.

When the wind whips at you
You bend just a little
But slowly regain your old stance.

When lightning whips at you,
Tree to bend down on you
Often you may have to crack.

For protection I run to you,
Hide and stand under you,
Use you for all your worth.

I've seen you change Mr. Tree,
Never staying the same long enough
For anyone to see
Just what kind of tree you are
Mr. Tree

MY CHRISTMAS PRAYER TO SANTA

Dear Santa, as I write this note to you,
Please tell me what my friends say, ain't true
They tell me that you're not real,
This year, my gifts, I'll have to deal.
You see, they caught me by surprise;
And sat me down in sorrows
A brand new sweater, hat or rug;
They told me Santa, you won't bring
I need so many things this year:
That I regret these things I hear.
My life is just a mass of bills;
They charge so much these days for pills.
Three jobs I hold at present time;
Deduct the taxes, I've not a dime
You see, that things are really tight,
Tonight I'll pray with all my might.
Dear Santa, come down that chimney please;
I beg you on my hands and knees,
I need a car, insurance too,
I'm not pecky, but make it true.
No need to wrap, forget the frills;
One coat will do, I've got the chills.
Remember me, Santa, cause I've been good;
Each day I study, like I should.
A disco album would be nice;
Eight-track tapes are hard to spice.
Saturday Night Fever would be the best;
The one that shows Travolta's chest.

Please bring me Frye boots and Cachet perfume;
And maybe a plant to liven my room
Forget the games and all the toys;
Perhaps a stereo to make lots of noise.
I need a dress for out on the town;
This time, Dear Santa, don't make it brown.
I think my order now is made;
What day this week do you get paid?
If you should find some cash to spare;
My bank account is rather bare.
I hope my list does not seem long;
Or that the things I ask are wrong.
Now write me back when you have time;
Or call me up and ask a dime.
Perhaps I may seem awfully bold;
To ask for gifts at 20-years-old.
Just bring me what I ask from you;
Deliveries are from nine to two.
Don't be cheap when coming here;
Christmas comes but once a year.
You'll need to know where I will be;
At Harper College, Building C.
The 25th, it is the date.
Now don't forget, and don't be late.
If prices should give you quite a fright;
Just follow the K-Mart, flashing blue light.

HOME TO YOU

(To My Family)
When I need someone to trust but true friends are hard to find,
When I am unsure of myself and lonely as if the world had turned its back on me and walked away,
When I want to fight for things that mean the most to me but my spirit is gone and my eyes are tired,
When I think of all my hopes and dreams and I wonder if they'll ever come true,
When the end of my rainbow seems so far away and I begin to doubt my talents,
When I reach for a reassuring hand but those hands are beyond my grasp,
That's the time I come back home to you, and I know my dreams will come true and with all my heart I love you.

NO ONE SEEMS TO CARE

In a small corner of the world into a small child so innocent and pure,
Her and face cries out for help but no one hears her plea,
Her tears turn to ice against her face and her body trembles with fear,
Yet no one seems to care.

She stands, her legs tired and weak as she looks about her only to see emptiness, Unsurely her cross go unheeded as she searches the world for a caring hand,
Her clothes are torn and tattered and the young child looks up only to see gray clouds above her,
Yet no one seems to care.

Her hands grasp her shoulders and she feels her body quiver,
As she clutches her fist with hatred
Life revolves around her and she goes unnoticed,
The world is hollow and silent and her heart is filled with sadness,
No one seems to care.

A DYING LOVE

They met on a sunny August day when their world was empty and cold, Unaware of what would pass their way, they prayed their love would never grow old.
Together they shared secret thoughts and together they dreamed of a lifetime love filled with bright stars and a happy song, But too soon she found things weren't what they seemed and she knew their love was all wrong.
She was looking for something hard to find and just couldn't see it in him,
In the beginning a perfect love was imprinted in her mind but she could feel the glowing light begin to die.
She tried in every way she could to make him care but he couldn't hear her and he couldn't see,
So she decided that way of living wasn't fair, and an end to their love was the only way it could be.
Sadly she felt the feeling drift from her hands and she began to search for the careful words to say, She hoped and prayed he would understand as she told him her story and cold November day.
As they stood with hurt and confusion in their eyes
she searched her soul and tried to explain,
He looked down at her and asked her the why's but all she could see was a man filled with pain.
And as she leaned down to kiss him goodbye her hands began to shake,
She looked into his eyes and felt her heart begin to die as his began to break.
Now they're both trying to forget and she has no answers to help him on his way.
There are unhappy times when the two walk they never met but she hopes he'll find true happiness someday.
The pain they now feel in their heart is real and it's a pain they may never rise above, They know only dwelling time will heal
a dying love.

ADD WHAT A ROOM!

eyes dart back and forth searchin'
one familiar face will suffice, among none
fidgeting begins papers shuffle, books rattle searchin' for something to occupy the time
In walks Teacher-a nice sort friendly and open, inviting us to open ourselves to the others.
it catches on and soon-the faces seem familiar, looking forward to each meeting,
tension will ease,
a casual hey there!
and conversations begin,
and soon friendships begin, as close as they can be in a setting not prone to friendships fears give in to willingness to learn and experience to help others and to be helped yourself and you are thankful and wonder in amazement that such a group could be formed, so randomly,
but it works and feels so fine to be a part and a member of the gathering.
The people, the mood the setting and the fears all common to one another, these allow it to be an enjoyable passing of time,
rather than just a class.
And,
as it comes to an end,
you realize that it will not go on forever, and soon those now familiar faces will fade back into yesterday but memories of the time when gathering was a good thing and you remember just how good it was,
and wish it could be again, knowing that it can never be-and hoping that it may

Love, hurt, falling snow

EMPTINESS

I sit alone myself together with me whoever that may be,
and wonder if it is worth anything at all.
Should I stay here in a world of loneliness by myself or should I encounter bravely the world as I perceive it empty, with nothing there for me, but yet to find something there.
Why did you have to leave me?
Far in doing so you have left me with your absence.
I have learned to value the love of one in dear
Wait, but must I grieve?
For in doing so,
only memories flood back the emotions grow,
they deepen, returning the tide of anguish.
I feel deep inside, with my heart
I want to be with you, let me come with you and we shall be in paradise for all eternity.
There is not a soul for me here.
And yet, surrounded as I am by friends,
what do they care?
They tell me what I want to hear, to please me,
Trying to take my mind off of what has hurt me,
But the pain of the hurt is still there.
I wonder to myself,
who needs you more?
Me, the one you loved so dearly.
(Never leave me you said but it was not I who left.)
Or that other one,
that powerless power
These friends, charlatans they appear to be, or do I lie to myself
And I know that I do.
For they and me in my goal to conquer and overcome feelings which I have discovered Feelings of hate and mistrust, disgust and fear for the one that took you from my side.

They say, it is better that way,
not to know the pain of lingering.
But for our involvement,
cut so short, it is a shock to me.
And perhaps it is better.
I was your prince, your beauty, and you were my light overloading.
Our love it was fresh and new,
it was rain in the springtime, and the colors of autumn, it was a rose it was everything in this world beautiful.
Touching me new unexplored things, bringing me closer to god and to our people, and never to know the fear again.
Reaching for new experiences, blades of grass and sunflowers.
And I learned,
Oh Lord how I learned,
To love the world, love life,
love You and to love me.
Yes finally me,
long enough it took,
to accept myself as I am.
You taught me that, it was easy with you.
But now you are no longer here, to guide me and to show me the way.
And I have lost it.
I am stuck in a maze, a myriad of possibilities, but I cannot find the path back, to the me I was once with you.
In desperation I give up,
Cancel the search for myself.
For without you there is no me at all.
And still I sit alone.
Myself together with me, who ever that may be,
And wonder, if it is worth anything at all.

SNOW

Wonderous feathers of white
How slowly and softly you fall;
At first you are single But then become many. Lost in a pile of hay.

So, 30 millions
1, 2, 3 stop.
Now the earth is white.

Though oldies may curse you,
Lovers delight in you,
People run over you,
Plows bite and chew at you,
Moonlight beautify you.

I, just love to see you fill the earth up.

Music and Movies of '78

by BRAD CASE

Once again, the time has come to look back on the accomplishments (or lack of) of the entertainment industry over the past year. I have compiled what I feel were the most and least significant contributions to the motion picture and recording fields in 1978.

THE MOVIES OF 1978

The Good

1. National Lampoon's Animal House-The most consistently entertaining film I viewed, and probably the cheapest. Betts and Co. proved that a little creativity can go farther than a lot of money.
2. The Lord of the Rings-A spectacle of a movie, this animated feature of Tolkien's story is as creative and enjoyable as any cartoon or any other movie for that matter, that I've seen.
3. Heavens Can Walk-Probably the best thing Warren Beatty has ever done. Even though this film is a remake of the 1956's flick "Here Comes Mr. Jordan", it's been brought up to date in hilarious fashion and ranks with the year's best.
4. The Driver-In my opinion the sleeper of the year, this movie about the exploits of a professional getaway driver holds your interest from beginning to end.
5. Death on the Nile-A fine cast, exotic locations, and an intriguing "whodunit" plot make this Agatha Christie story first rate entertainment.

The Bad

1. Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band-How such an album could make such a lousy movie, is beyond me. The annihilation of all this fine music by the likes of Peter Frampton and the Bee Gees, hopefully proved to the world what little talent they actually do possess.
2. The Godfather-This ridiculous movie should prove to Clint Eastwood, that he's a much better actor than he is a director, he certainly proved it to me!
3. The Fury-A hideous, confusing tale of the supernatural. Director Brian DePalma who gave us the superb "Cristal", just doesn't make this film work at all. Color it lousy.
4. Dances: Omnis II-It's a shame to see the two movies shot in Chicago (the other being "The Fury") turn out to be two of the year's worst, but this sequel to "The Omnis" is a total insult to the viewer's intelligence.

3. The Wild Geese-Had potential to be a fine film but decided to be an imbecilic glorification of Mercenaries instead. A more appropriate title would have been "The Wild Turkey".

THE MUSIC OF 1978

It was a good year in the record business, with old favorites like The Rolling Stones and The Who back on top with fine albums, Boston and Bruce Springsteen finally out of hiding, and just about every significant personality in the industry making some kind of contribution. But if I had to choose one artist who dominated the field more than anyone else I'd have to go with Billy Joel. His albums "The Stranger" and "Anthem" have both held Billboards number 1 slot during the year, and are currently ranked number 1 and number 7.

Joel is not a flashy performer, he is basically the same man who played the corner saloons in Brooklyn a few years back. He has not changed his character or commercialized his music to make it to the top, and that's a refreshing change in this day and age if you have not guessed by now my choice for musical artist of the year is none other than, Billy Joel.

Choosing a top album was tough, because there were so many good ones, but I finally settled on Journey's "Infinity" LP as the year's best. After repeated listenings "Infinity" comes across as the most consistent rock album I have heard this year. The material is strong and the musicianship tight. Roy

Thomas Baker, the record's producer, deserves alot of the credit for this, it's no coincidence that "Infinity", the first commercially successful album Journey has come out with, is the first Journey album that Baker has produced.

Picking out a worst album was much easier. I had the great misfortune to hear some album called "Devo, Are we not men?" My only reply to this piece of garbage is, No Devo, you are not men, you ain't even a band. What you are is the most pitiful excuse for musicians that have ever walked the Earth! Needless to say, Devo takes the honors of most annoying album, as well as worst group, worst new group and anything else that I can think of. To put it mildly, I don't like them very much.

That about wraps up this critic's opinion of 1978 in a nutshell, and opens the gate for 1979. Among the highlights we can look forward to over the Christmas break are new films from Clint Eastwood and John Travolta, and very likely a new Led Zeppelin album.

But the big talk around town is the new "Superman" movie, that cost a phenomenal amount of money to produce and is supposed to make an even more amount in profits. If I recall correctly, exactly two years ago this Christmas, a film by the name of "King Kong" made this very same claim and was a total disaster. Let's hope the "man of steel" gets a better break, he deserves it!

A handful of lovely berries await a long-cold winter at Harper.

Males vs. females in job opportunities

Washington, D.C.—Who makes more annually — male drop-outs from high school, or female college graduates?

Most people might assume the college graduates would earn more, but statistics compiled by the Scientific Manpower Commission indicates that it isn't so. Male drop-outs earned an average $8000 in 1978, while the female graduates averaged only $7600. And the commission's report showed that statistics like these are constant for almost every profession.

The commission, a private, non-profit organization of the country's major scientific academies, recently catalogued the position of women and minorities in all the professional fields, including the sciences, engineering, arts, humanities, and education. In the resultant 386-page report, they discovered that while the last decade of equal opportunity mandates had contributed to a sharp increase of women and minorities getting degrees of all kinds, the laws apparently aren't that effective in the job market.

Minority and majority women, the report finds, are still passed over for jobs, and slighted in salary and promotion. This, the report says, holds true in the government, academia, and the private sector.

Specifically, the report found: "Unemployment rates for professionally-trained women continue to be two-to-five times higher than for men in the same field with the same level of training, and the gap increases at higher degree levels. For example, among all 1977 baccalaureate graduates, 2.9 percent of the men were unemployed, compared with 16.4 percent of the women. In the social sciences, the unemployment rate for male doctors was four percent, while women's was four percent.

"Except for beginning engineers and new bachelor's level chemists employed by industry, professional women's salaries were lower than those of men with comparable training and experience at every age, every degree level, in every field and with every type of employer."

"The Federal government, a major employer of professionals, also appears to discriminate. Women of all races still lag well behind their male counterparts in grade level, and thus salary. For example, the government employs almost 1700 microbiologists, of whom 31 percent are women and 4.5 percent are black, with one-third of blacks being women. The average grade of the men is 12.7 compared to 11.31 for women, translating to average salaries of $25,360 for men and $18,350 for women. For black men, the average grade is 11.19 and for black women 10.31, translating to average salaries of $19,000 for men and $18,360 for women."

"While employment of women in higher education has grown slowly through the 1970's, their progress up the academic ladder is still far behind that of men. Among academically employed Ph.D.'s in the sciences and engineering who earned their Ph.D.'s between 1970 and 1974, 4.4 percent of the men but only two percent of the women have reached the rank of professor. Among men, almost 30 percent are associate professors, but less than 18 percent of the women have reached this rank."

It looks as though the Harper campus will see a white Christmas this year. There has already been several good snowfalls in the past couple weeks.

Generally Speaking..

by CINDY CARAVELLO

One of the biggest problems everyone is going through right now, is what to buy their family and friends for Christmas. Dec. 11 will be upon us before we know it, and that tree had better be surrounded by fancy packages with cute little cards attached, indicating who gets what. You'd better double check your Christmas list to see that you didn't miss any distant aunt or uncle living in some remote country behind the iron curtain. Nobody likes to be eyed out of a present.

There's really no need to strain your brain for ideas of what to buy people this Christmas. Don't worry if you bought something that they don't need. You won't have to go from store to store looking for that special something either. By now you should realize that it doesn't matter what you buy, just buy something, anything.

The secret is a successful Christmas is in the wrapping paper. Who cares about what's inside? It's the glittery paper with clever little scenes that covers the box that really grabs the eye.

Look at it this way. These neatly wrapped boxes are going to have to sit under the Christmas tree for at least a week, maybe more. Everyone will be seeing the wrapping paper more than the gift, so why not make the wrapping paper the main attraction.

A new trend, which has recently been set, is called Reflect-A-Wrap. This concept which has revolutionized the idea of gift wrapping, is rapidly spreading across our nation. Reflect-A-Wrap is simply a means of communicating to the giftee what the offer has purchased for him or her this Christmas. The offer is the one who does the giving and the giftee is the one who does all the receiving.

Suppose you were to surprise your best girlfriend with an engagement ring for Christmas; then you'd want something that will reflect the meaning of marriage, your future together, and what it will hold for the both of you. Pick up a roll of Reflect-A-Wrap wrapping paper, preferably in pastel pink or blue. Get the one that depicts a twinkling ball of snow, puff out away on their brand new paper while others sit coughing and gazing at the thick, snowy air.

Mothers are very easy to buy presents for. Just get her an apron. That's something that she can really put to good use. You really have to get her something or else all the neighbors will start rumors about you. They'll make you look like a cheapskate. Just make sure that the apron has long enough ties so she may just make you take it back.

The wrapping paper for the apron should be something durable. You will probably want something that can be thrown in the washer and dryer repeatedly without falling apart. Reflect-A-Wrap has come out with a new detergent paper in avocado green that is decorated with frying pans, cake plates, mixing bowls and other kitchen type decor. The idea behind this wrapping paper was to invent something that mothers could relate to.

Try to keep away from the conventional type wrapping paper with polka-dotted nautica, red-crowned reindeer, or multi-winged angels. Whatever you do, don't use red and green paper, it's just too tacky. People seem to be fed up with the same old thing year after year, red and green. They want something different.

Hopefully, you're not one of those that makes the mistake of procrastinating with your annual wrapping paper shopping spree. You know what happens when you wait until last minute. One day the shelves are jam packed with assorted wraps, and then, zap, the stock is depleted in seconds. Each year, clerks must turn away thousands of crying customers, leaving them with only one alternative—use the Sunday comic strips to wrap their gifts.

Take this as a lot of good friendly advice: go out and get your Reflect-A-Wrap paper now. Its sure to lay plenty of it. Don't worry about buying too much, you can always use it for next year's gifts. Even better, you can always tell it to your neighbors if they should run short. Sell it to them at double the price so that you'll be able to take in quite a hefty profit.

This Christmas, don't forget what our holiday season is all about. Too many people get caught up in the fever of gift buying and miss the real meaning of it all. Remember, it's not what you buy someone for Christmas, it's what you wrap in.

Merry Christmas to the world's greatest Canadian philosopher.

Chicago bank trains help

A unique experimental word processing program is being conducted jointly by the Continental Bank of Chicago and the Secretarial Science Department at Harper. The purpose of the program is twofold—to train individuals in the use of modern word processing equipment currently used in business today and to employ qualified Harper students and local residents to prepare actual work for Continental Bank in a satellite word processing center located in F303.

Word Processing, as viewed by most people, is the use of automatic typewriters with video display terminals and other computerized equipment to make text editing easier when preparing typewritten letters and reports. A more accurate definition is that word processing is a systematic approach applied to the handling of office paperwork that involves people, procedures, and equipment.

Word Processing is being used in all sizes of offices wherever a large volume of paperwork must be completed as quickly as possible. Manufacturing companies, legal offices, hospitals, and insurance companies are only a few of the many users of word processing equipment.

Mary Ann Mackinnon, Coordinator of the Secretarial Program, said, "Having Continental Bank on campus gives us an opportunity to train students in the use of up-to-date word processing equipment that Harper College could not otherwise afford. It also gives our students an opportunity to learn and work on a part-time basis at the same time." She further indicates that the Center has been so successful that Continental plans to double the operation of the Center next year.

Because of the great demand in the job market for word processing operators, Harper has established a Word Processing Program that involves training on the Lextron Videotape equipment provided by the Bank as well as the IBM Mid, Card II and II. Two new courses will be offered this Spring—Introduction to Word Processing (SECT 101) on Monday evenings from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. and Word Processing Dictation and Transcription (SECT 111) on Wednesday evenings from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.

According to Rebecca McLaughlin, Word Processing Instructor, "There is a great need for word processing personnel in business today. More and more companies are installing this type of equipment and are looking for trained personnel. There is a definite shortage, and job opportunities are unlimited on either a part-time or full-time basis with excellent salaries."

An agreement is not a contract. What compliance with law is needed to make a court-enforceable contract?

Q. We are a group of clerks employed in the purchasing department of a large corporation located in Chicago, Ill. Please give us the basic requirements of an enforceable contract and the difference between a contract and an agreement-is there one?

A. Although used synonymously or interchangeably, an agreement and a contract differ basically. To the courts, an agreement means the consent of two persons respecting the translation of some right or benefit with a view of constructing a mutual obligation. A contract is usually a writing which contains the agreement of two parties with terms and conditions and which serve as proof of the obligation (88 U.S. 38).

Note the basic requirements of a court-enforceable contract (Am. Jur. 3d Ref. Contracts Sec. 1.0, 1b(2)).

-Mutual assent, offer and acceptance of two parties who are competent of mind of age, or a party qualified as a corporate person with authority to act through its duly authorized officers.

-Must provide for a sufficient consideration, a right, interest, or benefit accruing to one party, or some forbearance, detriment, loss or responsibility given, suffered or undertaken by the other party.

-Must be in writing generally a contract is valid whether it is written or not with these exceptions provided with variations in the Statute of Frauds in every state (Am. Jur. 3d Ref. Int. Est. Sec. 1.5, 335-340).

Contracts are unenforceable unless some memorandum or note thereof is in writing signed by the parties to be charged, or another person lawfully authorized; such contracts include those in which a person undertakes to answer for the debt and default or misarrangement of another; those not to be performed within one year from the making thereof; those for the sale of land; those for the sale of goods and ware in excess of specified values which varies in the states' statute of trade.

-And finally, contracts contrary to law, morality or public policy are illegal and void.

Q. Does the Federal Tax Reform Act of 1976 free the surviving spouse of a married couple from paying federal estate taxes if the tenancy created by the husband who owned the home before marriage?

A. The Act (Sec. 302) contains a specific provision applying only to married couples.

The new law has changed the federal estate tax rate for husband and wife joint tenancy created after 1976. Under the new rules, only one-half of the value of the property owned in joint tenancy is includable in the decedent's gross estate regardless which joint tenant furnished the consideration.

GED prepares students

The Adult Basic Education department at Harper will offer a new eight-week session of GED classes for individuals preparing for the high school equivalency examination. Classes will begin the week of Jan. 15, 1979 and end the week of March 12. A second set of eight-week classes will be offered from March 19 through the week of May 14.

Classes in mathematics, English grammar, and reading are available Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings or Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday evenings. Instruction on the United States and Illinois Constitutions is also given in the reading class.

Basic Skills classes in mathematics, English grammar, and reading development also will be offered on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings and on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings. These classes are for students who have not attended high school or for students whose skills are below high school level.

Both GED and Basic Skills classes are offered free to the student since the tuition is reimbursed by federal and state Adult Basic Education funds.

Registration for the classes will be held on Jan. 10 and Jan. 11 from 9:30 to 11 a.m. and from 6:30 p.m.

in F17. Students should allow one hour for registration and should bring a pencil, their social security number, and their car license plate number. Further information is available at ext. 225.

'Who's, Who' now accepting applications

Since 1968, Harper has participated in the "Who's Who Among Students in American Junior Colleges" program.

The "Who's Who" program provides national recognition for selected two-year college students as well as permanent reference for prospective employers. Only second-year students (those who have completed a minimum of 24 credits) who are enrolled in a two-year curriculum are eligible for nomination.

Criteria for selection are academic standing, participation and leadership in curricular and co-curricular activities, and community service.

Students who would like to be considered for this recognition may apply through the Student Activities Office. ASJC Application forms are available now, but the deadline for applying is 4 p.m. on Jan. 17, 1979.

Applications will be reviewed by a college Selection Committee and applicants will be notified of the Committee's decision.

Hawaii Trip

It is not too early to make travel plans for Spring Break. RTH Harper College will sponsor a vacation trip to Hawaii, from April 12-20, 1979. During this eight-day, seven-night trip, participants' lodging will be at The Breakers, a lovely hotel accommodation just a block from famous Waikiki Beach.

Brochures and further information are available in the Student Activities Office, A338.

Flu vaccine

The vaccine will be available in the Health Service, Room A-302 until Saturday, December 16th. The vaccine will be effective for the following viruses: Hong Kong A & B, Texas and Russian flu.

The cost for the injection will be $1.50 and you may request the vaccine in the Health Service from 8:15 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturday. This is the last week for the vaccine—get your injection now and avoid the flu!

Review

Harper College will offer a course in Secretarial Procedures this spring for individuals interested in returning to work or for currently employed office workers who wish to learn or review up-to-date methods in secretarial procedures.

The Secretarial Procedures course covers office organization, time management, telephone techniques, mail handling, travel arrangements, records management, human relations problems, business communications, plus an in-depth study of the role of the secretary—past, present and future.

The course will be offered on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays from 9 to 10 a.m. or 10 to 11 a.m. or on Thursday evenings from 6:30 to 9 p.m. Classes begin Jan. 10 and continue through May 18.

Part-time students may register by telephone, 397-2280, on Jan. 2, 4, and 5. On-campus registration will be held on Jan. 11, 12, and 13.

For further information students may contact the Business Division at ext. 331.

Circle K

"Care and Carol with Circle K this Christmas break. The Circle K Club needs some of you sympathetic and caring Harper students to go with them on their Christmas Holiday Tour," says President of Circle K, Glenn Lambert.

On Saturday, Dec. 16 they are going to visit the children's wards of Northwestern Community and St. Alban's Hospitals. They will sing Christmas carols and give out gifts.

On Dec. 26 they are going to St. Joseph's Nursing Home in Palatine, to sing Christmas carols.

"Circle K needs your help so those lonely and forgotten people will have a brighter and happier Christmas Holiday," Lambert said.

Interested students can leave their names and phone number in the Circle K mailbox in the Student Activities Office, A338.

Tour

Harper College is sponsoring a three week educational tour to France, Germany, Austria and Switzerland this summer from June 20-July 10. The tour is open to Harper students and community residents and may be taken for college credit. This trip will offer special opportunities for study in the field of culinary arts, including optional gourmet dinners, visits to famous cooking schools and tours of French and German streets.

The 1979 European tour will be a sequel to the trip last summer. The package price of $1018 includes: round trip air transportation on a regularly scheduled air line, hotel accommodations, two meals a day, numerous sightseeing excursions, all ground transportation and gratuity, as well as, baggage and health insurance. Participants will have ample free time to pursue their own special interests.

An informational meeting will be held on Wed., Jan. 17 at 7 p.m. in bldg. A, room 341.

For further information, contact Suzanne Heron at ext. 371. Participation will be limited to 40, so early registration is encouraged.

THE RTA EXPRESS

ANOTHER GREAT RUN FOR YOUR MONEY.

Revised bus route serves Harper College.

More students commute via bus.

The students of William Rainey Harper College will continue to enjoy regular bus service to school. The newly revised #93 bus serves the college as well as Northwestern Community Hospital and Meadport Center for the Handicapped. Students who commute to school via RTA's North Western commuter service can catch the bus at the Arlington Heights Station. The bus runs at convenient times weekdays, the fare is only 30 cents.

Free schedules for the #93 may be obtained by writing RTA, P.O. Box 938, Chicago, IL 60606. Or one may call RTA Travel Information toll free 800 973 7900. For best service, calls should be made in the evening.

Inexpensive transfer provides travel in six counties.

For an additional dime, students and other passengers may purchase an RTA Universal Transfer, which is good for transportation on most RTA bus services in the six counties of Cook, Lake, McHenry, DuPage, Kane and Will.

Wrestlers win meet

The Harper Hawks bounced back from a defeat last week to annihilate Wright College. Still ranked by injuries and a valuable wrestler still untouchable, Harper put on a strong showing against Wright, winning 80-3.

Harper forfeited at 118 lbs. At 120 lbs. Joe Rizza wrestled a very formidable opponent and came out with a 10-9 win. Rizza showed enough conditioning in his hard fought victory. Rizza got a quick lead and never lost that lead on his way to his second win of the season.

At 134 lbs. Paul Preissing wrestling up a few weights was pitted against a much more experienced wrestler. Preissing built up a good lead and went on to record his second win of the early season.

Angelo Rocchia 143 lbs. lost a majority 13-12. "Angelo really seems to be coming around," commented Head Coach Norm Lovelace.

Superior 150 pounder Mike Reif flexed his muscles on the way to a lopsided and eventual pin. Coach Lovelace feels Reif has all the tools needed to be a junior college all-american.

At 158 lbs. Greg Moll wrestled a superior bout. After Moll built up a sizeable lead he went on to register a second period pin. Moll looks to be a very competitive wrestler this year for the Hawks.

The Hawks forfeited at 167 lbs. Jeff Richter really pulled his weight this week by recording a second period fall.

Nevertheless, Lou Joseph was very impressive in his first match by registering Harper's fastest pin, less than two minutes into the match. Joseph, a graduate of Harrison High School, is a valuable addition to Harper's team.

Heavyweight Sean Moul put the tying on the scales by defeating his inexperienced opponent by a close 11-10 margin and giving Harper a bit win in their conference identifier.

The Hawks surely have some bright spots. With such returns as Mike Reif, Tom Smith, Joe Rizza and Danny Weber. Coach Lovelace is very optimistic about the possibility of having a few national place finishers.

Attention Bobby Orr, Bobby Hall, and other interested students in Harper's hockey team. Tryouts are Dec. 27 and 28 at 4:30 at the Arlington Ice Spectrum.

John Eliasik: football

Coach Eliasik has been the only football coach the Hawks have ever known with this being his last season, guiding Harper to a 9-2 record and an Illinois state championship. Previous to that he led the Hawks to a 7-3 state in 1976.

One would have to search far and wide for anyone with better credentials, as coach Eliasik was captain his senior year at Southern Illinois and named to its "All-Decade" team. He did not go on to pro ball as a knee injury in his sixth game of his senior year ended any hopes.

"This season was very, very surprising. It took a lot of character to come back as we did after our second game (35-7 loss to Trilon, changed to 1-0 forfeit victory for the Hawks when a Trilon player was found ineligible.) We didn't expect to reach such heights," Eliasik said looking back on this very successful season.

"This team was somewhat different than others, as they were not a rah-rah type team, but rather they used inside motivation. They knew what they had to do each week, and they went out and did it."

Junior college coaches have perhaps the toughest problems in trying to build a winning program, as unlike high school or other colleges they don't have four years to work with a player, but only two.

He feels the talent of the players under to Harper is improved. With four year schools limited in scholarships some of the people are filtering down to us, also experience right away at the college level. I definitely feel this.

It will help us in attracting players as lack of facilities has hurt us."

Coach Eliasik has no real plans on leaving Harper after three successful seasons in a row. "It would have to be a real good situation. I've seen the growing pains, as one season we had to dress out of our cars."

Martha Lynn Bolt: women's tennis

When one talks about women's athletics at Harper, one has to also talk about Martha Lynn Bolt. Ms. Bolt has been with Harper since the beginning and has coached many winning teams in women's tennis and softball. This fall she coached the women's tennis to a state championship and a berth in the national tournament. She was named "Coach of the Year" to cap off a season in which any team would find difficult to match.

"She is more of a friend than a coach," said Kris Krueger who has played under Coach Bolt the last few seasons.

"She is different than other coaches as she works mostly on the mental part of the game. After all 90 percent of winning is being mentally prepared," commented Mary Beth Frick in conquering Ms. Bolt in other coaches it's his had.

Like all coaches she feels fundamentals are the most important. "I try to work on strong fundamentals and from there build up. I also try to prepare my players for the mental aspect of the game."

Coach Bolt faces the same problems as men's athletics with the two-year turnover. "It's difficult to rebuild. You may have a super player and really start working in the few points of her game and next year she's gone."

Ms. Bolt feels very optimistic on her team's chances for a fine showing in nationals. The team has been working hard in practice. We've set some goals and we're working to reach them. During practice now we are working on polishing their skills and working on different strategies. Something we didn't have a real good chance to work on during the season.

The team will play in a couple of matches this spring and coach Bolt hopes they can practice against the men's team before going on to nationals this May.

Coach Bolt faces the same problems as men's athletics with the two-year turnover. "It's difficult to rebuild. You may have a super player and really start working in the first points of her game and next year she's gone."

Ms. Bolt feels very optimistic on her team's chances for a fine showing in nationals. The team has been working hard in practice. We've set some goals and we're working to reach them. During practice now we are working on polishing their skills and working on different strategies. Something we didn't have a real good chance to work on during the season.

The team will play in a couple of matches this spring and Coach Bolt hopes they can practice against the men's team before going on to nationals this May.

John Eliasik: football

Coach Eliasik has been the only football coach the Hawks have ever known with this being his last season, guiding Harper to a 9-0 record and an Illinois state championship. Previous to that he led the Hawks to a 7-3 state in 1976. One would have to search far and wide for anyone with better credentials, as coach Eliasik was captain his senior year at Southern Illinois and named to R's "All Decade" team. He did not go on to pro ball as a knee injury in his sixth game of his senior year ended any hopes.

"This season was very, very surprising, it took a lot of character to come back as we did after our second game (30-7 loss to Triton, changed to 1-0 forfeit victory for the Hawks when a Triton player was found ineligible). We didn't expect to reach such heights." Eliasik said looking back on this very successful season.

This team was somewhat different than the others, as they were not a run-rally type team, but rather they used inside motivation. They knew what they had to do each week, and they went out and did it."

Junior college coaches have perhaps the toughest problems in trying to build a winning program, as unlike high school or other colleges they don't have four years to work with a player, but only two.

He feels the talent of the players going to Harper is improving. "With four years schools limited in scholarships some of the people are filtering down to us, also experience right away at the college level. I definitely feel BSG, it will help us in attracting players as lack of facilities has hurt us."

Coach Eliasik has no real plans on leaving Harper after three successful seasons in a row. "It would have to be a real good situation, I've seen the growing pains, as one season we had to drive out of our cars."

Weather delays bldg. M opening

Weather problems have delayed the projected early opening of Harper's new athletic facility building. Although there are many setbacks, the college still hopes the gymnasium will be open for May graduation, and be in use for the summer as defense programs and community use.

(photo by Steve Munkal)

by Jody Saunders
The projected early spring opening of Harper's massive sports complex, Building M, has proved to be off target as construction workers battle frigid temperatures and heating complications unsuccessfully.

Dr. Garvin Fischer, vice president of student affairs, said the extremely cold temperatures existing in the $2,875,000 athletic center made it difficult for construction workers to continue with their work.

"We can't put the gym floor in because we need an exact temperature to pour the floor. The building is very cold and certain things can't be done because of that," Fischer said.

A 70° F temperature must be maintained in the building to complete the synthetic gym floor, which will be constructed over the already-laid concrete floor. Don Maize, director of business services, said the completion of the gym floor is "the last thing in the building that will need to be done, after all the other work is finished. This is on the floor isn't trained."

Maize also cited other reasons for the delay, such as concrete shortages and difficulties getting qualified tradesmen to work on the athletic center.

"Maybe our projected schedule was too hopeful, but as soon as things start falling behind it has a snowball effect. The plumbers might get behind schedule and this starts catching up with the other tradesmen working on the building," Maize said.

Despite this setback Fischer and other college officials remain optimistic about the complex opening in May.

"We still hope the building will be open in May for graduation and expect the building to be operating for academic programs and community use in the summer," Fischer said.

HARPER COLLEGE

VOL. 12A NO. 15 William Rainey Harper College, Argonne and Roselle Roads, Palatine, Illinois 60067 312 397-3000 January 29, 1979

Master plan finished in April

by Jody Saunders
A long-range master plan, designed to assist college officials in preparing for Harper's future, is nearing the final stages of completion. The $65,000 project, originally expected to conclude this month, will be finished in April.

The major result of this extensive project will be the production of a long-range plan, which presents the vital planning decisions made by Harper. These decisions concern future programs for education, human resources, services, facilities and finances at the college.

Enrollment will be placed on a course and questions with an institution in the future.

At the start of the lengthy project last February several objectives for college officials and the Harper board of trustees were announced. Significant importance was placed on the detection of college-wide issues and concerns. As Harper administrators and trustees could furnish planning decisions for the future.

Harper President James McGrath said it is very important to always plan for the future. The masterplan will chart up things we're going to be and do as an institution as we move into the 80's. We would move forward with an direction if we didn't have a master plan.

Decisions which involve policies and future programs at Harper will be made by the board of trustees. Decision on how to accomplish these recommendations will be made by the appropriate college officials.

The masterplan will focus on fiscal years 1979-89 through 1982-83. Some projections may extend through 1985-86.

In some areas the plan will deal with 10 years from now. However, there will be a five year commitment for other areas mentioned in the plan.

Long-range planning project coordinator Dr. John MacInnes said, "To aid Harper in the creation of a masterplan, the board of trustees approved the signing of a contract last February with McManis Associates, Inc., a research and management consulting firm based in Washington D.C."

The critical function of McManis will be to examine the data and reports they receive from all of the committee's and people involved in the project and from that prepare a long-range masterplan. "MacInnes said.

Consultants from McManis Associates are also active in projects assigned to them by MacInnes. These assignments from the project coordinator include tasks such as gathering pertinent information for reports and recommendations, preparing reports to be sent to the college, and advising individuals and groups during their involvement in the project.

McManis Associates' staff will derive into the decision making process. They are a firm which monitors the progress of the project while offering the college objective advice.

The board of trustees act as the final authority on the planning decisions. The trustees will make policy decisions which involve the future direction of the college and relations with the Harper community. They will also make fiscal projections for the college.

There are several additional groups actively involved in the project. President McGrath is responsible for implementing the policy decisions approved by the trustees. He must also furnish essential information on the board can make rational decisions. As project coordinator MacInnes said, "MacInnes will be the link between the administrators, faculty and staff members, and McManis Associates. As coordinator I keep all of the groups working and keep the lines of communication open to everyone."

MacInnes must also advise McGrath on questions he receives about the progress of the project, assist in presentations to the board, and maintain the flow of information into the Harper community concerning the development of the planning process.

There are also six task force groups working on the project. The task forces are Instruction, Academic Support, Student Services, Service, Student Affairs and Institutional Support. These groups have studied problems and concerns presented to them by administrators, faculty and staff members, students, individual community members, and several businesses in the area.

Task forces make recommendations

by Jody Saunders
The six master planning task forces recently released their tentative recommendations to the Harper teaching and administrative faculty and staff. Based on months of research and analysis, the recommendations have been presented to McManis Associates in aid in the preparation of a master plan.

The following is a description of each task force and a partial list of their goals and recommendations:

- The Task Force on Institutional Support, headed by William J. Program Coordinator Doug Trevor, is involved with activities that are carried out to provide for the everyday functioning of Harper, as well as the ability of the college to work as a successful operating institution in the future. The following is a partial list of the recommendations submitted by the Task Force on Institutional Support:
 - The college should raise tuition to the maximum allowed by law.
 - The college should evaluate services offered in the college to both staff and students and attach appropriate fees or raise the fees currently charged.
 - The college should sell the second lot and make every effort to employ any profits resulting from that sale in the fall of 1980 and 1981.
 - The college should return to the taxpayers and state request an increase in the tax rate for Educational Fund.
 - The college should mandatorily reduce the amount of internal duplication and printing.
- The Task Force on Student Services, headed by Assistant Development faculty member Bruce Foster, is concerned with activities that contribute to the emotional and physical well-being of the students along with their intellectual, cultural and social development outside the formal instruction program. The recommendations submitted by the Task Force on Student Services include:

Dr. David Williams vice-president of academic affairs has announced plans for the days last because of the snow. Changes will be held on Lincoln's birthday, which is usually a holiday, and final exams which were to be held the week of May 14-18 will now be May 10-18.

Newsbriefs — Winter cheer gone

Politics

The Political Science Club is now planning spring activities. All students are invited to join. Meetings are on Tuesdays at 12:15 p.m. in 220.

Workshop

The Harper College Women's Program is presenting an all-day workshop on "Assertive Communication," Thursday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Board Room of Bldg. A.

Tuition is $25.50 and includes lunch. Additional information is available at ext. 481. Child-care services for a fee may be received by calling ext. 382.

London

Harper is sponsoring a tour to London April 15-25 for $815. The tour includes: round trip air fare, hotel, continental breakfast, three theatre tickets, full day sightseeing tour of London, trip to Hampton Court and Windsor Castle.

For further information students may contact E. L. Lancaster, PSN, ext. 487 or Mr. Mary Jo Willis, A23, ext. 148 or 382.

Grant

The Harper College Faculty Senate is offering two $75 scholarships for the Spring '79 semester to cover books, supplies, and/or sundries. Criteria for selection will be a "B" (3.0) average, fifteen accumulated credit hours, service to the school and financial need. Applications are available in the Financial Aid Office, A34. Deadline for applications is this Friday.

Seminars

The Harper College Institute for Management Development has scheduled five all-day seminars for February, 1979. Offerings include Management by Objectives, February 8 and 9, 8:30; Supervisory Skills for Newly Appointed Supervisors, February 13, 14, and 15, 8:30; Transactional Analysis for Managers, February 18, 19; Managing Secretarial Responsibilities, February 23, 24; and The Woman as a Manager, February 28, 29.

All seminars will be held in the Board Room of Bldg. A. Tuition includes luncheon, refreshments, and all seminar materials.

For additional information call the Harper Institute for Management Development: 397-3009, ext. 381 or 382.

To enroll in any of the seminars, call the Continuing Education Admissions Office: 397-3009, ext. 481 or 412.

Tours

A three week tour to France, Germany, Austria and Switzerland is being sponsored by Harper College in conjunction with the American Institute for Foreign Study.

In addition to sightseeing, tour participants will live and dine at local people's homes, lunch at restaurants in a Lucerne cafe, champagne from a local winery, riding a post box and sleeping under real feather ticking.

The package price of $3,300 includes round trip air transportation, hotel accommodations, two meals a day, numerous sightseeing excursions, all ground transportation and gratuities.

Further information is available from Suzanne Harris at ext. 371. Participants will be limited to 40, as early registration is encouraged.

SU

Southern Illinois University will sponsor a guest day on Feb. 18, 1979 from 8:30-3:30 at the SU campus.

The objective of guest day is to give students thinking of transferring to SU an opportunity to visit the campus and obtain specific information.

Further information may be obtained by contacting Joyce Nader, A-307, or reading the bulletin board outside of the counseling center.

Legal Exam

Prior to entering the Legal Technology Program at Harper College in Palestine, prospective students must pass an entrance exam. The exam for individuals planning to enter the program during the fall 1979 semester is given on the fourth Thursday of each month, August through December. The next exam will be held on Thursday, February 22 at 9 a.m.

After completing the Harper College admission application, interested individuals should contact the College Testing Center, ext. 541 to register for the exam. On the scheduled test date, applicants must submit a written resume and a statement of career goals.

Tuition

Harper College tuition refunds are now available. Students must furnish the following:

- Payment made with cash requires a paid receipt.
- Payment made with a personal check requires a three week waiting period until the check clears the bank or proof of a cleared check from one's own bank.
- Payment made with a money order or a cashiers check requires a copy of this money order or cashiers check.

Check refunds will not be processed until after Feb. 28. There is a 100 percent refund prior to the first day of the semester-less a $3 service charge. There is an 80 percent refund the first week of school. There is a 50 percent refund the second week of school and there is no refund after the second week of school.

CPR Classes

The Class of 1977, as part of its class gift to Harper College, allocated monies to the Health Service to be used to purchase manikins for CPR classes. Because of this gift, the Health Service will again be offering free classes during Spring Semester 1979. These classes will be held on Wednesdays from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. during February, March and April. Students must attend three consecutive classes in order to receive a certificate. The first session of these classes will begin Feb. 7. Registrations will be taken on a "first come first serve" basis and will be taken in the Health Service, A502 or by calling Ext. 161.

If you enjoy shoveling snow for hours on end, waiting long underwear and jumping your car, then winter's your kind of season.

Generally Speaking

by CINDY CARAVELLO

You've got to admit that at first snow can be very exciting. School is canceled as the tiny little flakes fall and multiply with each passing minute. Those shy crystals coat your front lawn forcing you to stay home and take it easy.

This is your grand opportunity to watch "All My Children" while sipping on a cup of hot cocoa in front of the crackling fireplace.

Depression sets in when you realize that you'll have no soap opera, hot cocoa, makes you ill, and the closest thing you have to a crackling fireplace is a dusty fireplace.

Also, the thrill of winter is worn out before its time. Your fantasy land crumbles and reality hits you hard in the face: you've snowed in!

Cabin fever gnaws at your insides. The only people you've communicated with for the past week are your darling brothers and sisters, nagging parents and God forbid snowed in relatives.

You had the holiday cheer but now with the last piece of leftover Christmas turkey. Suddenly, everyone is cranky and irritable.

Venom drips from every mouth.

Simple greetings like, "Good morning" make you flinch and take pot shots at family members.

Between the travel advisories and blizzard warnings, everyone is on the edge of committing murder. Every new inch of fluff that falls means another day or two that you will remain a shut-in.

Those very same people, upon whom you adored expensive gifts just one month ago, have somehow become the ones you threaten with knives, forks and grapefruit spoons while dining together.

The blizzard of '79 just goes to prove the old saying, "the family that prays together, stays together and will eventually drive each other up the wall."

Students experience the UN

Harper is offering two Political Science trips this spring to students.

Students may apply for positions in the Harper student delegation, to attend a Model UN conference in New York City from April 18-19. Approximately 130 American colleges and universities will be represented. The students will take on the role of UN delegates.

A limited number of students will be selected and applications are available in the Student Activities office and in D204. All applications are due Feb. 9.

Further information may be obtained by calling Sheryl Reynolds at 381-4479.

In early April, Harper College students will be attending the first annual intercollegiate Model Illinois Government in Springfield, Ill.

The model will involve students from all over Illinois for the purpose of enlightening the students of the functioning of our state government.

The students will hold a General Assembly with committee hearings and debates. Students will also learn first hand from government officials.

The Harper delegates will represent the actual legislative districts that Harper encompasses. Therefore, the students will be able to voice an opinion on issues which are important to themselves and their constituency.

Applications are available in D204 or in the Student Activities office. Interested students may call Mike Lavanway at 437-2566 for more information.

The Clerk of Chicago Association of Chicago recently donated $300 to Harper's Scholarship Fund to honor food service students.

Working Abroad made easy

Hundreds of U.S. students will find jobs in France, Ireland, Great Britain and New Zealand this summer through the Work Abroad program sponsored by the Council on International Educational Exchange (CIEE). For the past 10 years, this program has provided students with the direct experience of living and working in another country, and, at the same time, helped them reduce the cost of their trip. The Work Abroad program virtually eliminates the red tape that students faced in the past when they wanted to work overseas.

Participants must find their own jobs but will have the help of cooperating student travel organizations in each country. In France they may work during the summer; in Great Britain they may work at any time of the year for up to six months; in Ireland they may work at any time of the year for up to four months; in New Zealand they may work for up to six months if they arrive between May 1 and Oct. 31.

The jobs are usually unskilled: factories, department stores, hotels, etc. Salaries are low, but students generally find enough to pay for their room and board while they work. A typical job would be that of chambermaid in a hotel in London's West End. But last summer one enterprising student found work as an apprentice boxer for one of Ireland's racing stables.

To qualify for CIEE's program, students must be between the ages of 18 and 30 and must be able to prove their student status. To work in France, they must be able to speak and understand French.

For more information and application forms, students may contact CIEE, Dept. PR-WA, 777 United Nations Plaza, New York, New York 10017; or 234 North Santa Cruz #211, Los Gatos, Cal. 95030.

Horoscope

By Gine

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)—A kind of "business as usual" week with the possibility of romance and increased social life. Take care of projects requiring detail work, since you are now more patient than usual. Use your artistic creativity.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)—Concentrate on career and finish up any projects carried over from last month. Catch up on correspondence, contact advertisers or publicity people. Get involved in a new artistic hobby—have fun!

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)—Celebrate your previous efforts and work cooperatively with others. Guard against impulsive actions. This is the time to look carefully before you leap. Enjoy the performing arts and use your own creativity.

CANCER (June 21 to July 21)—Go over money matters with an eye to how they can be improved—don't just worry about it. Be available to talk with close relatives, make contacts with the advertising and communications media. Your personality is vibrant.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 22)—You are in top form now, and even difficult tasks can be accomplished easily. Associate good compliments and honest you. Channel your energies toward your creative ambitions and handle substance carefully.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)—Don't reach conclusions based on rumor or gossip. Wait until the "official word" comes through. Maintain caution and your usual factual analysis when making decisions. New people you meet socially may be important in your future.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)—You can accomplish something now that succeeds beyond your fondest expectations. Tune in to what did and didn't work in the past. You can make marvelous impressions on others and your popularity soars!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)—Your energy is high and you could feel pressure from many demands. Curb immoderation and adopt a positive outlook with courage.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)—You're feeling content and satisfied with your life, but don't boast about your victories. Some may be moving their residence and it is a pleasant experience. A project you finish now could bring future prestige and money.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)—There is great satisfaction in your work, as well as a possible bonus or raise. Others look up to you and you have gained respect for your abilities in management. Inspire others with your enthusiasm.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)—You could feel frustrated when cooperation is lacking and you cannot get agreement on your plans. Don't force the issue, become over-ly aggressive and cause a fight. Compulsive self-will could bring negative results.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20)—Creative ideas come to you—write another—write them down! With so many diverse activities you could meet yourself coming and going, so organize your time. Work slowly by step toward a goal instead of taking one huge leap.

Snow creates mess

The excessive snow which has fallen this winter has caused driving and parking problems for all of us and has temporarily reduced the capacity of our parking lots to about 70% of their normal capacity. Personnel from the Roads and Grandstands Department are working very hard to move the snow and increase the capacity of our lots.

According to Kevin King, Supervisor of the Public Safety Department, there are some ways that everyone can help reduce parking problems on campus. They are as follows:

•Leave home a little earlier than normal to allow for extra time to find a parking space and walk to class.

•Use all available parking lots.

We find that the major parking problems are in Student Lots 1 and 2, which are directly south of the administration building. These two lots always fill up first thing in the morning. In most cases, parking spaces are available in the other some lots on campus.

Hawks hope to improve on .500 record

by Joe Kautz

While most of you were enjoying this wonderful winter break with all this new white fluff stuff, the Harper basketball team kept busy in the NCC conference play as the Hawks played 11 games over vacation.

Injuries have played a major part in some of the Hawks' losses as in some games the Hawks only had seven men. Even with this setback the Hawks played one of their best games in losing to Perimeter Powerhouse DuPage 57-50.

The Hawks came back to school Monday but their defensive concentration didn't as defensive ineptitudes turned into Wright points and a subsequent 82-40 loss.

The game was described by head coach Foster Backlund as "our worst performance of the year." A couple of bright spots were the scoring of sophomore center Brad Simular and forward Craig Insalant who had 18 points apiece and also the return of Jeff Marfinski after coming off an injury. Jeff came off the bench to throw in 13 points, all in the second half and almost all coming via long-range corner jumpers.

The loss put the Hawks at 3-6 in NCC play with a 3-3 record and 3-6 overall.

Harper has only three home games remaining, their next game Tuesday against defending champion DuPage, at DuPage at 7:30 p.m. The Hawks next home game is on Tuesday, Feb. 6 at 8 p.m. vs. Joliet and at St. Viator.

Gerhart Schenkerkopf will direct the Gerhart Ensemble in the first concert of the spring semester. Afternoon mid-concert series on Thursday at 7:30 at 12-13. The program will also feature an informal commentary on the instruments and music by Mr. Schenkerkopf.

Mother Nature takes her toll

SNOW, SNOW everywhere and hardly a place to walk. The Blizzard of '79 and subsequent snowdrifts closed the college and made re-opening difficult. (photo by Steve Muskat)

by CINDY CARAVELLO

Harper President, James McGrath, is looking into additional changes in the Spring Semester school calendar which need to be made because classes on Jan. 29 were cancelled when snow closed streets and campus parking lots.

"We'll have to look at the calendar again," McGrath said. McGrath said there must be a total of 78 days of classes held in order for Harper to receive state aid. He said that there were 78 days built into the calendar to compensate for any days lost due to weather conditions, but after losing an entire week plus another day last Wednesday, something has to be done.

The decision was made to keep Harper closed only and none on Wednesday because weather forecasts pointed toward conditions in the afternoon.

Radio stations were announcing Harper's decision to reopen at 12 p.m., however, after seeing no end of the snow in sight, it was decided to close the campus until Thursday morning.

McGrath said it would have been too disastrous to ask students and faculty members to venture out in the treacherous conditions that prevailed Wednesday.

The parking lot also posed a problem for anyone coming to Harper because a large percentage of spaces would not have been available for cars to park, he said.

Hank Kurwinski, acting director of the physical plant, said he and his men have been plowing snow daily since Dec. 26.

Since Harper has only two front and loader plows which can not keep up with this unusual amount of snow, snow removal services have been called in to help relieve the congestion in the parking lots, he said.

The first company to help Harper plow out was Platte Excavation Company.

At 4 a.m. when you're in bed...

by CINDY CARAVELLO

Have you ever wondered who decides to close down Harper's campus when mass Mother Nature lets loose with her fluff?

Well, it's not as easy as you think. Great minds get together and discuss the situation before a decision is made.

Hank Kurwinski, acting director of the physical plant, who is usually on campus, checks out the roads around the campus and the parking lots. Kurwinski then calls Dr. David Williams, academic vice president, to see how things are cooking around Crystal Lake, where he lives.

Williams in turn calls up Dr. James Perry, vice president of administration, to inform him

Faculty, administrators eliminated

Board okays $700,000 in cuts

Twelve administrative positions, 14 faculty and counseling positions, and three entire programs have been eliminated by the Harper College Board of Trustees in order to save $700,000 from the 1979-80 budget.

The board met in special session Jan. 28 to vote on the cuts. Eliminated from next year's course offerings were the medical laboratory technician, architectural transfer and associate in liberal studies programs.

Administrative positions which will not be filled are: Dean of Instructional Services; Dean of Continuing Education; Dean of Student Services; Associate Dean of Special Services; Director of Business Services; Director of Resource Services; and Assistant Director of Admissions. Administrative positions to be terminated are: Associate Dean of Lifelong Learning; Associate Dean of Social Sciences; Director of Development; Director of Accounting and Systems; and Assistant Director of Food Services.

Duties of the above personnel have been reassigned to other administrators.

Faculty and counselor associate positions to be terminated include architecture; art; biology (2); criminal justice; learning laboratory; library; medical laboratory technician; nursing; psychology; refrigeration and air conditioning; secretarial science; sociology; and student development (one faculty, two counselor associates).

The college dining room will be closed which will result in the termination of food service personnel from various classifications.

The action was taken as part of a college-wide program of cost reductions which will include the recommendations of task forces and committees studying the areas of master planning, continuing education, energy and maintenance, extensions and off-campus sites and information dissemination.

"It is with great regret that we make these program and personnel cuts, but the board was left with no alternative," said Joan Blusman, board chairman. "The foremost commitment of the board of trustees and administration remains to provide the highest quality academic program possible."

In compliance with board policy the faculty master contract, administrators and college-time faculty members who will not be returning for the next 1979-80 year must receive notification by Feb. 1.

and prepare recommendations regarding personnel reduction.

Financial problems at the college have resulted primarily from the inability to increase the tax levy, according to college officials. The board went to the voters in September 1976 requesting approval of a 5.3 cents per $100 assessed valuation tax increase for the operation of the college. The referendum was unsuccessful, leaving the college beginning with 12 years ago. Currently, the college has one of the lowest rates, ranking 27th in the state among 39 community college districts. The college has the second highest student tuition in the state, at $17 per credit hour.

In addition, while enrollment has remained stable, the number of students taking full course loads has decreased. Also, inflation has taken its toll on the college and state reimbursement has not kept

Faculty unites against layoffs

by CINDY CARAVELLO

Faculty members are now taking action to oppose the decision the Board of Trustees made recently to lay off 14 faculty members and two counselor associates.

A meeting held last Tuesday, Jan. 29, was held to discuss the members of the faculty senate discussed ways to work against the board's decision to lay off the faculty members.

Harper President James McGrath, said earlier, "I think it is most unfortunate."

McGrath said the new budget year starts July 1 and cuts must be made. Other cuts in addition to the faculty lay offs included: cancellation of magazine subscriptions, travel expenses and association dues. The dining room is also going to be phased out, McGrath said.

After the faculty senate meeting, Lee Schwartz, a psychology teacher who has been employed by Harper for four years, said that he along with all other full-time teachers were made to sign a "loyalty oath" prohibiting them from seeking any employment outside of Harper.

Schwartz then said, "Loyalty can't be a one-way street." Schwartz says that what the faculty body needs right now is support from all faculty members and students to fight the action that the board has taken.

McGrath said that the faculty lay offs were made by "looking at enrollment trends, part time/full-time ratio, and cost of programs."

By making these faculty lay offs, $700,000 will be saved this year, he added.

Schwartz said faculty will be sent to all union members in the near future to get more involvement going.

"NOT GONNA MISS THE BUS TODAY"

Editorial

RTA spurns Harper riders

We've heard of birds that can't fly, cars that don't run, clocks that don't tick... But buses that don't stop for boarders. That's the case with the RTA buses at Harper College.

Because of the snow and cold weather many bus riders prefer to stand inside the doors of bldg. A. There are also people who sit in the cafeteria, by the windows, to wait for the bus if they know they will be there for awhile.

For one reason or another there are many people who miss the buses and have to wait another hour to catch the next one. This situation is very inconvenient for many obvious reasons causing people to be late for trains, meals, babysitters, jobs and other classes.

The buses are supposed to wait for boarders between 1-8 minutes each stop. The schedule is different throughout the day, but the buses are supposed to STOP.

Anyone who watches the buses come and go can see that they often don't completely stop. Sometimes busdrivers slow down when they get near bldg. A, then they sort of glide by the building looking casually around to see if anyone is there. Sometimes the buses will stop, open the doors, and if no one jumps inside immediately, they close the doors and take off. Sometimes they don't even slow down. The busdrivers just zoom right by the building if they don't see anyone standing right in the road waiting.

Surely the drivers must realize that with the weather we are having that people aren't going to stand outside in the middle of the road waiting. Especially since the buses are a couple of minutes late at least, and sometimes up to an hour late.

The RTA has said that they have not received any complaints about this problem. They also said that the reason for the drivers rushing by was because they were probably late and off their schedule, so they are trying to make up the time.

The problem they don't realize they are causing is that in their rushing around to make up lost time they are forgetting that the riders are the people they are supposed to be serving. In passing by prospective customers, they are not doing their job which is to serve the public.

So many people depend on the bus system for everyday living that these problems are not minor to them. It is very irritating watching the bus go by, when one is rushing out the door, coat in hand, to meet it.

Maybe if the drivers worried about their riders, and not about being 1 or 4 minutes off schedule it would help everyone. There aren't many people who would mind waiting the extra minutes as long as they know that the busdriver will stop for them.

Letters to the Editor

Harbinger editorial criticized

Dear Editor

The December 11 editorial regarding student evaluation of teachers is seriously misworded, and quantitative as to its apparent intent.

The Faculty Evaluation Review Committee composed of administrators, faculty and students met throughout the previous academic year, charged specifically with investigating student evaluation of teachers. The committee concluded that the student evaluation system corrupted student education at Harper College.

The background leading to this conclusion is important, and it is unfortunate that The Harbinger editorial did not investigate student evaluations with more reason and journalistic thoroughness. The students on the committee pulled the student body as overwhelming, students attacked the evaluation system as "meaningless" and "biased".

The students did not correlate the improvement of instruction with the evaluation system, but rather regarded it as a time-wasting game.

Your editorial states that since the evaluation has been discarded, the standards of teaching may be lowered because the teachers will know that the students won't be able to do much about it. Such a statement cannot stand, either philosophically or scientifically.

I told The Harbinger consultant any significant research in this field had read the Powell report, based on research of the Harper system, published in College English, January, 1978, which systematically proved a distinct correlation between inflated grades and high evaluation scores. Certainly The Harbinger need not be reminded of the significance of these findings in the education of such students here, but perhaps more seriously erroneous is the implication of The Harbinger's statement that teachers teach for "good grades" and that the faculty does not care and care deeply and professionally for the subject matters they teach, and for the students. The faculty at Harper deliberately chose to teach at an institution which emphasizes the commitment to knowledge imparted by teachers and shared with students.

The Harbinger insults the education process itself when it pretends that teachers not having to make their courses appeal to everyone "which The Harbinger equates with all students" not getting the same quality of education. Teaching is not pop-media, nor is learning always fast, nor can it ever be the same bland fare for everyone. The teachers are individuals, and the students are individuals, and true learning does not take place when everybody just has a real good time.

Genuine real good times for students and teachers include mastering often horrendously difficult material, discriminating intellectually and ethically between the theory and that, searching for more demanding ways to raise significant questions. This should not be measured on a computerized form, nor can it be. To think so is to miss some real good times.

Your teachers do encourage responsible student response, and students should be responsible enough to provide us with their comments in an appropriate evaluation system. But to dismiss your faculty's professional and personal integrity with an editorial such as the one of December 11, evidencing little research and less logic, is to perhaps give us the lowest grade you could have, since it is obvious that The Harbinger's editorial writer needs a sounder education than we may have given. This sorrows us.

Circle K looks for recruits

Dear Editor

You're damn right I care, say the members of Circle K. What do we care about? Today's world, people really need to care about other people. We need to let the elderly know we still need them for their wisdom and experienced advice. We need to let the orphan know they are truly not forgotten.

We need to be the underdog know that we will help them as they won't starve any longer. Yes, we need to let all the people less fortunate than us know Circle K CARES. We care about everyone and we want to help the people of the world live happier lives.

If you have ever said this to your self then you belong with us in Circle K. I'm Glen Lambert, President of Circle K. I'm asking you wholeheartedly for your support and the support of the entire student body here at Harper College. We need people who want to care and who want to work with other people. Please, if you care, come out and join Circle K now!! Let's make this semester a successful one for Circle K and Harper College.

Thank you,
Glen Lambert

Students receive voting rights

Washington, D.C.—In the early fall of 1978, 56 students from Prairie View A & M University attempted to register to vote in Waller County, Texas. But county registrar "Lester" Simon allowed only 22 of the students to actually vote. A few weeks ago, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that Simon had wrongly qualified many of the other students. The court's decision is expected to make it easier for students all over the country to vote where they go to school.

Specifically, the court said local voter registration offices cannot require college students to meet different eligibility rules than those the rest of the population must meet.

The U.S. Dept. of Justice, which took the students' case, said Simon singled out a particular group—students living in the campus housing—as being an extra burden on them that he does not impose on non-student voters, refused to recalculate students as residents unless they proved they owned property, had family in Waller County, or worked. Texas law defines residence only as a fixed place of habitation.

The Supreme Court decision confirmed a March, 1978 ruling of the U.S. District Court for Southern Texas.

Committee investigates tax hike comeback

by JODY SAUNDERS

A six-member Referendum Committee was recently formed to investigate the defeat of the Sept. 18 tax referendum and prepare for a possible return to the voters in the future. Harper voters rejected a 7.5 tax increase which was designed to help the troubled Educational Fund.

After voters rejected a 7.5 cent tax increase in Harper's Education Fund last Sept. 19, a six-member Referendum Committee was formed to investigate the defeat and prepare for a possible referendum in the future.

The main purpose of the committee, which has met six times since the June 10, is to keep in touch with each other and get the basic details work out of the way in case we have to go out for another referendum," Vice President of Student Affairs and Coordinator of the Referendum Committee Dr. (Gerrit) Fischer said.

The committee is reviewing voting results in each of Harper's 48 precincts and discussing future referendum strategy around the Harper Board of Trustees decide another referendum is necessary.

There's questions concerning the wisdom and appropriateness of another referendum. Ultimately, the question of whether or not we should go to the voters for a tax increase is a board decision," committee member Dr. John Muchmore said.

To prevent future referendums from failing, committee members were interested in determining the cause of the defeat. Fischer said blame cannot be placed on the anti-tax groups which surfaced in the community at the time of the referendum, but rather on the apathy among Harper supporters who did not make a trip to the voting booth.

The '78 votes didn't materialize in the '78 referendum as they did in 1975. Because of the anti-taxation period we were not expected a lot of the votes but they didn't increase that much, when compared to the 1975 referendum. There was just a lot of apathy among the voters," Fischer said.

The proposed tax increase was shot down by a vote of 6,232 to 1,289, with only five percent of the possible voters in the Harper district voting.

The committee is basing future moves around a campaign which was implemented in the successful 1975 referendum. Voters approved a bond sale which enabled the college to construct and complete buildings on the main campus and purchase a $3.1 million, 157-acre stretch of land in Arlington Heights. This land was purchased for the purpose of constructing a second campus.

The future of the Arlington Heights campus is hairy as college officials struggle to solve financial problems facing Harper.

"In case we become involved in another referendum, we have set up a plan using a precinct outreach which was used in 1975

There would be teams of people responsible for one precinct in an area where they live. These teams, made up of administrators, faculty members and students, would be in charge of making phone calls and distributing literature in their assigned precinct," Fischer said.

THE SKY is falling, the sky is falling. Snow-laden roofs spring leaks in the aftermath of the record snowfalls and falling tiles, soaked with water, have been taken down in numerous areas on campus. Maintenance personnel have been kept busy with mop-up operations and the leaks are expected to continue through the day.

party with inflation, officials say.

Previously, the college has been able to rely on a fund balance to compensate for increasing operating costs. Because of deficit spending during the last five years, however, the fund balance has been eroded resulting in the current financial situation.

Without the budget cuts being made currently, projections indicate that the college will have a deficit of over $1 million by the end of fiscal year 1979-80, according to college officials. Additional cuts will be made during the budget process. The board has already approved $200,000 in cuts for the 1978-79 budget in the areas of supplies, travel, publications, and news services.

Mother Nature lashes out

Unfortunately, the company put Harper "very low on the totem pole" because of their contracts to plow out Woodfield Shopping Center and O'Hare Field, Kurowski said. Plots was charging the college $100 per hour for plowing.

Kurowski later found a cheaper company, Rudy Plow Service, which charged $60 per hour

Kurowski said and the $6,000 budgeted in the snow removal fund had long been depleted.

Kurowski said that the last time any outside help had to be called in was three years ago when nine to ten inches hit.

Kurowski said that it would be cheaper in the long run for Harper to own more plows rather than to contract with outside companies, but he estimates a front loading plow to cost about $40,000.

Although Harper is looking at the possibility of buying equipment, currently there just isn't any money to make such a purchase.

McGrath seeks aid

McGrath has contacted Gov. James Thompson seeking financial aid since Harper's funds to remove the snow are now gone. He has also contacted the Illinois Community College Board seeking help and is waiting to hear from them.

Even though conditions were better on Thursday, Jan. 18, school remained out of session because only 40 percent of the parking spaces were usable.

Each night plows are shoveling the snow closer and closer to the lake behind Harper to make room for more cars. Kurowski said that cars will be receiving tickets for parking in the medical permit areas and in the fire lanes.

McGrath said that engineers were called to check the condition of the roads, but they could not come and instead recommended that the snow on the roads be kept under six feet. McGrath said the snow on the building's roofs has been kept down to two feet.

McGrath says the buildings and grounds men worked 24 hours a day to rid the roads and roads surrounding the campus of snow.

He said that switchboard operators were on duty for 12 hours a day.

Sleeping facilities were set up in the conference room in Bldg. A and in the nursing lab so that workers could have a place to stay during the long hours.

McGrath also said that food service prepared meals for the workers while they waited to clean up the mess.

Drawings exhibit

A collection of ballpoint pen and pencil drawings plus oils and watercolors by Olan Rasmussen will be on display at Harper now until the end of the month.

As instructor at McHenry County College, Rasmussen has studied art in the United States and Italy and was nominated for the 1978 Governor's Award in Art by the Illinois Arts Council.

The exhibit will be on display during the "Art on Campus" tour of the college in Buildings C and P, second floor.

Concert nearly ruined

Public Safety almost ruined my entire evening last Friday night when I took my younger sister, Peggy, to Harper for a Chubby Checker Concert.

With two tickets tucked inside my purse, we got into my rented out car and made the long journey to Harper's scenic campus.

The doors to the building were unlocked and we let ourselves in. Walking through the cafeteria, we could see all the Chubby Checker fans waiting his arrival.

As we approached the seating area, a "public safety" employee confronted the two of us and insisted that we leave because a Chubby Checker Concert was going to be held in the cafeteria very shortly.

I informed him that we were there to see the concert and I had bought my tickets in advance.

"I'm sorry Ma'am," he said.

He informed us that we had walked through the service doors which were, according to him, locked. The very idea that we should go outside in the frigid cold where we could have been escorted or assaulted in some horrible way! seemed utterly ridiculous to me.

There were no signs posted on any door indicating that no one should enter through them. I told the young man that perhaps notices should be put up so that the public would know which entrances to use and which not to use.

He feebly replied that people would only tear them down. (Tsk! Tsk!)

The irate man in his inappropriate blue uniform, pulled out his chest and insisted that we go outside immediately because we had entered through "locked" doors.

I must confess through "locked" doors.

Sitting, I wasn't going out into the blizzardly cold air, he tried to escort me outside like a common criminal who had just committed some deviate act.

Luckily, he didn't knock out my front teeth with the billy club he was armed with, or give me a shot of mace in the face.

Finally, the truncated fellow called over one of his colleagues because I proved to be more than he could handle.

Another "public safety" employee came over to where we were standing. He asked to see my tickets which I produced without any problem.

He examined them so closely I thought he was going to press them into his nose just to be sure they weren't phantasies.

I was so grateful he didn't insist that we go back outside, I was going to maul him, but they probably would have preferred a simple "Hot Hell!"

The moral of the story is: Never walk through "locked" doors or you may just have to go back outside and start all over again.

Health service open to everyone

Many health services are available without charge to the students of William Harvey Harper College, from 8:30 to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturday. Some of these are: physical exams to diagnose strep, pregnancy testing, tuberculosis skin tests, and venereal disease diagnosis and treatment. You can find these confidential services in AHS, immediately adjacent to the Student Development Center.

In addition, non-prescription medications such as aspirin, tylenol, curtidin, cough medication, Alka-Seltzer, Meclizine, and throat lozenges are also available.

A part-time physician is in the Health Service two hours daily and Wednesday evening from 6 to 8 p.m. He can see, diagnose, and treat illnesses and write prescriptions for necessary laboratory tests, medications and x-rays.

The Health Service is staffed by registered nurses and part-time physicians. Nurses are offered in CPR, weight loss and other areas of interest. If you're ill and have a problem and want some help, drop in the Health Service, AHS. Their door is open.

MOVIE IT ON OVER

Not often does an artist release an album totally made up of other people's material. But Thorogood and Destroyers play tunes by Hank Williams, Willie Dixon, Howlin' McGee and Chuck Berry. Thorogood doesn't have any of his own songs on the L.P., but can he play!

"Move It On Over" is a real hard rockin' rhythm and blues song, is just incredible. Opening with a very hoarse vocal, some slide guitar to the middle, and finishing with a powerful climax, your body actually wants to get up and move.

ROCK WEBS AND NEWS
by THOR KOLNOR & MIKE SIMKUS

"The Sky is Crying" is the best example of his ability to play slide guitar. Some real fire work is recorded here, so good in fact, I can imagine him playing.

"Cassie Blues" country rock, most recently done by Johnny Cash, shows Thorogood's ability to play a concert music. It's like I was down south picking cotton.

"I'm Just Your Good Thing" a bluesy ballad which can bring tears to your eyes or lunge in your throat. "It wasn't Me" and "Be Much Trouble" are typical rhythm and blues songs, but done extremely tight.

Each song has a different emotion or reaction to the listener, which all good music does. After all isn't that what good music is all about?

One problem you may have is finding the record. Rounder is independently distributed and not many stores carry it. It's hard to find, but well worth the effort!

Mr. Warren "Warwick" London Zevon is heading back to the New York studio with producer Jon Landau to begin work on Zevon's upcoming album. Zevon (as just finished doing battle with a case of alcoholism, which had almost led him into a Los Angeles hospital) and the family vacation in warm Hawaii. Zevon's Costello is also out in the Hawaiian Islands, only he is on his own making a concert movie. Wally Phillips calls up Harper College

and
SUE CONROY

Wally Phillips, from WGN morning radio, called Harper College No. 1, but he didn't want to talk to President McGrath, he wanted to talk to an Admissions clerk.

When Joan Smetana was driving to work she had no idea she was being talked about on WGN radio. Wally Phillips had called Mrs. Smetana at her home in Wheaton, but her husband Allen and she was on her way to work at Harper.

Phillips urged her friends and family not to contact her, saying he would call her at work.

An hour and a half later, and none the wiser, Joan Smetana, clerk there in the Admissions Office, received her winning phone call.

"My first reaction was disbelief," said Mrs. Smetana. "It didn't even sound like him but when he started reading off the list of prizes for me to pick from I knew it was real."

The staff in the Admissions Office, about 20 people in all, had contributed to Phillips' "Neediest Children's Christmas Fund." Then they each sent a card in with their names, phone numbers, and addresses in order to qualify for the prizes. They decided to contribute to the fund instead of having a "grab bag" for Christmas presents.

"I wish we would have contributed anyway," said the Admissions clerk, "but the prizes helped to get us moving and really do it."

Mrs. Smetana said the saver is one to call radio stations and the only thing she has ever won in her life was a lucky that was being raffled off by a fraternity when she was at school.

Among the prizes that were offered to her were, an Oriental rug, $200 in checks, an abundance of paint and wallpaper, kitchen appliances, and trips to Florida, Georgia and Acapulco. Even though the Georgia trip was to a resort near where President Carter lived, she passed it up.

Mrs. Smetana chose the kitchen appliances which included: a refrigerator, microwave oven, dishwasher, stove, trashmasher, and garbage disposal.

"I don't think my kitchen will ever hold all of this stuff," exclaimed Mrs. Smetana.

The Smetanas have been married for four years and presently live in an apartment. They just purchased a house less than a month ago, and now they will be able to furnish at least part of it.

"Nobody ever thought anybody from here would win anything, we just did it," she said.

Harper employees get awards

Service awards for five and ten years of employment were presented to 25 Harper employees at a faculty-administrator luncheon in January.

This is the second year since the college's opening in 1967 that service awards have been presented. Last year, 179 employees received awards.

Board of Trustees chairman Joan Klausmann, who presented the awards, thanked the faculty and administrators for their dedication and service. "Your endeavors have established the solid academic reputation which Harper College enjoys. Your continued efforts will be the vital link in the maintenance and growth of this reputation," stated Mrs. Klausmann. "On behalf of the Board of Trustees I thank you for your contributions and look forward to your cooperation as we encounter the challenges of the future."

Checker twists away the night

by TYRON KOLNOR

By the time you read this the Chubby Checker concert will have been out of those heads of the non-attenders, but for those who were there the memory could last a lifetime. Although the Chubby Checker Band expresses no color in their stage show, Checker has a unique way of making up for them all.

Although the show got off to a late start, 75 minutes to be exact, by the time the first of his two shows was over, the audience knew that Checker was giving us his best. Musically he touched most bases, with an opening just number to mark you down as, "Don't Stop" making it sound as if Fleetwood Mac had written it for him. "Hollin' With the Flow" and "Tonight's the Night."

Halfway through the first show Checker did something I've never seen done before, he opened himself up to his audience and asked if any of them had any questions to ask him. Even more surprisingly in this day and age he answered each one with total honesty.

"Chubby is a living legend," said a close friend of Checker's after the show. "He loves people and he leaves every minute of the road." And for better, Checker is just kicking off a new world tour which will include cities as far away as Australia.

During the show Checker told of how he got his name from a woman named Mrs. Dick Clark who had watched him do an imitation of Pat Boone. "She asked me if I had any nicknames and I said, 'he remained silent.' They do call me Chubby."

From then on with relation to Pat Boone, Ernest Evans has been called Chubby Checker.

British Isles trip planned

A two-week tour of the British Isles is set for May 24, June 8, 1979. Students may earn credit in Humanities 10 for participation in the program. The tour will visit England, Wales, and Ireland.

The cost of $900 includes round trip air fare Chicago/London, by British Airways, all ground transportation by private luxury coach, hotel accommodations in double rooms, most meals, sightseeing, gratuities, health and baggage insurance.

Sites to be visited in England include Stratford, the walled medieval city of Chester, castles and towers associated with King Arthur, the 18th Century Georgian city of Bath, and Tintern Abbey. In Wales more Arthurian sites will be explored, as well as magnificent Caernarfon Castle and the Welsh landscape made famous by Dylan Thomas. The week in Ireland includes stays in Dublin, Sligo, Galway, and Killarney with abundant sightseeing of the countryside, a visit to Blarney Castle to kiss the Blarney Stone, an evening of traditional Irish entertainment, and a play at the Abbey Theatre.

Participants will also have free time to pursue their own interests. Optional bus and walking tours, bikes and bicycle excursions will be offered. College students and other adults are welcome to join this program, but the number of participants will be limited to 60.

Animal House spurs series

When a motion picture makes it big, television networks are usually quick to cash in by copying the movie with a television series.

And when "National Lampoon's Animal House" became the nation's most popular movie last year, it was inevitable that one of the networks would slap together a sitcom on fraternity life.

Television producers are seldom too proud to directly copy a popular movie.

But who could have guessed that all three networks would try to rush to an "Animal House" particularly in midseason and while "Animal House" is still going strong at the box office.

It is certainly unprecedented. NBC recently aired "Brothers and Sisters" for the first time, right after the Super Bowl. ABC, using the same producers, characters and writers as "Animal House," will air "Delta House" beginning on Jan. 7. And CBS will offer "Co-Ed Fever" beginning Feb. 4.

"Brothers and Sisters" focuses on the adventures of a trio of fraternity brothers and their sorority friends. "Co-Ed Fever" is about a female college that begins enrolling men.

There is no telling how college students will react to all this celebration of campus mischief and celebration. After "Animal House," his the top, best parties and petty vandalism became the rage.

With three television shows on the air and an "Animal House" sequel in the works, students will indeed be carried by the rest of the nation. Fraternities and sororities, which have enjoyed a rebirth nationally after the anti-establishment turmoil of the 1960s, are becoming even more popular.

The big winner, besides college students, in the "Animal House" success story is Tim Century Communications, which owns the National Lampoon humor magazine.

As a partner with MCA in the "Animal House" movie, the company is enjoying its share of the over $40 million the movie has made so far off. The movie cost less than $4 million to make.

The National Lampoon and MCA are also involved in the "Delta House" television show, which will use many of the same characters as "Animal House."

The "Animal House" producers decided to produce a television series based on the movie because it did not want time out on the potential television revenue—which is what happened to MCA with "American Graffiti." Ironically, National Lampoon ridiculed the movie and its likeness to "American Graffiti" in its popular Decem Sunday newspaper parody.

Whether "Delta House" will be as successful as "Happy Days" is hard to gauge. The National Lampoon has always used married, cross and loud humor successfully in its stage shows, radio shows, albums, books and its magazine, but the question remains—just how will the television public respond?

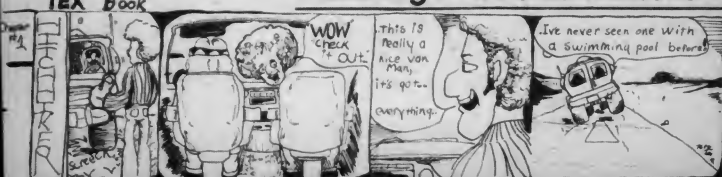

The producers of "Delta House" have made it clear they will use this same brand of humor in its television show.

Network officials expect other fatal disaster or widespread popularity for the shows. If "Delta House," "Co-Ed Fever" and "Brothers and Sisters" succeed, a new genre of sitcoms and a new style of television humor will have been created.

Or it could be just another passing fad.

SPORTS

Not enough participants

Girls' gymnastics team scrapped

by RORY KORTAS

Just recently Harper's girls' gymnastics team had to call it quits for the rest of the year. Numerous reasons piled up to add to the dismantling of the team.

"Everything that could happen, happened," said John Gelch, associate dean of athletics. To his disappointment the gymnastics team is the first in Harper's history of sports to be discontinued.

There are many reasons for the team's abrupt ending. Unfortunately, team participation played a big factor. Instead of the normal six to nine players, this year's team only had five.

Other students wanting to participate found it hard either because of not meeting the eligibility rules or being that the facility to practice at was off campus.

Keeping in mind that gymnastics is a two semester sport, the team had already completed a few months before it disbanded. On Dec. 8, they won a quad meet. With high scores Lori Huber, taking a first in the all-around and Beth Puterbaugh a second.

When the gymnastics coach Phyllis Schramm, was asked how the team was doing so far, she said, "very good." Coach Schramm went on to say, "the team putting its present scores could of easily taken a second and possibly a first in conference."

Both coaches feel with the completion of Edg. M. unfortunate incidents like this should never happen again.

A sight like this will not be seen until possibly next year, as the women's gymnastics team had to be discontinued. Not enough participants, and a variety of problems led to its demise. With Edg. M. completed next year the team will be formed again as practice facilities will be right on campus.

Basketball still struggling

by JOE KUSIK

Harper's basketball team has had more ups and downs than the "Turn of the Century" roller coaster at Great America.

After a somewhat dismal performance against Wright the Hawks exploded for over a hundred points as they blew out Thornton 102-50.

Then came a disappointing last second loss to Kishwaukee 68-66. The Hawks had the ball with less than ten seconds left. Craig Hawkins had the ball near the sideline where a Kishwaukee player casually helped him to a go out of bounds to get the ball back and score in the final seconds.

After Kishwaukee the Hawks faced returning NAC conference champions, the DuPage Chaparrals. The Hawks led by sophomore center Brad Sinclair's 18 points. Most of those coming off of rebounds, dunks and just mauling his way through, as who would want to stop someone 6'7" and 200 pounds from charging to the basket? Harper still came out on the losing end losing again to DuPage by a scant three points 75-80.

Brad Sinclair has been the most consistent Hawk player up to date, as Brad has averaged 18 points his last four games to consistently lead the Harper scoring attack.

Guard Mike Berry has been a welcome return, direct the Hawk offensive attack and keep the team always ready, another returnee is Jeff Martinski, who after coming off an injury poured in 13 points vs. Wright and now is ready to take over his old guard spot.

Harper is now entering the home stretch, the final part of its schedule.

Faculty seeks legal assistance

by CINDY CARAVELLO

After members of the Harper College Board of Trustees turned down a proposal from William Miller, faculty senate president, to rescind the termination letters sent to 14 members of Harper's faculty, Miller announced the Senate's plans to file a grievance on Feb. 25.

Faculty and student body members showed up last Thursday night to protest the action the board took Jan. 29 to lay off the 14 faculty members as one of their steps in budget cuts.

Several petitions were brought up before the board to reconsider the letting go of some of the teachers.

Jeanette Hutchins, a student from the art department, read a petition that was put together by her and two other concerned art students and signed by 262 students in that department.

The petition protested the laying off of Rusty Herring, a full-time art teacher.

The petition stated that the quality of the art department at Harper would be altered greatly by letting Herring go.

Ray Mills, another student from the art department, stood behind what was contained in the petition and told the board members that he has benefited from the full-time staff members in the art department because they're the ones that are around to help students out when they are in need of assistance.

"It kind of hurts to lose one of the team," Mills said, referring to Herring.

Mills said the quality of teaching would not be the same if part-time faculty members would be allowed to take the place of full-time faculty.

William Foust, one of the art teachers at Harper, stood up in front of the board and let them know how disappointed he was about the board's decision to lay off faculty.

"There ought to be some moral obligation here," he said.

"Every avenue has been explored," Foust said about the board's action to lay off faculty in order to reduce the college's deficit to saving $700,000.

"You put yourself by letting the faculty go," he said. "I cannot accept that."

Leslie Rice, a former architecture student at Harper, showed the board two petitions that had been signed asking the board to reconsider its recent decision.

Rice's petition was aimed toward the board after it decided to phase out the architectural transfer program because of its recent enrollment rates.

Rice told the board that she had called up local public schools and found that 27 to 43 students had planned on attending Harper's architectural transfer program next fall.

"The main purpose of Harper," Rice said, "is to provide high quality transfer programs."

"We need to provide the kind of education our children want," she added.

Miller later reminded the board of the 23 suggestions that the Reduction in Force Committee (RIF) has brought to the Board's attention to help reduce the deficit.

Harper President James McVittie interpreted Miller that the 23 suggestions will be reviewed starting next week. "Twenty out of the 23 seem feasible," he said.

This faculty member is one of the many who protested some of the budget cuts at one of the Harper

Juan Klusman, board chairman, commented that it is the community's right to show up at the board meetings to express their feelings and it is good to know that citizens are concerned.

Karen Keras, English teacher at Harper said, "It was unethical, ill-advised and immoral for the board to take this action and ignore all the recommendations from the RIF committee."

Bankers discourage student checking

by BILL COATES

Bankers tend to look at the student checking account in one of two ways: as a money-losing service provided out of charity or as an unnecessary burden.

Both points of view stem from the notion that student accounts normally carry low balances that cost the bank too much to service.

The charity approach is one taken by the Bank of America in California. BA, the largest bank in the country, is one of the few banks in the state that still offers special student checking accounts at reduced rates, says Andrew P.

Barlas, BA's marketing manager for the Los Angeles area. Says Andrew P. Barlas, BA's marketing manager for the Los Angeles area.

"Reduced" means that students pay $1.50 for every 15 checks and a monthly service charge of $5 on a balance under $100.

"We're big," Barlas says. "We can afford to absorb some losses. All the small banks have dropped out."

Despite the losses BA incurs in servicing student accounts, according to Barlas, the bank feels it has a social obligation to provide students with cheaper service.

But the bank also benefits by this arrangement. By introducing the student's account when he graduates and begins making substantially more money.

In contrast to BA, the Dartmouth National Bank in Hanover, N.H., offers no special account for the students of nearby Dartmouth College.

Students are subject to the same recently increased service charge paid by the rest of the bank's customers: a fee of $6 on a balance that averages less than $300 a month.

Dartmouth National, an small one-branch bank, cannot afford to subsidize students by offering them special accounts, says Douglas Ripert, the bank's vice president. He also says the bank has no incentive to do so. Most students leave the area upon graduation.

Judging by the examples of BA and Dartmouth National, large banks, by virtue of their enormous assets, can afford the student's better deal on a checking account than can smaller banks.

Some people, however, would disagree, including Neil Gendel, a San Francisco attorney and author of a 1973 book on how to "break the banks," published by San Francisco Consumer Action, a private, nonprofit organization. Gendel says large banks like Bank of America tend to be more inefficient than small banks. Large banks also usually find it easier to pass on the cost of their inefficiency to their customers than to eliminate its cause, he says.

Small banks are not only more efficient, Gendel says, they are more responsive to competition. Because of this, they are able and more willing to offer cheaper—or even free—checking services than large banks.

Students paid for taking electronics course

The electronic assembly and inspection training program at Harper trains workers for employment in the electronic assembly industry. Known as the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) Electronic Production Skills Program, the program consists of ten weeks of intensive training followed by two weeks of employment placement.

The tuition-free 12-week course runs eight hours a day, Monday thru Friday of each week. CETA pays each participant an allowance of $60 a week, no deductions per week for full attendance. The next session will begin Feb. 19 and run through May 1.

Subjects covered include: math, blueprint reading, wiring, soldering, factory assembly and inspection of electronic products, and use of electronic test equipment such as the volt-ohm meter and the oscilloscope. The fundamentals of first aid are taught in each 12-week course, as well as shop safety and proper use of handtools.

The program goes beyond assembly and inspection techniques in preparing the trainee for employment. How to present oneself to an employer, how to groom oneself, how to write a resume, how to write an effective application and maintain effective posture during a job interview, supplemented the basic training in electronics. To be eligible for the program a person must be a resident of Cook County, at least 18 years of age, unemployed seven working days or underemployed and economically disadvantaged.

Students petition for art teacher

by CINDY CARAVELLO

Some of Harper's art students showed their disapproval of the Board's recent decision to lay off Rusty Herring, one of their art teachers, by passing around a petition asking the Board to reverse Herring's contract upon its expiration date.

The petition signed by 262 students, stated that the Board used faculty lay offs as one of its last alternatives as the Board had said it would.

Judy Rebus, a concerned student in the art department, said that by letting Herring go, the students would be "losing a valuable faculty member in the art department."

The petition also states the students' concern about what will happen in the future to the art department's exceptional reputation if Herring is gone through this semester or over.

Herring, referred to by the students as "consumers" who expect something back from the school when they come to learn, said the quality of education is going to be lowered by laying off faculty members.

The students, she said, are the ones who are going to suffer in the long run.

Senators commend college

Dear Editor,

Some members of the Student Senate would like to comment on the condition of the parking lots. Students have been complaining about insufficient parking. We feel that there is good reason for these complaints. But, the facts are that the college does not have enough money for parking.

The parking lots are 80 per cent clear right now. However, the snow remaining is too heavy for the college's equipment. The college presently owns one snow blower which is in constant use in attempts to clear the snow and knock down huge piles.

The college budgets for $6,000 for plowing. They have spent $1,000 for plowing, salting and overruns.

We would like everyone to know that the college is doing everything possible that it can afford to do concerning the parking lots, sidewalks, and roads.

There have also been 20 to 25 accidents on campus. The accidents are due either to cars traveling too fast, or because of poor visibility at intersection due to piled snow.

The college is trying to handle the snow on campus, both at intersections and in the lots. The snow is not going to melt. It will snow more this winter. We hope that the college will continue to do its best to clear parking lots and sidewalks, and to ensure the safety of students, faculty, and staff.

Public safety defends acts

Dear Editor,

This is a response to an article written by Cindy Caravella in the Vanguard section of the Harbinger of Feb. 3.

In the article, Miss Caravella claimed that the Public Safety Department almost ruined her event at the Dabney Center concert. I would like to state that the Public Safety Officers who had contact with Miss Caravella and asked her to leave the building, were only doing their job. Miss Caravella did enter the building through the wrong doors which were supposed to be locked. All doors to the administration building are locked about two hours prior to concerts, in accordance with instructions from the Student Activities office.

The particular doors where Miss Caravella entered the building were locked, but the locking device was defective, allowing them to be opened from the outside.

The officers are assigned to concerts for security and crowd control and have orders from Student Activities, who sponsor the concerts, not to allow people into the concert area until the doors officially open at 7 p.m.

The officers were correct in asking her to go back outside until the doors opened. The probability of Miss Caravella being "injured or assaulted in some horrible way," as she stated could happen, is almost nonexistent while waiting in line with all the other people who had tickets to the concert. Nobody has ever reported being injured or assaulted at a Harper College concert.

Miss Caravella was not being treated like a common criminal. She simply was being asked to abide by our regulations concerning entry to a concert. There were no signs posted on the doors but Miss Caravella, as a Harper College student, does have the obligation to obey lawful directions from the Public Safety Officers. Her fears of having her teeth knocked out or being maced are ridiculous.

We have had no serious problems at concerts or other college events this year. Students and parents have acted in a proper manner and officers have only to take minimal enforcement action and have never used nightsticks or mace at a concert this year.

As it turned out, and as she stated in her article, Miss Caravella and her sister were allowed to remain inside the building by the officers.

I fail to see how her evening could have been ruined by requesting that she wait in an outside line with the other people who had tickets to the concert. She is incorrect in placing blame for almost ruining her evening on Public Safety.

Thank you,
Kevin King, Chief

Harbinger asks College compromise

In the process of eliminating $700,000 from the 1979-80 budget, college officials have alienated the Harper faculty. Members of the faculty have presented their complaints to their union in order to prevent the release of the 14 faculty members, and in doing so have caused unrest at the college.

The Harbinger feels the faculty, administration and board of trustees must work together during this period of financial crisis, for the good of the students and the Harper College community as a whole.

It is imperative that the college form close ties to promote a stable atmosphere within the college.

The faculty became irate when the board announced the dismissal of 14 teaching positions Jan. 25, before attempting the faculty felt, to make cuts in other areas of the college.

They have united in protest against the board's decision by looking into a lawsuit against the board and by filing grievance against the board for not rescinding the letters of termination which were sent to the faculty which were laid-off.

We believe Harper offers an excellent education for the students and community who attended the two-year college and would hate to see this jeopardized by an all-out war between faculty, administration and board of trustees.

One way to prevent this would be for the faculty, administration and board to work together using the Reduction in Force committee which was formed to examine and suggest ways to trim the budget. Somehow a compromise must be reached to this problem which is affecting every student, teacher and administrator at Harper.

We would hope all sides will make every effort to work together and cooperate in the interest of keeping the same high-quality education Harper has had for more than a decade.

Student awareness urged

For a long time students at Harper have been accused of being apathetic and uninformed of the goings on at the college. That's why students now, and not at any other point in their lives, should take it upon themselves to become informed.

Rapid changes are occurring at Harper at this time. So we urge students to become aware of what is happening and voice their opinions.

If you don't do it now, later might be too late.

Harbinger has editorial positions open See Debbie in A367

Dear Editor,

We would like to see the Harbinger's pages to publically thank the Rotary Club of Wheeling for their recent and generous donation to Harper's Political Science Club.

Their donation, added to the funds supplied by Student Activities and money raised by club members, will enable seven students to attend the United Nations Conference in April.

At the conference, these students, representing the United Arab Emirates, will be able to participate in General Assembly proceedings and committee actions, similar to an actual United Nations session. This will be a valuable experience, especially for those students planning to pursue future careers in political or international affairs.

Once again, we thank the Rotary Club for their contribution and support for our club's endeavors; the UN conference is sure to be one of the highlights of the school year!

Sincerely,

The Political Science Club

Who in the blazes is Alan Bergstrom?

by JOAN PETERSON

Even though Harper students voted sophomore Alan Bergstrom as Student Senate President, many of them don't know much about him or his job. Bergstrom said, "The Senate's main job is budgeting the activities fund." His main job as president is to head up student government. And, although he and the Senate are there to be of help to students, their hands are partially tied as they lack any truly valuable power.

Bergstrom, as well as student trustee, Pete Merishay and student senators are willing to talk to students in their office at almost any time. "That's one reason our office is right out there by the pool tables," Bergstrom said, "any time a student would like to come in, they can just walk right in."

A politics and business major, Bergstrom said he does not plan to go into politics but for now he enjoys being involved in student government very much. "I really like it because the job is really helping people and being involved with people and I enjoy that," he said.

Bergstrom said that just about the only problem the Senate encounters is building up their image in the eyes of their constituents, the students, he said. "They don't know much about it. They had some rumors going around last year that we were abusing money which is kind of hard for us to do since we are watched by the administration and the board."

One of the projects the Senate is working on now is a lake path for students. "It may take years as what we're trying to do now is get the ground work done," he commented.

Besides being a full-time student and a Student Senate President, Bergstrom does maintenance work for a building in Harrington and does a lot of work with the meteorite center at Harper. He is also a student pilot.

Bergstrom stressed that if a student had any problems at all with a teacher, the student could come to the Senate for help. He said he would like to see the grievance procedure against teachers made shorter and easier for students. Valenti is currently working on streamlining the procedure. Bergstrom claimed that the procedure as it is set up now is against students.

U.S. Commerce office moves to Harper

The U.S. Department of Commerce auxiliary office has been moved to Harper, announced Thomas de Seve, trade specialist in charge of the office. The office is located in C27.

Formerly located in Elk Grove Village, the auxiliary office provides international and domestic marketing information to the 1,300 firms located in the northwest suburban area. In addition, as a resident of the Harper campus, the office's extensive library of domestic and international trade publications will be available to students and community residents and de Seve will serve as a guest lecturer in college classes.

"This is the fastest growing industrial area in the United States," said de Seve. "Our state site office, the first and one of only two such offices in the United States, was established last year to serve this unique situation," he continued.

During 1977, Illinois' $1.2 billion export sales placed it as the second largest export state in the United States. However, de Seve reports that he spends most of his time informing companies about export possibilities. "Only 75 of the State's 1,300 manufacturers are exporting products, while nearly 95% of everything is exportable," said de Seve.

During the past year, the trade specialist has established the Northwest International Trade Club and co-sponsored with Harper College an export seminar series.

"The Small Business Market is the World."

While a member of the International Marketing Division of General Electric for thirteen years de Seve spent much of his time on marketing problems in Latin America. He joined the Commercial Exhibitions Program of the U.S. Department of Commerce in 1962 and spent six years directing that group's marketing operations in the Far East. He also handled regional marketing duties for West Germany and Eastern Europe. Prior to his move to the suburban auxiliary office, de Seve served for three years as Deputy Director, U.S. Department of Commerce District Office, Office of Field Operations in Chicago.

'Life in the food chain' rambles, rocks and rolls

Twink
LIFE IN THE FOODCHAIN
Epic JEM845

Well, anyone out there with a good sense of humor and like the new wave music should like this album from the start. Twink's pastime has got to be writing these lyrics and putting some serious music into it. Each song has a different flavor and funny twist.

"Life in the Foodchain" has that rambling rock 'n' roll saxophone with that classic lead guitar burr. The vocal constantly "Toss some while the chorus about life in the food chain. Foodchain is not about some bus Jeeves or Durankees in the sky either."

"Funky Western Civilization" has got that machine gun guitar section with that Al Hirt/Tyranosaurus trumpet breaking in and out. He also fits in to include a spoken word in French, who is supposed to be Jean de Arc: "An example of his created type."

"You can inhibit the baker and eat the hams."

"You can hack out of every dead except one."

"What does it all mean? Here are some ideas he gives you on the sleeve of the album about what to do in life in the food chain."

"Let your class (repeatedly) salute the past until you pass out."

"Cut the wires and slash the lives and burn the building down."

When we think of Queen the first sound that comes to mind is usually that of their choir like vocals. "Jazz" Queen's latest creation, holds no contradiction to that belief. Take away those vocals (though, and "Jazz" leaves you with very little.

The repetition of Brian May's guitar leads often creates a lull in the music, needless to say they were probably added in at the last.

Creatively speaking the album is very good. Few of the songs hold any similarity to any of the albums other than. However, the layout of the album is tricky as to badly arranged that no lasting atmosphere can be created.

The record has many possibilities for its use. This and along with a very interesting poster will most likely make "Jazz" one of the group's better sellers.

The Electric Light Orchestra won't be getting off that easy here in the clubs. The Federal government is charging the band with playing a music tape instead of the real thing during their Detroit gig last summer. Fans there must be a little upset after all they're the ones who forked over $17.50 a ticket to see the show.

Paul McCartney is safe but money also, only he is making it. McCartney has just signed a contract with Columbia (CBS) Records. This makes him the highest paid performer in the rock world.

Allyce Cooper's latest "From the Inside" is taking on a new face after the first 400,000 are pressed. Warner Brothers say the album costs to much to print.

There will be no change in the records stand, however. Atlantic records reports Emerson, Lake and Palmer are enjoying "extensive AOR/P.M. radio airplay" of their latest "Love Beach." One single has been released from the album, that is "All I Want is You" w/e "There is a Spotlight" from their second "Works" album. Some old artists with new releases coming up soon are, Supertramp (scheduled release date is Feb. 12), George Harrison, George Benson, Wiley Nelson and Fleetwood Mac (a summer release date has not yet been discussed). Others include, the Bee Gees, Frumpton, and Led Zepplins...

Wild and Crazy guy Betsy Martin has been kicked out of the S. Mart chain of stores. After receiving many calls from their customers about their's vulgar language, the chain of stores has decided to discontinue selling all of the comedian's albums. Although no release date has yet been discussed, all Martin Brother fans should be glad to know that the band is now working on a reunion album. Just great. Sonny Rollins is beginning work on his new album. Sonny has just completed a two week Japanese tour. The Blues Brothers are enjoying nationwide AOR/Album Oriented Rock and Top 40 airplay of their album Shout House Full of Blues. But conceding James Brown, "I can't the biggest part of it all is the costumes."

WEA records has announced that the list price of the new Red Stewart album will increase $1.00 bringing the cost up to a snare. $5.96 a copy. Billboard Magazine reports that Kahu Emulsion has won approval from the federal Communications Commission to begin testing its AM stereo system in New York. Motorola has been experimenting with AM stereo on a Nashville and a Cleveland station. Motorola is also considering the Chicago station WGN for possibilities.

Seekers search for identity

by JOAN PETERSON

Seekers is more than just a social club at Harper. According to Seekers Campus Pastor, Max Rouenquist, its main purpose is "seeking to know ourselves, and seeking to experience a meaningful, appropriate relationship to God and others through Jesus Christ."

Pastor Rouenquist said the club helps people understand the bible and that when we understand the bible we understand more about ourselves.

Seekers, an organization started over eight years ago, is interdenominational. Students, as well as their families, friends and other community members are welcome to join the different levels of the club. Seeker staff member, Kathy Reynolds said that a lot of students join the club because they are trying to fit in. They are trying to establish a personal relationship with God with the help of Seekers instead of a church.

Miss Reynolds said that although many students would like to stop by and talk with them for a while, many of them don't because they don't want to commit themselves to anything. However, one doesn't have to sign or promise anything when they stop by the booktable.

Talking with strangers has helped build-up confidence among the Seeker members. Secretary-treasurer Nancy Simon said, "You learn to deal with people."

If someone does decide to get involved in Seekers they may go to Growth Group meetings every Wednesday from 11 to 12:30 p.m. and Thursday from 12:15 to 1:15 p.m. in F224.

There are also weekly all-campus meetings Tuesday nights from 7:30 to 9:45 or 10 p.m. at 115, Evanston, Arlington Heights near 90, Prospect High School on Kensington.

Seekers also holds monthly parties and gym nights. Several weekend outings and retreats as well as camping trips and a week-long canoe trip are being planned.

Any students seeking to know themselves and others may stop by the Seeker booktable or call Pastor Rouenquist at 284-445 or Miss Reynolds at 329-4291.

Theatre auditions this week

Auditions for the Harper College Studio Theatre's production of That Scoundrel Scapin by Moliere will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday, 7 p.m., in A19. The auditions are open to all students, staff and faculty. Copies of the script are on reserve in the LRC.

The play is under the direction of speech and theatre instructor, Mary Jo Willis.

That Scoundrel Scapin was written and produced by Moliere in 1671. The play is one of the many written by the French playwright, whose plays have given the world a rich tapestry of comic characters. Some of his most popular works were farcical and used characters and situations first created in the commedia dell'arte, a popular type of theatre that flourished in France for over two hundred years.

Two fundamental ingredients of the commedia were improvisation and stock characters. Actors worked out a basic plot and then improvised dialogue and action. Each performer played the same character with its fixed qualities and costume. The commedia del'arte is based on the commedia characters and plot.

Two wealthy but stingy fathers live in the suburb of Naples. Their two sons do the unspeakable, they choose their brides without the permission of the fathers. The rest of the play concerns itself with the efforts of their servants, Sylvester and Legan, to win over the fathers. This is accomplished chiefly through the cunning and the trickery of Scapin, a thoroughly winning rogue.

Moliere's comedy will be performed in the TV Studio, Building 17. A special dinner theatre package will be available for the April 7 performance. Tickets will go on sale in the Student Activities Office in March for all performances.

For further information about the Auditions on February 12 and 13, contact Mary Jo Willis, A19, ext. 448. Students who want to work on crews are invited to attend one of the audition evenings or see Willis in A19.

Peer Counselors open new booth

by MARK FRASER

The new peer counseling center is the newest student service on the Harper campus. It is a centralized information and counseling center established through compromise between President James McGrath and counselor Bruce Fisher.

McGrath saw the need for a better information center. Fisher, director of the peer counseling program and that the peer counselors never had an office of their own before, making it difficult for students to locate them. The center was the perfect answer for both men.

This new student service welcomes those who find it uncomfortable talking to the professional Harper counselors. It provides assistance to students contemplating college transfer, and through the center can be found the location for any building or service on the Harper campus.

It has an equally ideal setting being the first thing seen by students entering through the front doors of A. It is bordered on one side by the bookstore and on the other side by the lounge area, which is the most popular student gathering place next to the cafeteria.

Preslman Kris Sandberg likes the idea of the new center. "It's a place where students new to the school can find someone to talk to," Sophomore Jim Patton agrees with Sandberg but adds that "more publicity is needed to inform more people of its existence."

All interested students are invited to drop by the center. It will be open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

DeLaurentiis produces a winner

by BRAD CASE

Movie mogul Mike DeLaurentiis, popularly known for producing such famous turkeys as "King Kong" and "Craze the Killer Whale", looks as if he's finally put his money behind a winner.

"The Great Train Robbery," based on the true story of the first major theft of gold from a moving train back in 1865, is the latest DeLaurentiis entry into the movie market, and believe it or not it's a damn good one.

The reason for the quality of this film, is that DeLaurentiis left the production of the movie in the hands of very capable hands, one of them being writer-director Michael Cristofer. "Westworld", "Coma" Cristofer is said to have researched the story for two years prior to the film's production, and it shows.

His attention paid to the smallest details, from an aside English put to a mid-Victorian mansion, are painstaking. This authenticity combined with the spectacular photography of the late George "Supersnail" Ungworth, to whom the film was ruthlessly dedicated, captures the mood and atmosphere lacking in many period pictures.

Be that as it may, the film is still not complete without its lackluster cast. Sean Connery heads it as the charismatic, criminal mastermind, Edward Pierce, who is responsible for the whole ordeal. As Pierce, Connery shows one again what a fine leading man he is, whether it's the role of a villain train robber, or as the irrepressible '60's, you always like to see him come out on top.

Starting along with Connery are Donald Sutherland, well cast as Azar, a cockney English pickpocket-locksmith, and the beautiful Leslie Anne Dwyer as "Upstairs, Downstairs" fame as his very enticing mistress. This combination creates an attractive criminal team, and you want to really want them to get away with it.

You can actually drive "The Great Train Robbery" into two parts, the first half concerning the intricate planning of the crime, and the second being the crime itself. I prefer the first half. The audience is taken back to 1865, combination locks and dynamite hadn't yet been invented, and the only way to crack a safe was with a key.

The process in which Connery, Dwyer and Sutherland track down the four separate keys needed to pull off the caper provides the film's most entertaining moments. Not to downplay the suspense of the actual robbery, or the daring stunts done by Connery, as he ducks low bridges while running atop a moving train. But if this film has any weakness, it's seemingly rushed, and disappointing ending, that just isn't up to par with the rest of the movie.

All in all though, "The Great Train Robbery" is top-notch entertainment, whose gleases greatly outnumber its misuses. It's a picture book view, of a historical event, in a time zone, and it's release just couldn't have come at a better time.

Harper students and staff admitted free. Those who attend the morning masterclass will be admitted free to the evening recital. For additional information, students may call ext. 977.

Students learn to survive

By Jeff Gordon

Perhaps students should get a certificate of survival along with their diploma.

The causes of attrition are far more complicated than mere financial and grade problems. How a student is accepted and fits in on campus is the major factor in retaining students. Studies show that students need to develop a feeling of worth on campus to stay.

The attrition problem is becoming more acute because colleges must stabilize enrollment somewhere in the face of a shrinking student population base.

Why do students leave? It is difficult to find the real reasons as many students leave.

Most colleges have very little about why their students withdraw. Even when records are available, the reasons for withdrawal are usually summarized as financial, academic, personal and unknown, with the last two being marked most often.

The lack of a significant, meaningful relationship with an adult who cares and "the lack of involvement in a worthwhile activity with a group" result in damaging isolation, says Greg Fawcett of the University of Missouri Office of Student Research.

An "overload of academic work with high school" and "unimpaired teaching" results in academic boredom, says Fawcett.

Incompatibility with the campus environment, especially those people on campus' alienate students, Fawcett wrote. The "we don't really know why we are here" feelings combined the feelings that the institution doesn't care why also alienate students, Fawcett said in his report.

"A key element in a student's decision to leave or stay revolves around the requirements and academic services of the institution and the individual's feeling of worth among faculty and students," said Fawcett.

"For a student to remain in college, you have to have one meaningful professor who cares; second, you have got to be a part of a meaningful group and that very thing could be, and often is, a part-time job," Fawcett wrote.

A Syracuse University report concluded that "The amount of informal interaction with faculty outside the classroom and the demand or challenge level found in student's nonacademic lives" were key factors in a student's decision to leave or stay.

Students who stayed in college, the Syracuse study showed, found their nonacademic lives more challenging than those who dropped out. "This finding strongly suggests that students, when compared with leavers, were significantly more involved in the social system (perceived as key to academic freedom) and the deterioration of campus."

Fawcett points out that retaining one student for four years means the same as recruiting four students over those four years, because of attrition.

And recruiting is made much easier if students are satisfied with the product.

"One of the best recruiting tools is the present student body. A dissatisfied student who leaves will never return to the home community," says Fawcett.

First six weeks are key.

"The first six weeks on campus are the most critical in determining whether a student is going to stay or leave. Students arrive at the institution; they are new; they are lonely; they are used by this thing called university. Consequently, it's hard for them to get hooked on, to become part of, to belong to, to identify with the university family," according to the Office of Student Research report.

Fawcett's report continues: "It is critically important to achieve a good student-university match-up early. Specifically for the student it means the right institution, the right program, the right community level, the right financial aid package, the right housing arrangement, and the right advisor."

The studies clearly show that faculty must improve advising and student contact in order to cut the attrition rate.

Why retention is becoming more important. Simply stated, in order to keep the University operating in its present form through the next 20 years student enrollment must not fall too low.

Low enrollment means higher budgets, less academic diversity, less research, the possible loss of the library system (perceived as key to academic freedom) and the deterioration of campus.

Fawcett points out that retaining one student for four years means the same as recruiting four students over those four years, because of attrition.

And recruiting is made much easier if students are satisfied with the product.

"One of the best recruiting tools is the present student body. A dissatisfied student who leaves will never return to the home community," says Fawcett. "It is critically important to achieve a good student-university match-up early. Specifically for the student it means the right institution, the right program, the right community level, the right financial aid package, the right housing arrangement, and the right advisor."

Wrestlers ready for nationals

by PAUL PREISSING

The Harper wrestling team now enters the real part of the season as they prepare for regional in hopes of a trip to the national tournament.

The Hawks ended the season on a good note defeating tough Trilon and Muskegon teams to post a final dual meet record of 11-1.

The Hawks have two returning national qualifiers in Mike Red and Joe Rizzo. Red will drop to 145 lbs. for the regionals and Rizzo will wrestle at 126 lbs.

Coach Norm Lovelace is very confident that Rizzo and Red will qualify again. "Mike has really turned the corner and should do well in the nationals," said Lovelace.

Lovelace also feels Rizzo should do well at regionals and nationals. "Joe works as hard in practice as anyone I've coached," commented Lovelace.

Other Hawks who are strong contenders for national qualifying berths, 118 pounder Paul Preissing who compiled a 27-2 record for the season and took two tournament crowns is a good bet to qualify, 134 pounder Tom Smith, and possibly 177 pounder Jeff Buchart.

Smith is a returning letterman and should have a very strong showing at 134, and Buchart who has turned it on the latter part of the season could also qualify.

The grueling trip to nationals starts with the regionals at Washburne College on Friday, Feb. 16. The top three places at each weight advance for the prestigious National Tournament held at Worthington, Minnesota March 1-3.

Hockey plagued by injuries

by GEORGE CWIK

The Harper hockey team being plagued with injuries and a low turnout of players has completed a third of their season.

Starting the season with only twelve players (including two coaches) head coach Pat Huffer feels that the quality of the players he has is much better than if he had more players of lesser ability.

The Hawks leading point man sophomore Bob Wodarczyk, suffered a minor shoulder separation and has missed the last three weeks of the season. Veteran defenseman Gary Kerwin and freshman Jim Latel have both been sidelined with injuries and will probably be out for the season.

Latel was a newcomer to the team joining Jan. 23 and in his short time he scored five goals in three games, both Kerwin and Latel will be sorely missed.

On the Hawk offense picking up the scoring are freshman winger Mike Mahan who has five goals and eight assists and sophomore center Bob Maffi is right behind him with four goals and seven assists.

The Hawks defense while playing short-handed has been one of Harper's strong points only allowing four goals against them. Sophomore John Gustafson and first six minutes.

Harper tied the game 5-5 on a scoring stall by Sinclair, momentum seemed to shift to the Hawks as Dorsey gave the Hawks their first lead of the night by coming a jumper from the baseline.

Berry then bagged a corner shot and Martinski hit a shot from the middle of the key in heavy traffic to give Harper their largest short-lived lead of the night 65-57 with 30:14 left in the game.

In less than five minutes, the Wolves recaptured the lead 71-63 as Wolf Eric Ellis connected on three straight shots to put Joliet back on top.

Harper made one last surge on baskets by Dorsey, Sinclair and Martinski capped in it off with a three point play to narrow Joliet's lead to one, 79-79 and that concluded the "now you see-ten part of the show."

Joliet opened up their lead by controlling the boards as they converted rebounds into points to give themselves a comfortable lead.

The Wolves then went into a stall with four minutes left and to get the ball back the Hawks had to foul, but they fouled the wrong man as Ellis hit seven out of eight free throws to put the game away.

The team is now preparing for the tough Region IV regionals in hopes of advancing to nationals and possibly the nationals.

Chris Olson have proven to be great assets to the Hawk defense.

Sharing out time are freshmen linemen Dave Lell and Bill Madden, the more these two goalies play the better they get and this has helped off on the team as the Hawks are beginning to improve greatly.

Harper completed their first tough schedule as five of their first ten games were against four-year schools.

Coach Huffer feels that the better the competition is that you start out against, the better your team will play.

The Hawks will soon begin Regional activities against the tough teams in Region IV.

RIF proposes alternative cuts

by JIM CIRIGLIANO

The RIF "Reduction In Force" committee completed a report on Jan. 16 suggesting 22 cutbacks in the Harper budget as an alternative to laying off full-time faculty members.

The committee, chaired by Thurey Flaten, was established by President James McGrath and given 15 days to complete the report. According to McGrath, a review of the suggestion is to begin this week.

There has, however, been some controversy among Harper faculty and students over exactly what cutbacks the committee proposed. Following are all 22 suggestions as they were drafted in the RIF committee.

1. Drop that Adult Basic Education which is not completely self-supporting.
2. Drop that English as a second language which is not completely self-supporting.
3. Drop all educational fund support of tutors.
4. Examine mode of instruction for cost effectiveness. No, large delivery costs closer in line with cost of delivering other similar courses.
 - a) Basic Skill course—Special services division
 - b) Adjustment of student-faculty load in laboratory courses and/or sections to better require total numbers of students served.
 - c) Drop all teacher assistants and counselor associates unless proven they are essential to the maintenance of the program.
5. Close Willis Park Center.
6. Sell several units.
7. Main referendum.
8. Increase tuition.
9. As initiation of full-time faculty occurs, do not fill position with new full-time faculty unless a program with healthy enrollment would be seriously impaired.
10. These programs that are substantially above the 40 percent course hours covered by full-time faculty as part of their regular load should work vigorously toward the desired faculty ratio of 40 percent full-time to 60 percent part-time.
11. Eliminate A&E or add it to the Liberal Arts Division.
12. In a period of severe financial constraint, it is important that no division be expanded at the expense of the rest of the college. It is claimed that this year's budget was cut by $200,000 for net spending. If building this expense, therefore, we recommend a gradual opening and staffing of M Building to lessen the financial burden. Priority for the phase-in should be given to credit offerings. The financial impact of adding facilities and staffing should not be such as to cause faculty in other areas to be laid off unless clearly indicated by rapidly declining enrollments or extremely high unit costs.
13. The college should organize an aggressive recruitment program for students. Faculty should be actively involved.

14. Studies should be made to assure proper assessment and placement as one way of improving retention.
15. Streamline procedures for Harper Grant Approval and improve incentive for writing grants.
16. Reduce costs by evaluating insured faculty by peers. Students survey every three years.
17. Streamline number and cost of publication.
18. Remove non-teaching portions of salaries for food service staff from educational.
19. Whenever possible, retrain faculty in overstaffed departments for reassignment within the institution.
20. A study should be made of ways to increase natural attrition, such as early retirement incentives, teacher exchange, industrial internships, leaves with no pay or partial pay.
21. Reduce the current $60,000 isolated study to intercollegiate athletics from the educational fund.
22. Only as a last step to avoid layoffs in areas where full teaching loads are no longer available due to declining enrollments, the faculty involved could be offered a staff schedule such as, 15 hours during the fall, 12 hours during the spring and six hours during the summer on a contract which calls for 30 hours. This would be in effect for one year and would additionally provide the faculty member with time to retrain or rebuild the program.

Women run into hard times with creditors

The credit cards were stacked against Judith Hart two years ago. A newly-divorced University of Illinois student she discovered that credit companies regarded her as a risk for seven years of handling household accounts in alimony her credit.

The couple's credit was in her ex-husband's name only. Master Charge told her she had not been employed as a graduate teaching assistant "long enough," and Bank Americard said she had "insufficient income."

Exhaustion of how low would be high enough, or how much income would be sufficient does not forth coming, Hart said.

As an individual I was being treated," Hart says. Her banking and checking accounts were unblemished, and most and board credit less than one fourth of a month's income. "They probably feel the reasons they gave were legitimate, but credit is a personal thing. Their evaluation of a credit possibility should be just as personal."

Instead, I was a non-entity. My experience at handling credit was ignored. It was not a fair appraisal because they didn't look closely enough at me."

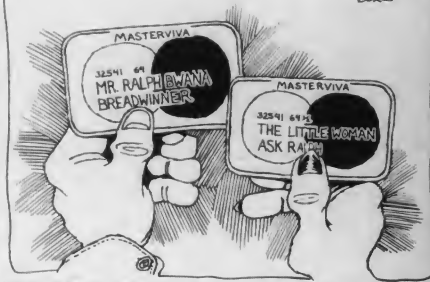

Hart was turned down for every one of the seven cards she applied for. Bank Americard alone denied her for three times. Finally, at the bank where Hart kept her accounts, the credit officer struck a deal with her.

He told her that if I placed $1,000 in that bank for a year, I could have a Master Charge card with a $200 credit extension. The minimum credit extension for a Master Charge at that time was $300, but he said I could re-pay in a year," Hart recalls.

Hart says she questioned the feasibility of placing a time deposit as collateral for a credit card, but she took what seemed like the only available course, unsure because she left a male in her position could never have needed to go through the extra procedure. Jean Noonan, legal counsel for the Federal Trade Commission in Washington, D.C., says she knows of no federal law that forbids the practice. In fact, she says that placing a time deposit "might not be such a bad way to start getting credit. The worst thing that can happen in a person applying for credit is not having a previous credit file. Frequently, women who are married or recently divorced do not."

The Equal Credit Opportunity Act, passed in October 1975, was of little help to Hart. The clause enabling a wife, at her request, to let a joint credit account in both her and her husband's names didn't become effective until 1977.

Along with expanding a wife's credit file, ECOA requires credit companies to not write women down with refusals. But the vagueness of these refusals was one of the hardest sources of frustration to Hart.

Noonan acknowledges this loophole, which she says the FTC is trying to close. "Insufficient credit references—that's one of the most common reasons 'insufficient' is used as a 'no' answer," Not the right kind. "Not enough credit cards." We're upset when they get that vague.

But sometimes we forget that until the ECOA was passed four years ago, no law existed us to know why we were turned down on a credit application. The ECOA doesn't say you have to be given credit, you know. But you have to be told why you weren't."

Just who qualifies as "professional faculty"

Part-time faculty, are they no good?

Part-time vs. full-time faculty.

This has been the situation at Harper ever since the faculty lay-offs began on Jan. 25. The full-time faculty, feeling that they are superior and irreplaceable, have made the part-time faculty out to be inferior beings without the brains to teach. The amount of classes or hours that are taught by faculty members in no way reflects the quality of the teachers.

The reasons that some faculty members are full-time and some are part-time are widely varied. In some cases teachers may be of good quality but simply don't have the time to devote to being a full-time teacher. In this case it is wise for the person to be a good part-time teacher, instead of a poor full-time teacher who is never around enough to help students.

Another reason that good quality teachers are part-time is tenure. There may be some full-time faculty who should be replaced but they can't be because of their tenure. Many teachers who are better qualified are kept at a part-time position because some full-time faculty member has been at Harper for 3 years.

Still another reason for part-time faculty is the budget. Because of Harper's large deficit they can't afford to hire many full-time teachers in the same department. Because part-time teachers cost much less than the cost of full-time faculty so they are more economical.

When the college starts replacing in most cases will not go down. The part-time faculty may benefit greatly from the arrangement. When the college realizes how much they need the part-timers maybe they will treat them differently.

As it is now, part-time faculty is not treated with the same respect, and courtesy that is given the full-time teachers. Full-time faculty members know at the end of the spring semester what they will be teaching in the fall, for example. They have the entire summer to collect books, write course guidelines, and make lesson plans for the next semester.

Part-time faculty are sometimes notified as late as two weeks before the semester about an open class. If they want to teach they can accept, if they decline the job is offered again and again until someone accepts. If they do accept, they have to research their course, for in some instances they may not know a whole lot about the course. Then they have to accumulate books, guidelines, and lesson plans in an extremely short period of time.

Because part-time teachers are needed more now, than before maybe they will finally get the appreciation they deserve.

Dear Editor,
On my way to class Feb. 7, I was greeted by a leaflet distributed by one of Harper's "professional faculty." The leaflet asked the following question: "Faculty or part-time teachers? Education or chaos?" Seemingly, the implication was that only the full-time (i.e. "professional") faculty was capable of providing Harper students with a quality education and that "part-time" teachers were not responsible enough or competent enough to provide such an education.

If the above question was meant to have other implications, its authors need not read further. In the other hand, if my reading of the leaflet was correct, I already suggest that they keep reading for a lesson in semantics and logic. Hopefully, they will learn something. Yes, professional faculty can learn too!

To begin with, the terms "faculty" (i.e. Full-time faculty), "professional faculty," and "education" are not, contrary to the leaflet, necessarily synonymous. "Full-time faculty" refers to a certain standing within the institution, a standing based on the number of courses taught, the salary earned for teaching those courses, and such things as group insurance, sick days, etc. It does not necessarily refer to one's ability or competence to teach what he or she is teaching, nor does it imply that one is a professional.

When I think of a professional faculty, I think of people who are in command of the latest developments in their disciplines, people who read and understand professional journals, people who publish books and/or articles, and most important of all, people who teach their courses in a conscientious, competent and demanding manner without bastardizing the content of what they teach. Those who view "full-time faculty" and "professional faculty" as synonymous, as referring to the same class of people, and that class exclusively by the quality of the faculty of education, thus can be demonstrated simply by talking to students. (Suggestion: Try it. You may be surprised.)

There is a sense, perhaps, in which "class" can be used to refer to part-time faculty. The manner in which many of them are hired (particularly in the Division of Liberal Arts) is chaotic to say the least. It is standard practice to receive a call the Friday before the Monday of the week classes start, the substance of the call being the chance to teach an 8 a.m. class on Monday.

Given the two-day notice, one could hardly expect their classes to be anything but chaotic, especially if they have no previous teaching experience and/or if they have not had the luxury of preparing the course over the summer. In addition, there is the problem of ordering books, orders which are typically placed on the Friday in question. This can be avoided by using previously ordered "i.e. departmental" books, but this often creates more problems than it solves.

Fortunately, the bookstore staff at Harper is a tremendous help to part-timers in this regard. The unfortunate thing is that the student is paying $11 per credit hour regardless of the status of their instructor. This problem could be eliminated by making advance arrangements with prospective part-timers. I gained my teaching experience this way a few years ago and concede that things were somewhat chaotic. However, this chaos was not attributable to the fact that I was a part-time teacher but rather that I taught a course on two-days notice. (Note: It would have been interesting to see what a member of the "professional faculty" would have done under the same circumstances.)

Hopefully, the semantical and logical difficulties have been cleared up. Now I would like to turn my attention to my major concern: EDUCATION.

Having lived in the northwest suburbs for a number of years before coming to Harper, I had heard it referred to as "Harper High and Palatine University" (the tone of the latter being pejorative in nature). One of my goals was to find out why the college was described in this manner, and it took some time to fully comprehend the situation. My conclusion is that it may be faded about in this fashion because the faculty (both full and part-timers) are not demanding enough of themselves or their students.

The idea of a community college, as originally presented by a man named William Kassey Harper, was to provide a college level education at a reasonable cost. This meant that the course content at a two-year institution should mirror that of a four-year institution. Unfortunately, this does not seem to be the case. There is a defeatist attitude among many people at Harper, an attitude that implies that we are teaching the dead who are somewhat less than college undergraduates.

Such defeatism can (and does) lead to such things as bastardization or watering down of courses in certain quarters, and this cannot be tolerated. As educators at an institution of higher learning, we should be demanding a great deal of our students and ourselves, a task which means reading challenging and rigorous texts, discussing things in a serious and intelligent manner, evaluating different ideas and demanding excellence in thinking, reading and writing. Anything less is failure, and failure is a term which can apply to instructors and students alike.

Women get no credit

After getting her Master Charge, Hart recapitulated and received every credit card she had been previously denied.

Smaller companies sometimes give adequate approval as a quick way of accommodating customers who have already been checked by major cards like the Master Charge.

Nonetary explains.

In addition to getting her credit, the 19-month experience has helped Hart professionally. Now an associate lecturer at California Polytechnic State University at San Luis Obispo, she teaches a five-week course on "Women and Credit."

"I want women to be aware of what may be the credit trap," she says. "Experience that they could ever encounter," she says.

Humor Market-close knit organization

Who is producing the kind of off-the-wall, subversive, gross, sexy and liberal-minded humor that makes college students laugh?

A relatively small interconnected group of writers and producers who seem to have the market cornered on this humor.

The group included Chevy Chase, John Belushi, Doug Kenney, Michael O'Donoghue, Chris Miller, P.J. O'Rourke, Bob Tschler, Bruce McCall, Anne Beattie, Brian McConnochie, Brian Doyle-Murray, Bill Murray, Dan Ackroyd, Gilda Radner, Harold Ramis, Ed Blumstein, Christopher Cerf, John Landis, Ed Soble, Richard Belzer, Sean Kelly, Christopher Guest, Eric Idle.

The connection between the various people and the most popular humor projects is staggering.

Belushi worked with the comedy group "Second City" out of Chicago, worked on National Lampoon's "Lemmings" stage show, the "National Lampoon Radio Hour," the National Lampoon "Gold Turkey" album, is on NBC's "Saturday Night Live" and appeared on NBC's "Hillbillies" and was the star of the special and was the star of

"Animal House."

He teams with fellow "Saturday Night Live" star Ackroyd in the "Blues Brothers" musical act. Chase contributed to the radio show, was in "Lemmings," worked on "Gold Turkey" and starred in "Saturday Night Live" and "Foul Play."

O'Donoghue was an editor at Lampoon, coordinated the first series of the Lampoon radio hour, and then wrote and performed on "Saturday Night Live."

His former girlfriend Beattie was also an editor of Lampoon, on the radio show, and a writer on "Saturday Night Live." She also cowrote the humor book "Timers," and along with O'Donoghue contributed to the magazine.

Doug Kenney was an editor at Lampoon, part creator of the very popular Lampoon high school yearbook parody, and co-writer of "Animal House."

Radner is a product of "Second City" and contributed to the "National Lampoon Radio Hour" and the "Gold Turkey" album, was on the "Hillbillies" show and is a star of "Saturday Night Live." Blumstein was a contributor to Lampoon, on its radio show, on the "Gold Turkey" album, and is a stand-up comic.

Brian Doyle-Murray and his younger brother Bill Murray contributed to the Lampoon radio show and the "Gold Turkey" album. Brian now writes for "Saturday Night Live" and Bill stars on the show. Bill also starred in an NBC parody special on television, which included McConnochie as one of its writers.

McConnochie was also an editor of "National Lampoon," a contributor for Lampoon's radio show and its albums and writes for "Saturday Night Live."

Tschler produced the National Lampoon Radio Hour, "Gold Turkey" and produced the first album of Belushi's and Ackroyd's "Blues Brothers" act.

Cerf was an editor at Lampoon, developer of its infamous controversial (satirical) contributor to the Lampoon radio show and helped write the successful New York Times parody during the New York newspaper strike.

P.J. O'Rourke is editor of the Lampoon and has worked on its two most successful parodies—the high school yearbook and its semi-weekly, the "Dacron Sunday newspaper parody."

Miller was an editor at Lampoon, a popular college weekender, a short story author with contributions to "Old magazine," and co-writer of "Animal House." Ed Soble contributes to National Lampoon and contributed to its albums and radio show.

Bruce McCall was an editor at National Lampoon, a writer at "Saturday Night Live," and a contributor to Lampoon albums and its radio show.

Sean Kelly was an editor at Cetus Dignus News Service

Grants

The Displaced Homemakers Program has been awarded two $1,000 grants from the Sex Equity Project at Richard Community College in Decatur. Peggy Simonson and Kathy Farnon received one grant for their proposal "The Mating Link: An Instrument for Matching Skills and Abilities With Attainable Employment Positions." A proposal by Del Morris, "A Model for Facilitating Coping Skills for Seeking and Keeping Employment," was the basis of the second grant.

News correspondent Charles Kuralt has worked for CBS for many years.

Charles Kuralt to speak at Harper

Charles Kuralt, author, reporter, television and radio personality, will lecture on "America, Behind the Headlines," at Harper tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the College Center Lounge of bldg. A. CBS News Correspondent Kuralt is probably best known for his televised "On the Road" series. Since 1967 when he began the series, he has won numerous awards, including an Emmy and two Peabody Awards. Kuralt's trademark is his talent for capturing on film the warmth and richness of American life, featuring people with an unusual way of life and an interesting story to tell. Public admission is free. Harper students are admitted free with their activity card.

SPiRiT will be appearing in concert Friday at 8 p.m. in the College Center Lounge. Tickets for this concert should be purchased in advance, as seating is limited. Public admission is $4. Harper students/staff pay $2. Through the near 10-year history of SPiRiT, the group has continually strived for new modes of music. Ram California, the sometimes bitter always creative guitarist has been the lifeblood of the group. Through it all, his guitar and recently his voice, has been the dominating factor. Randy California had been a accomplished acoustic guitarist all his life but it was not until 1968, when he met and became friends with Jimi Hendrix, that he converted to the world of electric. With the release of the sixth SPiRiT album, "Pasture Games: A Magical Kahuana Dream!", it is evident the album from beginning to end is California's conception. Joining forces with California is Ed Cassidy, SPiRiT's drummer since its inception. Cassidy has had a long career in the music scene; he has played with such notables as Gerry McAlligan, The Phishmen, Munk, Cannock, Adair and Tai Mahal. For further information, students may call the Student Activities Office, Ext. 240.

SPORTS

by JOE KUBER

The Harper men's basketball team finished up what one could call a home stand, as they had three games in a row at home. But the friendly visitors of St. Val's gym were not all that friendly as the Hawks dropped two out of three.

On Tuesday night the Hawks left right at home as they dumped Marquette Valley 80-73. Sharnie scoring honors were Bud Warring, who had six of the last games of the season and Jeff Martinski both hitting for 19 point apiece.

On Wednesday night the Hawks faced a tough Triton team, an after being down by as much as 12 at one time the Hawks battled back behind Brad Sincelar's 32 point to lose in overtime 87-82.

The turning point came when Sincelar, who had been a one man show in the time fouled out with three minutes left in the overtime period and the Hawks lost their main cog in their scoring machine. Triton went out to a 25-19 lead in the first half, but then the Hawks got everything together as Warring hit for two buckets, one of them a dunk. Then Sincelar not to be outdone by his teammates stuffed one and hit a short jumper, then fed Brian Warring for and easy lay-up on the fast break.

But Triton kept putting points on the board and Harper was down 43-33 and the end of the first half.

Being down 33-43 with 18 minutes left to play, the Hawks exploded for 34 unanswered points to take the lead 54-43. After Warring leading the charge as he hit on three long range jumpers.

From there the teams fought back and forth until the Hawks downfall came on Sincelar's 32nd foul.

Thursday night was a complete turnaround for the Hawks as they jumped to an early 18 point lead 38-19 in the first half against visiting Illinois Valley Apaches. But three games in a row, and especially after the loss to Triton, look to tell on the Hawks as they just ran out of gas losing 70-69.

"Our first half play was excellent, but we couldn't sustain it through the second half. This had been one of our problems throughout the season, playing good basketball for the full forty minutes," said Harper head coach Bruce Hechbold.

Foul trouble again hurt the Hawks, as Sincelar picked up three quick fouls and had to take a seat with 15:30 left in the first half. The loss to Sincelar's rebounding coupled with a Harper's all of a sudden cold shooting, permitted Illinois Valley to catch up.

Illinois Valley tied the game with thirty seconds left 44-43 and took the lead for a few seconds until fouler at the buzzer to salvage a halftime tie 44-43.

The Apaches built on their leading on the scoring of Glen Madge who put in 27 of his game high 32 points for Illinois Valley.

One of the bright spots was the play of guard Brian Warring who earned a start after his excellent season against Triton. Brian didn't score many points but accounted for many just the same, as time after time he hit teammates with pin-point passes underneath for to give Hawks easy lay-ups inside.

Women grab 1st N4C win

by ROBY KOWTAS

The Chicago Hawks is not the only women's basketball team grabbing headlines. In fact, a national crowd of 30 screaming fans the Hawks captured their first long overdue N4C conference win over Triton 75-68.

Before the win the Hawks stood 4-1 in conference and 3-11 overall. Last season the Hawks finished the conference year with a 2-4 record.

Harper jumped out to an early lead behind the outstanding first half play of Jen Schmitt who turned the nets for 19 points. Following Jen was Val Wandering, who chipped in ten points of her own and the Hawks had a commanding 43-34 lead at the end of the first half.

The Hawks took advantage of numerous Triton fouls and turned them into points as they played a major factor on the outcome of the game. This also put Triton more quiet and this added to Harper's point total.

The second half was more or less a repeat of the first with the Hawks controlling the game defensively and offensively Harper just built on their lead and put Triton away 75-68.

Coach Tom Teaschner was pleased with the way his team performed against Triton, "the talent is there," he said, "but with practice limited to two times a week, it's hard to build that talent up." Teaschner feels with the completion of building N4C the women's team will not face the difficulties of scheduling practices as they did this year.

Coach Teaschner is looking to improve his team's record next year. He will have a major task ahead of him, as he is losing his three top sophomores, Jeni Schmitt, Gina Neri, and Mary Metzger. But Val Wandering, a top freshman will be returning.

The women wrap up their season this week, with their last home game against 29 in the nation Thornton. The game will be the Wednesday at 7:30 at Sacred Heart High School in Rolling Meadows.

Intramurals

Intramural basketball will be offered at the Court House in Schaumburg on Feb. 23rd, 25th, and 28th.

Three courts will be open from 1 to 3 p.m. and four courts from 3-4 p.m. on the above dates. If there are enough people we will continue and/or enlarge this program.

Court fees will be $1.00 per hour, which includes referees if needed. Court time is first come, first serve. When you arrive at the Court House ask for Mike McClane, or David Cavason and pay your fee at that time.

If there are any questions call Mike McClane at Harper, Ext. 400 or 407 after 1 p.m.

Harper center Brad Sincelar remains calm and collected as he goes up short jumper, despite the relatively useless efforts of Illinois Valley's Chris Humbley. The Hawks ended their three game home stand on a sour note losing to the Apaches 70-69.

Kuralt takes road to Harper

by CINDY CARAVELLO

For 15 years now he's been on the road, and he still can't find a decent place to eat.

No, he's not a picky eater, he's Charles Kuralt, a CBS correspondent. Kuralt and his tiny crew of three have traveled all the back roads of the U.S. searching for fascinating places and people to film for Kuralt's famous show, "On the Road."

In his appearance last Tuesday night at Harper, Kuralt said, "I haven't had an assignment for the last 12 years." He selects many of his ideas for shows from the hundreds of letters he receives each week from enthusiastic viewers who think they just might have a terrific story for him.

The stories that Kuralt said he enjoys doing most are "the ones about people opposed to the ones about events. People with some kind of dream are those that seem to be the kind of stories that work out best."

Kuralt explained that the basic idea behind "On the Road" is the secret to the success of the program.

"The idea was to go out and do some stories about ordinary people. People who are not politicians or movie stars."

Kuralt began "On the Road" in the fall of 1967 intending to do a three-month tour, but the enormous amount of success he received kept him traveling and getting to know the people.

"I've been on the road ever since," he said.

Through his travels, Kuralt has made a point to meet as many different kinds of people as he possibly can, "from the wheat farmer in Kentucky to the Chinese American in California. He wants to listen to the people."

Kuralt is currently working on a feature for "On the Road" that will take a close look at the student architecture in the U.S. Chicago's contribution will be the Leaning Tower of Pisa building in front of the YMCA in Niles.

At the present time his story has come to a screeching halt because of the persistent snow which has kept him from filming a giant paper mache elephant in New Jersey that serves as a hotel for anyone who would like to spend a night in its trunk.

Kuralt is also writing for a Sunday morning news show that airs from 8 until 9:30. Kuralt admits that Sunday morning isn't exactly prime time for television, but he emphasized the program's ability to "try things that can't be done on a weekend."

Kuralt referred to the relatively new show as "some kind of alternative to cartoons."

"I think it's one of the best new broadcasts on the air," said Kuralt. The show deals with relatively long, thoughtful pieces on feature stories.

Drinking age increase brings protest in East

by JAMES PAULIN

DENVER, Mass.—The Massachusetts legislature was besieged last week by three thousands of students from the University of Massachusetts-Amherst, thousands of letters from campus, and even an abusive "phone-in" demonstration as it pondered bills that would raise the legal drinking age in the state from 18 to 21, and later, to the age of 21.

Over 100 bills calling for some kind of increase in the drinking age have been filed since conservative Democratic Governor Edward J. King was elected last November on a platform that included a pledge to do something about teen-ager drinking. Observers here speculated that King pressed for legislation early in the session because he was in need of a victory after two of his cabinet appointees ran into political trouble.

But King probably didn't foresee the reaction students would have at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst, students squatted into a campus tavern rally, organized by a student group, where they heard student government co-president Herb Tyson warn that a raise in the drinking age would force students out of the bars, into their cars, and onto the highway. Student government contributed $800 to a lobbying effort, and helped collect another $200 from area bars and on-campus liquor stores. On Lincoln's birthday, over a thousand letters from students were delivered to state legislators, followed by the three thousands of students, who packed the gallery for the debate. Ken Moskonis, director of the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy, even asked students back on campus to bombard the statehouse with calls as the one p.m.

session started, thus tying up the capital's phone lines. The phone-in, however, never quite came off.

The students' lobbying efforts didn't work well, either. The House passed a measure raising the legal age for buying alcohol for off-premise consumption to 21 over the next two years. Massachusetts had lowered the drinking age to 18 in 1975.

The broadly-based student participation in the lobbying effort, though, was probably the largest demonstration this year at UMass-Amherst, normally thought of as an activist campus.

Yet neither the UMass "upheaval" nor the Massachusetts legislature's tinkering with alcohol age limits are unique; as several states, generally concerned about drinking in high school, have reconsidered laws and policies that affect drinking on college campuses.

Last fall, for example, Michigan voters approved a measure raising the drinking age to 21. State's brewers of Detroit pulled its ads out of the Michigan State News when the paper opposed the referendum. Less dramatically, state schools have been quietly reducing campus alcohol policies in the measure's wake. Grand Valley State College, for one, banned all alcoholic beverages on campus.

The Wisconsin legislature opened last month and rumors that legislation would be introduced to raise the drinking age there. Governor Lee Dreyfus, himself a former college cheerleader, said he probably wouldn't veto the measure if it ever made it to his desk, but that he wouldn't introduce the measure, either.

At Towson State in Maryland, the administration recently prohibited fraternities and sororities from selling liquor. The only alcohol available on campus is now the beer sold by the campus food service, which charges the same.

Just as many other schools, though, have made recent commitments to alcohol, which, studies show, is by far students' favorite recreational drug. A Chronicle of Higher Education report last year claimed that 95 percent of all college students drink alcohol. A more recent study, by Ruth C. Ems of the University of Indiana, put the figure at 80 percent.

Slippery Rock College in Pennsylvania began handing out permits allowing campus organizations to sell liquor in December. Last spring, Western Illinois University allowed beer kegs back into dorm parties rooms after announcing its earlier prohibition had been "a failure." Similarly, the University of South Carolina lifted its ban on beer sales at the campus conference where when an administration committee discovered that students were merely carrying beer onto campus from more distant stores, at their price. The discovery was treated as a consumer issue. An amendment last year changed a 1965 California law prohibiting package liquor sales within a mile of California state schools.

Board hears second site proposals

The Extension Off-Site Campus Committee has presented the board of trustees with an interim report recommending the relocation of the proposed second site of Harper for 7 years and the establishment of an ad hoc committee to explore other possibilities for the use of the land. A special meeting was held last Thursday night by the board to hear proposals for the future of the land which is located at Palatine and Schnebeck Roads in Arlington Heights. (photo by Ed Martener)

RIF proposal needs work

The RIF (reduction in force) committee has come up with many suggestions for the Board of Trustees in regards to cutting the budget.

The suggestions for the most part are helpful but there were several important points that were omitted by the committee.

The first, regards tenure teachers. The committee made no recommendations as to what should be done if the laying-off or firing of teachers with tenure is necessary. For the most part, teachers with tenure can only be dismissed if incompetence or a discrepancy in morals can be proved.

However, at Harper the case has already come up when teachers who have been here for about seven or ten years had to be fired because they just weren't needed. Sometimes things like this can't be avoided or can they?

The RIF committee didn't offer any solutions to this problem, so the firing was the best thing that the Board thought could be done. The RIF committee may complain, but because they offered no solutions they can't criticize too much.

The second omission has to do with programs that benefit only a few students, and are costly to the college, because of that. The committee suggested dropping Adult Basic Education programs and English as a second language programs that weren't self-supporting, but they failed to mention some of the other programs that are declining in enrollment. There are some classes that are more costly to Harper than they are worth. Because there is a small demand and turnout for these classes, they don't pay for themselves and they cost more to operate.

A few classes were cut because they weren't self-supporting. The cuts may have been necessary or were they?

The RIF committee didn't offer any solution for this problem, so the Board decided that the only alternative was to cut the classes.

There are a few other things the committee has neglected to look at. Just ignoring these problems won't make them go away. Since these problems have already occurred at Harper, chances are that they will happen again. The committee should come up with some preventive measure or some solution to these problems, since they are the most relevant now.

Letters to the editor

Drop Willow Park campus

Dear Editor,

As a mature student (age 44) enrolled part-time (4 hrs.), I would like to present my views in regard to the recent political events at Harper College.

Money is and will always be a problem to any administration. I do not want my taxes to be increased and will vote down any referendum because I feel there is an unrealistic view point prevailing on the school board.

We do not need a Willow Park campus. This rental costs more money than similar facilities at neighboring high schools for evening classes. With decreasing enrollment the day classes could be shifted to the main campus. The funds from this saving could be used to retain the present faculty.

There is no need to fire any full time faculty. Many full time faculty would like to teach an evening class to better expose themselves to a variety of ages and viewpoints in the community.

The empty land on Palatine Road could be sold or rented out

Many universities in the Chicago area have kept their revenues up due to rental properties. The revenue from that could be used to expand parking lots and improve facilities on main campus.

I often wonder why there are only two buildings with three floor classrooms. Surely Harper College students are able to walk up three flights of stairs. The handicapped could be accommodated by the elevator.

Josephine Kelly

Full timers more dedicated

Dear Editor,

In relation to your editorial on part time teachers I think your paper should stop wasting its time and space on such ridiculous editorials.

I am currently enrolled in the journalism program here at Harper and if there is one thing that is stressed in my course above all others and that is to be fair in your article on part timers you were neither fair to full timers nor correct. Part time teachers on the average may do a fine job at

Harper, but how easily you forget those who have dedicated their careers to this college and for what little pay they have done so. In all fairness the Harbinger should have done an article on the teacher firings or at you inaccurately put it say-offs. I feel a full time teacher is more likely to be dedicated to this college than is a part timer who has another job.

It has been my experience with part timers that they aren't around as much as full timers for help with students and they rarely cover as much in a semester. The administration has done a terrible injustice in the firing of 14 full time faculty members, two of which were tenure faculty. I wish you would have spent some space explaining that although the administration claims they were forced to fire faculty, their process of deciding who was to be fired is unworkable.

Drinking age increases

The most eloquent argument for on-campus alcohol sales also came from California, where last spring the San Jose University academic senate argued that "alcoholic beverages enhance the logical sophistication of the university by stimulating scholarly to use Latin words such as "bac."

The prohibitionists, on the other hand, frequently cite highway fatality rates and "getting liquor out of high schools" as the rationale for restricting consumption among those under 21. In Massachusetts, prohibitionists said that the drinking age to 18 was not enough because many high school seniors are 19. They also made use of a state report showing a sharp increase in motor fatalities among 18-to-21-year-olds since the legal age was lowered to 18 in 1973.

But State Senator John Oliver, a former UNHSA chemistry professor who opposed raising the age limit, disputed the findings. He said blood tests at the State Police laboratory show there is instead a 25 percent increase in fatalities for the first two years after the age limit was lowered, but that the highway death rate had since returned to what it was before 1973. In Wisconsin, the fatality rate has also remained the same since that state lowered its hard liquor drinking age to 18 in 1972.

Oliver added that Massachusetts currently has the sixth-lowest highway fatality rate in the nation, and the five states with lower rates all allow 18-year-olds to drink legally. He also cited a Catholic University study which purportedly showed high school seniors in states with a 19-year-old limit drank more than those in states with a lower limit.

RIF proposal needs work

The RIF (reduction in force) committee has come up with many suggestions for the Board of Trustees in regards to cutting the budget.

The suggestions for the most part are helpful but there were several important points that were omitted by the committee.

The first, regards tenure teachers. The committee made no recommendations as to what should be done if the laying-off or firing of teachers with tenure is necessary. For the most part, teachers with tenure can only be dismissed if incompetence or a discrepancy in morals can be proved.

However, at Harper the case has already come up when teachers who have been here for about seven or ten years had to be fired because they just weren't needed. Sometimes things like this can't be avoided or can they?

The RIF committee didn't offer any solutions to this problem, so the Board decided that the only alternative was to cut the classes.

The second omission has to do with programs that benefit only a few students, and are costly to the college, because of that. The committee suggested dropping Adult Basic Education programs and English as a second language programs that weren't self-supporting, but they failed to mention some of the other programs that are declining in enrollment. There are some classes that are more costly to Harper than they are worth. Because there is a small demand and turnout for these classes, they don't pay for themselves and they cost more to operate.

A few classes were cut because they weren't self-supporting. The cuts may have been necessary or were they?

The RIF committee didn't offer any solution for this problem, so the Board decided that the only alternative was to cut the classes.

There are a few other things the committee has neglected to look at. Just ignoring these problems won't make them go away. Since these problems have already occurred at Harper, chances are that they will happen again. The committee should come up with some preventive measure or some solution to these problems, since they are the most relevant now.

Letters to the editor

Drop Willow Park campus

Dear Editor,

As a mature student (age 44) enrolled part-time (8 hrs.) I would like to present my views in regard to the recent political events at Harper College.

Many in and will always be a problem in my administration. I do not want my taxes to be increased and will vote down any referendum because I feel there is an unrealistic view point prevailing on the school board.

We do not need a Willow Park campus. This rental costs more money than similar facilities at neighboring high schools for evening classes. With decreasing enrollments the day classes could be shifted to the main campus. The funds from this saving could be used to retain the present faculty.

There is no need to fire any full time faculty. Many full time faculty would like to teach an evening class to better expose themselves to a variety of ages and viewpoints in the community.

The empty land on Palatine Road could be sold or rented out

Many universities in the Chicago area have kept their revenues up due to rental properties. The revenue from this could be used to expand parking lots and improve facilities on main campus.

I often wonder why there are only two buildings with third floor classrooms. Surely Harper College students are able to walk up three flights of stairs. The handicapped could be accommodated by the elevator.

Josephine Kelly

Full timers more dedicated

Dear Editor,

In regards to your editorial on part time teachers I think your paper should stop wasting its time and space on such ridiculous editorials.

I am currently enrolled in the journalism program here at Harper and if there is one thing that is stressed in my courses above all others and that is to be fair. In your article on part timers you were neither fair to full timers nor correct. Part time teachers on the average may do a fine job at

Harper, but how easily you forget those who have dedicated their careers to this college and for what little pay they have done so. In all fairness the Harbinger should have done an article on the teacher fitness or as you inaccurately put it lay-offs. I feel a full time teacher is more likely to be dedicated to this college than in a part timer who has another job.

It has been my experience with part timers that they aren't around as much as full timers for help with students and they rarely cover as much as a semester. The administration has done a terrible injustice in the firing of 14 full time faculty members, two of which were tenure faculty. I wish you would have spent some space explaining that although the administration claims they were forced to fire faculty, their present of deciding who was to be fired is unreasonable.

Kuralt takes road to Harper

by CHAD CARAVELLO

For 15 years now he's been on the road, and he still can't find a decent place to eat.

No, he's not a picky eater, he's Charles Kuralt, a CBS correspondent. Kuralt and his tiny crew of three have traveled all the back roads of the U.S. searching for fascinating faces and places to film for Kuralt's famous show, "On the Road."

At his appearance last Tuesday night at Harper, Kuralt said, "I haven't had an argument for the last 12 years." He selects many of his ideas for shows from the hundreds of letters he receives each week from enthusiastic viewers who think they just might have a terrific story for him.

The stories that Kuralt said he enjoys doing most are "the ones about people opposed to the ones about events. People with some kind of dream are those that seem to be the kind of stories that work out best."

Kuralt explained that the basic idea behind "On the Road" is the secret to the success of the program.

"The idea was to go out and do some stories about ordinary people. People who are not politicians or movie stars."

Kuralt began "On the Road" in the fall of 1967 intending to do a three-month tour, but the enormous amount of success he received kept him traveling and "not letting me know the people."

"I've been on the road ever since," he said.

Through his travels, Kuralt has made a point to meet as many different kinds of people as he possibly can, "from the school farmer in Kentucky to the Chinese American in California."

Kuralt is currently working on a feature for "On the Road" that will take a close look at the student architecture in the U.S. Chicago's contribution will be the Leaning Tower of Pisa building in front of the YMCA in Niles.

At the present time his story has come to a somewhat halt because of the persistent snow which has kept him from filming a giant paper mache elephant in New Jersey that serves as a hotel for anyone who would like to spend a night in its trunk.

Kuralt is also writing for a Sunday morning news show that airs from 8 until 9:30. Kuralt admits that Sunday morning isn't exactly prime time for television, but he emphasized the program's ability to "try things that can fail" and not have to worry since many television viewers are still in bed at that hour on a weekend.

Kuralt referred to the relatively new show as "some kind of alternative to cartoons."

"I think it's one of the best new broadcasts on the air," said Kuralt. The show deals with relatively low thoughtful pieces on feature stories.

Drinking age increase brings protest in East

by JAMES PAULIN

Boston, Mass.—The Massachusetts legislature was besieged last week by three hundreds of students from the University of Massachusetts-Amherst. Thousands of letters from campus, and even an abortive "phone-in" demonstration as it pounded bills that would raise the legal drinking age in the state from 18 to 19, and later, to the age of 21.

Over fifty bills calling for some kind of increase in the drinking age have been filed since conservative Democratic Governor Edward J. King was elected last November on a platform that included a pledge to do something about teenage drinking.

King pressed for legislation early in the session because he was in need of a victory after two of his cabinet appointees ran into political trouble.

But King probably didn't foresee the reaction students would have. At the University of Massachusetts-Amherst, students queued into a campus tavern rally, organized by a student group, where they heard student government co-president Herb Pison warn that a raise in the drinking age would strip students out of the bars, into their cars, and onto the highway. Student government contributed $800 to a lobbying effort, and helped collect another $200 from area bars. Local liquor stores (in Lincoln's birthday) over a thousand letters from students were delivered to state legislators, followed by the three hundreds of students, who packed the gallery for the debate. Ken Mousakakis, director of the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy, even asked students back on campus to stand behind the statement with calls as the vote pin-session started, thus tying up the legislature's phone lines. The phone-in, however, never came off.

The students' lobbying efforts didn't work well, either. The House passed a measure raising the legal age for buying alcohol for off-campus use from 18 to 19, but the Senate provision consumption to 21 over the next two years. Massachusetts had lowered the drinking age to 18 in 1971.

The broadly-based student participation in the lobbying effort, though, was probably the biggest demonstration this year at UMass-Amherst, normally thought of as an activist campus.

Yet neither the UMass "upheaval" nor the Massachusetts legislature's tinkering with alcohol age limits are unique, as several states, generally concerned about drinking in high school, have reconsidered laws and policies that affect drinking on college campuses.

Last fall, for example, Michigan voters approved a measure raising the drinking age to 21. Steve's Brewery of Detroit pulled its ads out of the Michigan State News when the paper opposed the referendum. Last dramatically, state schools have been quietly re-evaluating campus alcohol policies in the measure's wake. Grand Valley State College, for one, banned all alcoholic beverages on campus.

The Wisconsin legislature opened last month and rumors that legislation would be introduced to raise the drinking age there. Governor Lee Dreyfus himself, a former college bartender, said he probably wouldn't vote the measure if it ever made it to his desk, but that he wouldn't introduce the measure, either.

At Towson State in Maryland, the administration recently prohibited fraternities and sororities from selling liquor. The only alcohol available on campus is now the beer sold by the campus food service, which charges $1 a glass.

Just as many other schools, though, have made recent concessions to alcohol, which studies show, is by far students' favorite recreational drug. A Chronicle of Higher Education report last year claimed that 16 percent of all college students drink alcohol. A more recent study, by Ruth C. Fagan of the University of Indiana, put the figure at 30 percent.

Sleepy Rock College in Pennsylvania began handing out permits allowing campus organizations to sell liquor in December. Last spring, Western Illinois University allowed beer backs into dorm party rooms after announcing its earlier prohibition had been "a failure." Similarly, the University of South Carolina lifted its ban on beer sales at the campus convenience store when an administration committee discovered that students were merely carrying beer into campus from more distant stores, at higher prices. The discovery was treated as a consumer issue. An amendment last year changed a 1969 California law prohibiting package liquor sales within a mile of California state schools.

Board hears second site proposals

The Extension Off-Site Campus Committee has presented the board of trustees with an interim report recommending the retention of the proposed second site at Harper for 7 years and the establishment of an ad hoc committee to explore other possibilities for the use of the land. A special meeting was held last Thursday night by the board to hear proposals for the future of the land which is located at Palatine and Schenck Roads in Arlington Heights.

Carter's guidelines hard for colleges

by JEFF GORDON

When President Jimmy Carter first announced his seven percent wage-price guidelines, many public colleges and universities across the country thought they could live with it.

In fact, many colleges and universities felt they could beat the inflation-fighting guidelines on three counts.

First, most of the non-academic staff at colleges and universities are poorly paid. Under Carter's guidelines, persons earning under $1.20 an hour are able to gain more than a seven percent increase.

And, as labor studies have shown, higher education institutions generally pay less than the private business sector.

Secondly, the good college faculty market is extremely competitive. Many universities felt they were exempted from the salary increase guidelines under Carter's special clause for highly ket areas.

Thirdly, the colleges and universities claimed to be in an area annually impacted by inflation. Many colleges felt faculty-staff salary increases were justified because of that.

In reality, Carter is less sympathetic to the academic sector than originally thought. Colleges and universities, most of which have already formed their 1979-80 budgets, have been scrambling to make adjustments.

For those institutions hoping to improve their standing in faculty salaries in order to attract better faculty, the wage guidelines are particularly damaging.

In those cases, faculty will actually lose spending power in the market rather than improve, which is what the improvement-seeking colleges want.

How can Carter enforce the guidelines? Well, he really can't.

But since public colleges and universities beg for the bulk of their money from state legislatures, the same strains will be felt.

Because of the Proposition 13 scare, in most states legislators can't wait for a good excuse to limit higher education spending, or any other spending for that matter.

It is unlikely that many state legislatures will be willing to dish out state funds for salary increases above and beyond Carter's limits.

What alternatives do institutions have? They can reallocate money from their internal budget away from certain programs and put it into a faculty improvement fund. But since research, capital improvement, physical plant maintenance and program improvement funds are stretched at most every institution, reallocations are generally very unpopular.

Clearly, the have come out better than the have-nots in a period of financial stringency. It is not a good time to be playing catch-up. (Campus Digest News Service)

Charles Kuralt at Harper

He emphasized the need for education to excel in excellence instead of always trying to excel in a mediocre, so many should do.

Kuralt's first experience working with the media started when he was attending the University of North Carolina in Charlotte. As editor for the Daily Tar Heel, Kuralt learned the basics of media, since he was a history major and consequently took no courses in Journalism.

Kuralt was destined to work with people and the media. He explained that when he was six years old, he said:

"He began writing stories about ordinary people when he worked as a columnist for his hometown paper in Charlotte, North Carolina. The column was appreciative, by nature, 'People'."

"I enjoyed writing that column every day," Kuralt said.

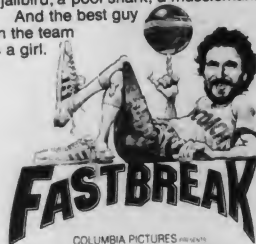

Searching out the people that no one else has taken the time or interest to write about, has made Charles Kuralt the success he is today.

Even though Kuralt can't seem to die up any decent restaurants as he travels about, he never fails to die up a delectable story hidden somewhere, where no one else would ever dream of looking.

Photos brighten dull afternoon

Flipping through an old photo album can be kind of nostalgic, delightful, and an enlightening way to spend a dull afternoon at home.

Instead of reminiscing all by yourself, why not call the whole family together and make it a community event?

The equipment you will need is four or five dusty stacks of recorded faces and places, two large bottles of cola and one large glass with everything in it.

Before you begin, you must ask everyone to please follow two small rules:

(1) Don't be malicious when making comments about other family members in the pictures, no matter how ridiculous they may look.

(2) Don't drip pizza sauce on the albums.

Let's turn to page one: The first thing you will notice is that the pictures are in no order whatever.

The first picture shows Johnny screaming due to severe diaper rash. Isn't he cute?

As soon as you hit the section filled with rows and rows of birthday party pictures, somebody is sure to become bored.

Generally Speaking

by CINDY CARAVELLO

Who can hear to look at himself at the tender age of two showing chocolate birthday cake up his nose and into his hairline?

Even though the ground rules were clearly stated before you began this magical journey into the past, somebody always manages to say, "Gee, were you ever a slob?"

Page three and four are crisscrossed with group poses taken on the front lawn, back lawn, and at second tree camping sites. Only one thing is a consistent theme:

always a wear guy making obnoxious faces while everyone else is dead serious.

"You kids never did grow up," a parent will say.

"On wow Mon, that dress was so ugly! How could you ever wear it?"

As you can plainly see, this is an excellent way to vent your hostilities towards your closest relations.

Looking through those photos can give the rest of the family an in-depth look at what their parents were really like.

"No junior, we didn't have acne curves like you kids do today. We just grinned and beamed it."

If anyone notices that Dad had quite a belly even as a sweating single, someone may care to set the younger generation straight.

"That was daddy's beer belly, honey. The reason why you kids don't suffer from that affliction is because kids are now into drugs. You don't have to worry about an expanded waistline, just hepatitis and drug overdoses."

Looking at old faded pictures that bore you half to death may not seem to be a thrilling way to spend an entire afternoon, but it's an excellent excuse not to do all those things you know you really should be doing. Who knows, maybe you could start your own equivalent to Florida.

"Force 10" a sequel?

by BRAD CASE

If you liked "The Guns of Navarone," and expect the newly released sequel "Force Ten From Navarone" to be as good, forget it! The film isn't even in the same league as it's academy award winning predecessor. With the exception of some excellent battle scenes, "Force Ten" lacks in many areas, while "Guns" was practically flawless.

Movie Review

Not to say this film has no merit, it supplies enough action and adventure to satisfy any war movie fan, and it's colorful locations alone are worth a viewing. Shockingly directed and a poor screenplay are the main detractors in what could have been a quality production. With these two strikes against it, the rest really can't do much with it's characters, and with the exception of Edward Fox, they come out looking pretty limp.

The late great Robert Shaw stars as Fox's counterpart, and just doesn't appear to have his heart in it. "Force Ten" was Shaw's next to last film before his death, and the energy and vitality he brought to such roles as the shark hunter in "Jaws," King Henry VIII in "A Man For All Seasons," and the greedy millionaire in "The Sting" is absent. Just even a below par Robert Shaw is better than most anyone in the business, and his mere presence instills some class into the film.

All in all "Force Ten From Navarone" isn't bothered by predictable plot, woe-den characters and dialogue recycled from countless other war movies. If you are just into sitting back and accepting the movie for what it is, then there's a good chance you'll enjoy this film.

ARIES (March 21 to April 20): Your mind is sharp and you can solve problems more easily now. Finances are secured and short-term opportunities are better left to later. Don't betray confidence; value a relationship and guard your reputation.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Social life is ascended and your personality is bright. Accept invitations and enjoy yourself. A sickly problem that is bothering you can be resolved by listening to the advice and view of a close friend.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20): Your job is ascended now and it is not time to force issues. Stay with routine, meet deadlines and be patient. Face yourself so that you complete each project before beginning another—don't scatter your energies.

CANCER (June 21 to July 21): Take a long look at your talents and start using those that have been lying dormant. Don't dwell on the past with regrets. Concentrate on the now. Get involved in community affairs—be cooperative.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 23): Look at a situation clearly, wipe away illusion, and you can find the answer. Try to put your personal opinions aside and look at things more realistically. Best to stay somewhat on the background and let others lead.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 23): Let your creativity operate and dare to begin more unusual projects. Adopt new methods if the routine way is not working properly. (Observe others' methods, watch your competitors and learn from them.)

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23): Children's needs and affairs are highlighted. Get involved in their activities and give them their support. At work it is the time to let others have the spotlight. Be cooperative but let associates take the lead.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Meet your obligations squarely—pay bills and don't shirk your responsibility. Any family problems can be resolved with patience and understanding. Push aside self-pitying attitudes and resolve to "get the job done."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Good time to talk and enjoy them. Re-evaluate your goals and make up your mind to begin that program of self-improvement.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18): You could not feel pressured and wonder if you're appreciated. Get more rest and take time to relax or your judgement could be faulty. Take care of routine matters promptly and give time to a loved one who needs your support.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20): A feeling of closeness and understanding among children and family members brings you much joy now. Enjoy one another! Your social life is active, but be sure you don't let work matters slide—meet deadlines. (Campus Digest News Service)

Secret life of Harper trustee Bone revealed

by JOAN PETERSON

If anybody were to write a book entitled "How to Travel Around the World by Plane, on Someone Else's Money," Harper college Trustee Jan Bone could.

Mrs. Bone, also a part-time Harper student, does a lot of free lance writing for various magazines, but concentrates on writing for the "National Enquirer."

She said that much of her work is done by phone and that her phone bill for the last two months was $100. However, it usually averages from $300 to $400 a month, and the Enquirer picks up the tab.

Since every interview must be on tape, Mrs. Bone goes through about 15 cassette tapes a week. She also keeps a large supply of typewritten paper and carbon paper on hand in case she should get snowed in and not be able to go out and buy more.

Mrs. Bone has written about many subjects. "You name it, I'll write it," she said. She has written on just about anything from Wendys Hamburgers and the Mormon Church to children taking aspirin and do-it-yourself type of writing is medical.

She gets a lot of her story ideas from information she gets in the mail. She writes to various public relations departments of various colleges, universities, organizations, etc. and asked to be put on their mailing list. And, now the mail, and the story ideas, flood into her mailbox every day. "You never know what you're going to find," she said.

Mrs. Bone's job as a free-lance writer is almost a full-time job. She said, "The joy of freelancing is that you can take a month off with no slack."

Besides free-lance writing, Mrs. Bone has worked on a film test book with a film teacher from Rolling Meadows high school. She also wrote the controversial book, "The Thompson Indictment." Mrs. Bone said she spent a lot of time and research on the book and didn't make a whole lot of money from it.

She said the Enquirer pays quite well, anywhere from $200 for a Celebrity Look-Alike story to $400 for a Heroic Police Officer story.

"The money and the market are out there for free-lance writers," Mrs. Bone said. "You don't make money off of books, you make it off of articles."

OPENLINE

Liturgy

Liturgy will be celebrated this Wednesday at noon in DOD. The celebrant will be Reverend Richard and Sister Mary Ann. All Faculty, Staff and Students are welcome to join in the Mass sponsored by Catholic Campus Ministry.

Awards won

Harper College students Susan Popko and David Teichman won first place and third place awards respectively in a cooking contest co-sponsored by the Chef de Cuisine Association and York County Company.

Popko, of Northbrook, received $60 for a "No Bake Chocolate Mint Cheesecake" recipe. A "Cherry Cherry Chess Cake" by Teichman, of Prospect Heights, a $25 award. The winners, enrolled in Harper's one year Cooking Certificate Program, were selected from 38 college student entries.

Award winner Popko was also a member of the Harper team that took second place in a fall harvest culinary contest sponsored by Heileb and Company last fall.

Casino

The Harper Program Board needs students to work the gambling tables at the upcoming "Casino Night," March 23. Interested students may contact Bob Gross at ext. 247 as soon as possible before March 8.

Students are also needed to entertain at Casino Night. Students who can dance, sing, act, play an instrument, or stand on their head are urged to stop by the Student Activities office and fill out an information sheet.

Interview

Harper College art instructor Yehi Riaz Abrams will be interviewed on the Channel 5 television program "On Cue" on Saturday, at 6 p.m.

The interview will highlight Abrams and Harper student Anita Craig discussing the techniques that Abrams employs in her classes and in the Learning Exchange, an Evanson agency that matches people interested in exchanging talents. Abrams has exchanged her skills and art works for custom-made jeans and carpentry work.

Registration for two of Abrams' eight-week classes at Harper, "Pen and Ink Drawing" and "Painting," is now in progress. The Willow Park classes will begin March 12 and 17 respectively. For additional information or to register by telephone, call ext. 109, 415 or 301.

Ways to As

"Ways to As" is now available to students to increase their chances for success at Harper. The two options available are as follows:

- 1) Memory Training meets Tuesday at 1 p.m. in F118 and at 7 p.m. in F106.
- 2) Taking Objective Tests meets Wednesday at 1 p.m. in F119 and at 7 p.m. in F106.
- 3) Reducing Test Anxiety meets Thursday at 1:30 p.m. in F106 and at 7 p.m. in F106.
- 4) Taking Essay Tests meets March 5 at 1 p.m. in F106 and at 7 p.m. in A242 and 5.

Option two is one credit hour of PSY110-04, second night weeks. The class starts March 15 and meets from 1:30 to 2:45 p.m.

Hawaii

Harper is sponsoring a spring vacation trip to Hawaii from April 10-26. Prices are from $449 to $499.

During this eight-day, seven-night trip, participant's lodging will be at The Breakers, a hotel just one block from Waikiki Beach. Air transportation is via United Airlines, departing O'Hare at 2:58 p.m. on Thursday, April 12, and returning at 6:50 a.m. on Friday, April 19.

Brochures and further information are available in the Student Activities Office.

Scholarships

The Elk Grove Nurses Club is offering a $300 scholarship for students interested in the Nursing Profession and living within the Elk Grove boundaries.

Applications are available in the Financial Aid Office, A34. Deadline for applications is March 15, 1979.

Northwest Community Hospital Auxiliary is offering a $1,000 scholarship to a person interested in pursuing a health related career. Such programs of study may include dietetics, inhalation therapy, medical record library science, medical social work, medical technology, nursing, occupational or physical therapy, and X-ray technology.

The qualifications necessary for consideration for the scholarship are:

1. A genuine financial need.
2. Personal qualifications considered essential for success in a health related career.
3. Receipt of intent to pursue a health related career.

Upon proof of acceptance by an accredited or recognized school, $500 will be deposited with the proper authority to be applied toward tuition, text, board and room, or books. Upon successful completion of the first semester or term, another $500 will be applied to the student's account.

Applications are available in the Financial Aid Office at Harper, Room A34.

Deadline for applications is April 6.

Classes

Classes to challenge your mind, physical dexterity, and creative abilities are being offered during the second eight week session at Harper.

Key punching, business writing, tennis and photography are among the 240 classes to be held from March 12 through May 11. Registration is now in progress Monday through Thursday from 8:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. and on Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Admissions Office of Building A. Classes will be held during the day and evening hours at St. Viator and Hersey High Schools in Arlington Heights, at Barrington High School, at the Palatine and Schaumburg Libraries and at the Willow Park Center in Wheeling, as well as at the main campus.

For additional information students may call the Admissions Office at 397-3006, ext. 360.

Tour

Irish castles, English pubs, Welsh poets. Harper students and community adults are invited to join Harper College in the British Isles for two weeks, May 24 to June 9. Details will be provided at tonight's tour meeting at 8:30 p.m. in A34A. Attendance is encouraged, as a deposit on the program is due now.

Harper's fourth summer humanities tour of Europe will visit numerous sites in Ireland, England, and Wales. Most expenses are included in the $99 fee: all transportation, hotel accommodations, two meals daily, sightseeing, theatre and evening entertainment, insurance, and gratuities. Participants pay for one extra meal a day and for tuition if they choose to earn credit in Humanities II.

An added attraction of the program is the opportunity to stay in Europe and travel on one's own after the tour ends. Participants may stay as long as 48 additional days and return on their original ticket.

Anyone interested but unable to attend tonight's meeting should see Martha Simmonsen or Pat Smith-Pierce in F301, or call ext. 384.

Skate-a-thon coming soon

The Circle-K Club is having a roller skate-a-thon for the benefit of Cerebral Palsy on March 30 from 6 to 10 p.m. at the Fivestride Roll-Arena in Hoffman Estates, (on the corner of Route 1 and Higgins Rd.).

The Fivestride Roll-Arena is the world's largest skating center and is in the Guinness World Book of Records.

The skate-a-thon will work in the following way: Each skater will buy a sponsor sheet at the rate of $1 and try to get people to sponsor them a certain amount of money per hour that they skate. Various prizes will be awarded to some of the skaters. There will be an estimated 100 to 200 skaters at the Fivestride and an estimated three to five thousand dollars is expected to be raised.

Sponsor sheets can be picked up in the Student Activities Office or at the Fivestride Roll-Arena.

Comedy troupe here March 7

The Redification Company will perform at Harper March 7 at noon in the lounge, 404-A.

The Redification Company was born in early 1976 as a salon in Chicago. Its members came from varied backgrounds, but all had one thing in common: a dedicated interest in the art of improvisational comedy. The Company does have a backlog of polished scenes, but for the most part their live shows are instant and spontaneous.

The audience, through its suggestion, writes the "script" along with the performers. Every show is different, and every audience is part of the creative process. The spontaneity and interplay between audience and performer, that make The Redification Company unique.

This program is sponsored by the Program Board.

Six wrestlers go to nationals

Mike Reif, Paul Preisling, and Steve Metel are half of the Hawk contingent going to Worthington, Minnesota for the national tournament. Others going are Joe Rizza, Jeff Richart, and Tom Smith. Reif and Rizza are not pictured as they are returning for their second year in a row.

by PAUL PREISLING

The Harper wrestling team qualified six wrestlers for the nationals on their way to a third place finish in the Region IV tourney. The Hawks propelled three wrestlers into the finals and came away with one championship crown.

The Hawks' lone champ was 118 lb. Paul Preisling who scored three straight opponents on his way to being named the tourney's Most Valuable Wrestler.

Preisling also captured the NAC conference championship a week before that.

Joe Rizza, 128 lbs. is going to maintain the second year as a row by the way of his second place finish in the tourney. Rizza assured himself a trip to the nationals with a hard fought 5-4 win in the semifinals. Rizza lost the championship bout to the same opponent who defeated him in the conference meet, where Rizza also placed second.

Tom Smith earned a trip by the way of a third place finish. Smith lost a tough 6-4 decision in the semi-finals but came back to maul his opponents in the wrestlingback to earn a trip to Minnesota. Smith is a two year letterman, who had a strong showing in the conference tournament.

Harper's fourth finalist was Mike Reif. Reif the NAC conference champ, had to settle for second in the Region IV tourney. Reif, a returning national qualifier though, had a way through a very strong weight class to grab his second trip to nationals.

Jeff Richart (17) also qualified for nationals via wrestlingback.

Richart lost early but came back and rebounded his loss by beating the man who had beat him earlier to earn 3rd place.

Steve Metel the Hawks' heavy weight put on an impressive show to take third. Metel had the misfortune of running into some very tough foes the last few weeks. Metel lost his second round match and then proceeded to walk through the wrestlingback to earn his trip to nationals.

The Hawks got strong performances from the show down. Greg Mall 158 lb. fell short of a qualifying berth, but his fourth place finish helped the Hawks to their third place showing.

Louis Joseph grabbed fifth place in the Region IV tourney. Joseph was another Hawk who was conference champ, but fell very to a bad first round match. Joseph then returned back to come away with a fifth place finish.

Harper also got strong support from Lindsey McWhorter 126 lbs. McWhorter registered a second period pin in the wrestlingback to give the Hawks some very valuable points. McWhorter's two losses were close decisions in a very tough weight class.

Coch Norm Lovelace felt his wrestlers did a good job, but expected a possible second place finish rather than third. Lovelace commented, "This was a complete team effort and I was extremely happy with the job the men did."

Now the Hawks prepare for the crucial national tournament Worthington, Minnesota, on March 1-4.

Malcolm X dumps Hawks

by JOE RIZZA

Earlier in the season Malcolm X College canceled a regular season game vs. the Hawks. It's too bad they didn't cancel this since as they traversed Harper 80-70 last Thursday night at Malcolm X.

"It was no contest," said coach Roger Berthold. "We've never been beaten as bad as tonight." As he saw his team finished the season with a 12-7 record.

To get to the finale of the sectional tournament the Hawks slipped past Truman with Craig Hawkins adding two free throws with 35 seconds left to play on Wednesday night.

But, Thursday night was a different story as Malcolm X jumped to an early lead and was never really threatened.

Malcolm X reacted in the half better. They worked the fast break well, and we were not getting back on defense," said Berthold.

Free throws play a major part in any game and this hurt the Hawks as they only went to the line seven times compared to Malcolm's 33 times.

The Hawks trailed at halftime 46-33 and in the second half started to gain some momentum but missed some easy inside shots and never gained any ground.

"Another factor was their shot selection was much better as they controlled the offensive boards."

continued Berthold. As Malcolm X trailed 61 rebounds.

Percentages were Malcolm X didn't have that big of an advantage as they shot 48% from the floor to 49% underneath or on wide-open fast break lay-ups.

Leading the Hawks in scoring again was sophomore freshman Brad Sinclair who tallied 20 points. Freshman Jeff Martinich who has been one of the top scorers for Harper since returning to the lineup pumped in 16 and forward Tim Garraway chipped in 15.

Harper had just one snafu on the team this season and if everyone returns coach Berthold has an excellent team for next year, as everyone on the team saw plenty of playing time.

Women's B-Ball drops one to No. 9 Thornton

by RORY KORTAS

If one took the women's basketball game of last Wednesday night back a few thousand years, it could have been compared to the battle of David and Goliath. However, Harper's David thought lost this one to No. 9 ranked team in the nation Thornton (Goliath) 90-47.

The Hawks gave Thornton trouble throughout the first half keeping within killing range, behind the hot shooting of Val "Swish" Weidner who scored 11 of Harper's 11 points in the first half cutting seven of those from the charity stripe.

Head coach Tom Teuchner was pleased with his team's performance. "The team played under control. Playing a tough team like Thornton brought out the best in the women."

In the second half the Hawks were led by the fine play of Jenn Schumli, Judy Lyon, and "Swish" Weidner, but the Hawks couldn't cope with the taller more experienced Thornton eventually dropping a 90-47 decision in their last game of the season.

Intramurals offered

Everyone says that they could play basketball as good as or better than Harper's own team. Well, "Dr. Dukemaster, (Sky walker), or any other fancy names one might play under, here's the chance.

Intramural basketball will be held on March 6, 11, 20, and 22 at 84. Visitor H.S. Dryden Ave. Arlington Heights, IL Courts will be open from 7-8:30 p.m.

Depending on the amount of participants it will either be open recreation or teams will be formed. If there are enough for teams, a tournament will be held with shorts going to the winners. Teams or groups will set up on March 4.

Upon arrival ask for David Carson or Mr. McClane at 9C Visitor. If there are any questions players may call Mr. McClane at Harper, after 9 p.m. ext. 440 or 447.

Stabbing on campus parking lot

by JIM CIBULIANSKI and BOB FURLAN

A Harper College student was fatally stabbed and a second seriously injured Thursday afternoon in parking lot no. 2.

Patricia Baldwin, 21, Lombard, died of multiple chest wounds according to Palatine Police Chief Jerry Bratcher. Steven Bush, 19, Bensenville, suffered penetrating neck wounds and was listed in serious condition after undergoing surgery at Northwestern Community Hospital in Arlington Heights.

Both victims were freshman liberal arts majors and enrolled in Harper's hearing impaired program.

Dean A. Johnson, 21, Riverdale, Ill., has been charged with armed murder, murder, aggravated battery and armed violence according to Palatine police. Johnson was also a hearing impaired student here.

Johnson was taken into custody by the State's Attorney at 6:30 p.m. at St. Michael the Archangel Cemetery, West Algonquin Road, directly across from the college.

The incident started at approximately 1:10 p.m. when two students, Corey Hagen and Debbie Rosenman, witnessed Bush staggering through the parking lot, bleeding from his mouth and head, and reported it to campus information.

This brought Harper's Public Safety and the Palatine Police department to the scene.

Public Safety officer Stephen Kiana and Cadei Jim Nickolaussen were the first to arrive at the scene. The officers found Baldwin and Bush lying on the blood stained pavement and immediately tried to revive Baldwin by administering cardio-pulmonary resuscitation (CPR). However, Baldwin did not revive.

Bush was found in a conscious condition, although his breathing was sporadic. He was then given medical treatment by the two officers and Rosemary Murray, a college nurse with the Health Services Dept.

Within minutes Palatine paramedics arrived and also attempted to revive the Baldwin girl. The attempts were made in vain as the victim would not respond to the treatments.

Bush was then transported to the hospital by the paramedics while Harper College Public Safety and the Palatine Police department secured the crime scene.

A third witness, Lisa Ruka, 17, Mount Prospect, then stepped forward to tell police her story. She had parked her car in lot no. 2 at approximately 1:10 p.m. and while walking through the lot on her way to Rida A, she saw the injured Bush wandering aimlessly about.

"He was walking toward a car, and didn't make any sounds or gestures that he needed help," said Ruka.

Ruka did not know of Bush's hearing impairment and assumed the victim was not in need of any immediate attention.

Shortly after the Bush collapsed near the Baldwin body, which was between two autos parked at the end of the first aisle in parking lot No. 2.

Police, as of Thursday night, did not disclose a motive for the stabbing. Bratcher discredited earlier rumors that the killing was drug related or the result of a lover's quarrel.

After both bodies were removed from the campus parking lot, the teeming crowds of student onlookers quickly vanished. At approximately 3 p.m., Bratcher said the incident was "under police investigation" and although there was no apparent suspect or motive, his men were "checking a few leads."

Students react

by DEBBIE TESCHKE

Shock, outrage and the fact that murder hit home were the reactions of Harper students Thursday afternoon when a hearing impaired student was killed in parking lot #2 and another seriously injured.

"I'm shocked, I find it hard to believe," exclaimed Sheri Warber, when told of Harper's first on-campus death. "It doesn't seem like it really happens."

Other students also expressed shock and disbelief when told the news. Many believed it was just a joke.

"I think that's the most outrageous thing I've ever heard," said Richard Bremner. "In suburban you don't expect something like this to happen."

"It's pretty weird," said Mike Bakalar. "It happens in the city, but I can't reason why it can't here."

I was surprised that it would happen during the day and especially here," said Faith Gelsch. "I believed what people said, but it was hard to believe."

Jeanne Pankaus, director of student activities, could not imagine a stabbing occurring at Harper. "I'm stunned. This is the worst act of violence, by far, that has happened on campus."

Another student found it hard to believe that a junior college in suburban Palatine could be the site of a stabbing.

"If we were in the city we would expect it," said a shocked Kris Gubers. "I still don't expect things like this to happen in the suburbs. Not because the suburbs are better than this, there is just as much corruption, but because the suburbs are more homogeneous. There isn't the diversity here as in the city."

Jeanne Vivian commented the feelings of most Harper students when she said, "I thought it was terrible. I feel like our parking lots aren't safe anymore."

Letters to the Editor

Faculty Senate opposes editorial stand

Dear Editor,

Having read the February 19, 1979, editorial in the Harbinger, I found the temptation to respond irresistible. Being tardy, I will only attempt to touch upon some of the factual errors and pieces of misinformation.

In the first place, I was not aware that part-time faculty are "inferior beings without the brains to teach." Nor am I certain that full-time faculty feel themselves superior and, obviously, is so impossible for them to feel irreplaceable, particularly since last month's Board action.

With regard to tenure, it should be pointed out to the misinformed editorial writer that tenure is a status awarded to teachers who have proved for five years that they can teach—those who can't usually aren't around that long.

The point about the budgeting also is interesting. It is suggested, at least implied, that the best way to slash the budget is to slash the faculty, most of whom have served from three to ten years. First of all, there should be no budget crunch at Harper and there would not be one had the school not been mismanaged for ten years. It's sad, isn't it, that a college district as wealthy as District #412 is going broke? Secondly, I should also add that many campuses in the Chicago City College system, which really does have financial problems, have very few part-time faculty.

It is also true that many full-time faculty do not know what their full schedule are by spring semester. In many, many instances full-time faculty have learned what their complete schedules were as late as two days, or even two hours, before the semester starts. Incidentally, it should be noted that the editorial writer was doing the part-time faculty no favor by suggesting that "in some instances they may not know a whole lot about regarding the assigning of classes to teachers, full and part-time alike, is a result of late enrollment trends and meeting the needs of students not the personal wishes of teachers."

Finally, I must point out, in the sincere hope that I do not offend part-time faculty members, that there is more than a grain of truth to the old maxim about getting what you pay for. Obviously, full-time faculty are paid more than part-time faculty (unless, of course, they teach overloads). But it also the full-time faculty which holds office hours, advises students, selects books and films for the library, serves on committees, co-ordinates programs, and advises student activity clubs. It is clear that it is the full-time faculty which has the greater stake in Harper College.

Recently, however, none fifteen of them learned the hard way that the College has no stake in them. And if the faculty, which apparently inspired the editorial writer, was ill-advised and hastily conceived, perhaps apologies are in order from the full-time faculty involved. I include myself.

However, it must be made clear that the firing of these people, in violation of our contract (which we, at least, agreed to in good faith) has created an emotional issue as well as a contractual one, which cannot be allowed to die as easy death.

Sincerely,
William E. Miller

Illinois House considers raising drinking age

The Illinois General Assembly Executive committee will vote on March 8, on whether or not to put House Bill Proposition 21, which puts a restriction of 21 years on the sale of beer and wine in Illinois, to vote before the full floor.

Some say that if the bill goes to the floor it will be passed for sure, because the drinking age was 21 in Illinois for so long.

In Illinois raised the drinking to 21 it would be unfair to the 19 and 20 year-olds who acquired the privilege and now would have it rescinded. There was so much time and effort put into lowering the drinking age in 1973, that they must have thought it was a good idea. Now, six years later, it's a bad idea they claim, so the right may be taken away.

There is a way to stop this legislation from passing, however. There are petitions going around which state that "the undersigned oppose the bills, pending in the General Assembly. (Proposition 21 in the House, and SB-5 in the Senate), to increase the drinking age in Illinois from 19 to 21 years.

With these petitions, all those against the proposition would be represented in the House saying we don't want it. There can be a support majority displayed by the petitions, even if there aren't many people actually there to protest.

The first thing that opponents of the legislation need to do is to sign the petitions. All that the petitions require is one's legal name, address and district, there is no money involved.

Another thing opponents of the proposition could do is to contact the Illinois General Assembly, or contact their congressman about making their feelings known.

The main reason that Senator Orsiga, who is the father of Proposition SB-5, gave for the raising of the drinking age is because of 19 year-olds are able to buy the liquor, then it is easier for the younger teenagers to get it. In other words, he wants to take away the rights of 19 and 20-year-olds so that the younger children won't get liquor.

If younger teenagers really wanted to get beer or wine they would find a way, whether they had to ask a 19-year-old or a 21-year-old. It wouldn't matter to them as long as they got what they wanted. It isn't fair to punish the whole 19 and 20-year-old group because of some of them misbehave or misuse liquor. The great majority doesn't misuse it so why punish everyone for the wrongs of a few?

The government thought that by making drugs illegal that people would stop using them, but obviously that hasn't stopped it. Raising the drinking age in Illinois probably won't stop the drinking of younger teenagers either.

Dear Editor,

I am an adult student at Harper, and I will be receiving my A.A. Degree in May of this year. When I started taking classes four years ago, I had no plans beyond taking a few courses for stimulation and enrichment. However, due to the excellent counseling I received, from both my instructors and the counseling staff, I decided to complete the requirements for graduation.

I had little self-confidence concerning my academic ability, but each instructor I had, cared enough to offer words of encouragement when needed, also to try to ally my fears related to academic status. And he affirmed my individuality in many ways.

Now I am concerned about the many problems confronting Harper at this time due mostly to a lack of funds. I believe the refusal of the voters to pass the recent referendum, which would have provided Harper with sufficient operating capital, was a grave mistake.

Until becoming a student again, after thirty years, I was quite unaware of the differences in the quality of education, both then and now. I had only unpleasant memories of my high school days. In fact, I completed only eleven years of school due to my negative experiences. My time at Harper has provided a "corrective experience", and it is one I will always treasure. I sincerely hope that the students who will be entering Harper in the coming semesters will not be cheated out of these and other important services due to a lack of personnel.

In conclusion, I would like to say, I have already started work on my B.S. in Social Work at Loyola University. I feel quite confident in my ability to meet Loyola's high academic standards due to my excellent preparation at Harper. I sincerely hope the next time Harper presents a request for funds from the community, there will be an overwhelmingly positive response. Only the community will use by another rejection.

Sincerely,
Patricia L. Dickinson

Fatal stabbing on campus

Don Martino, 335 East Algonquin Road, notified the police of an automobile that had smashed into a snowbank at the end of the sidewalk in front of his apartment.

"I told them police there was a car on top of a fire hydrant and they should come and get it out."

The Schaumburg police arrived five minutes later to discover a late model, green Chevrolet Nova abandoned on the drift with its windshield wipers still operating and the radio blaring at full volume. The car had been turned off, although it was left with the auxiliary wiper on.

Four prints in the snow indicated that a person exited the car from the passenger side and fled through the field.

Patrimen from the Palatine and Schaumburg police departments then began an on-foot search of the vacant field. Police dogs were ordered to aid in the search of the alleged murderer.

It was now approximately 6:10 p.m. and news that foot-prints were found around the cemetery came over the police radio. In ten minutes the investigation with the apprehension of the suspect at St. Michael's.

The police, as of late Thursday night, were still without a murder suspect. Search crews combed the area immediately surrounding the cemetery with flashlights for any evidence.

Harper campus security is cooperating with the Palatine Police Department in the investigation. It appears that this first fatal act of violence at Harper is an isolated incident.

Generally Speaking

by CINDY CARAVELLO

about it, well then you're some tough cookie.

Everybody thinks about giving themselves the axe at least once in their lifetime. Some people think about it with a little more frequency (like once every hour).

My guess is that if you're reading this newspaper, then you've probably checked the idea at the last moment, which was a good decision on your part.

Nobody should kill himself.

Why? Well, first of all, there's bound to be at least a few dozen people out there that want to see you dead, so just hang in there to keep them aggravated.

There are other reasons why you shouldn't kill yourself.

1) If you are Catholic, you'll never make it to Heaven. If you can think way back, you'll remember what you learned in grade school about suicide. People who kill themselves are never going to be happy. People who do naturally will spend the dead portions of their lives in eternal bliss.

2) If you have a family, just think how miserable they'll all be when you're gone. Against their better judgment, relatives will be forced to go out and hire a lawyer to make sure they get every cent they've got coming to them.

Your death will inevitably cause them heartburn, indigestion and temporary insanity (until they get their act).

You see, you're only rocking the boat!

3) The last reason why you would never want to do the evil deed is because the only mark you'll leave on this earth will be a splash under some poor slob's office window.

No, instead you must resist the temptation, pull yourself together and get started all over again. Ask yourself what's depressing you so deeply that every time you walk down a flight of stairs you can't decide whether or not your time has come to take the short way down.

If it's a somebody and not a something who's grating on your nerves, then take some action.
Why let somebody else get all the satisfaction of reading your obituary in the Herald?

Just remember what I once read in a book. If somebody makes you want to take that Noxal plunge, take some time to do some heavy pondering, some careful consideration and then look them square in the eye, give them a cruel nod and watch your problem go soaring down several flights of stairs.

Forest conference planned

Topics on understanding and enjoying the forest will be presented at the Fifth Forest Owners and Users Conference
March 17 at Harper.

The workshop, sponsored by Cooperative Extension Services and state departments of natural resources in five states, is designed to help forest owners use and improve their land and possibly earn some money from it.

Discussions will be led by Extension foresters from Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana and Minnesota. They will be available for individual questions after the sessions. Discussion groups will be repeated so participants can attend four of them.

CHANCE TO EARN CREDIT
THIS SPRING.

Harper goes out to recruit students

In an attempt to bolster enrollment, Harper College is offering a wide selection of degree credit and Continuing Education courses during the second eight weeks of the spring semester.

Some 240 classes will be offered from March 12 through May 14. Registration is now in progress Monday through Thursday from 8:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. and Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the admissions office of Bldg. A at the Palatine campus.

Classes as diverse as child psychology and television repair will be held days and evenings at St. Viator High School, Hersey High School, Barrington High School, Palatine Library, Schaumburg Township Library, the Willow Park Center and the main campus.

The second-eight-weeks program was created to recruit new students at Harper and to allow students presently attending to earn additional credits during the spring semester. The snow-filled weather this January had a damaging effect on the college's enrollment. The Blizzard of '79 closed down the campus and forced the college to extend registration through Jan. 26, as of Jan. 17 the full-time enrollment at Harper was 6.8 percent below enrollment at the same time last year.

College administrators hope the compact eight-week second semester will draw a number of students who were unable to enroll during the January snowstorms.

Degree credit courses will be offered in business, liberal arts, fine arts, social science and public service, engineering, mathematics and physical sciences, life and health science, special services, and physical education, athletics and recreation.

More than 100 courses are among the continuing education offerings. These courses do not carry college degree credit and are designed to improve or update career skills and provide enrichment opportunities. Courses include everything from letter training to diverse adjustment to critical care nursing. A complete list of continuing education courses is available in the admissions office and through classroom teachers and counselors. Copies of all second eight weeks courses will be stacked in the Harbinger news table, as well.

For further information on courses or registration call the college at 393-3000 ext. 300.

UPCOMING

Rape

Student Nurses Association of Illinois will present a speaker from WASH. Women Against Rape, Helaine Berendt March 3 at 7 p.m. in 100E.

Mrs. Berendt will speak on the physical, psychological and legal aspects of rape.

Graduation

Students who wish to graduate at the end of the spring semester must petition for graduation by March 6 if they qualify for a degree or certificate.

Petitions are available in the Admissions Office, A133.

Horticulture

Horticulture students at Harper are being sought to participate in spring and/or summer internships this year with the Parks Department of the City of Evanston, according to Fred Gullen, City Horticulturist.

Student interns will develop and implement maintenance schedules for Evanston's parkland areas. They will be given the opportunity to learn about the administrative organization of the City's park system, personnel procedures, maintenance record keeping system, material and supply acquisition, as well as general building and grounds maintenance. They will be paid at the rate of $13 per hour and will work a 40 hour week. In many cases, through arrangements with their schools, they also will obtain academic credit.

The interns program is open to students, depending on their school schedules, spring through the summer.

Those interested in internships should contact Gullen at 338-2161, ext. 3379 or by writing him at 2100 Ridge Ave., Evanston, IL 60204.

Concert

The Harper Community Orchestra will perform at 7:30 p.m. Sunday in the college center lounge.

Featured on the program is the King Stephen Overture written by Beethoven and the Fifth symphony in E minor by Tchaikovsky. The second movement of the latter work became a popular song in the late 1930's.

The orchestra is conducted by George Mahan, professor of music at Harper, and is completing its eleventh season.

ISU Concert

Music and theater faculty from Illinois State University will perform Igor Stravinsky's "The Soldier's Dance" Thursday at 10:15 p.m. in 100E.

The performance includes a narrator and dancers as well as the musicians.

This concert, presented by the Student Activities department, is a substitute for the Soesteren Woodwind Quintet originally scheduled for this date.

Health care

The Harper Health Care Program will offer a Nursing Assistant Training course beginning March 13 at the Willow Park Center.

The course will prepare participants to assist the professional nurse in providing quality care for patients in a variety of health care facilities. Training will include the development of basic nursing skills through lecture, laboratory demonstration and experience in health care settings.

Classes will meet on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays, March 13 through May 10 from 8 to 11:50 a.m.

For registration information, students may call Continuing Education Admissions, ext. 489, 423 or 361.

Choir

Harper will present the Chicago Children's Choir, Friday, at 1 p.m. and 7:30 p.m., in the College Center Lounge. Admission is free.

During the 22 years since its founding, the Chicago Children's Choir has provided music and human relations education to the thousands of boys and girls who have participated in its programs and an education to the hundreds of thousands of people who have heard the Chorus concert team in performance.

The Choir, which consists of preteens and teenagers of varying racial, cultural and economic backgrounds, shares its enthusiastic celebration of life through American and foreign folk songs, modern works and spirituals.

Lifetime sports: keys to longevity

by JOE KUSEK

Running doesn't take any special clothing, is inexpensive and can be done anywhere, anytime. One shoe doesn't have to pay outrageous prices to run.

Harper trackmen ready to take off

The Harper track team doesn't have any Dwight Stones, Frank Shorters, Houston McCune, or Brian Colville, but does have returning Ohio mason Ron Warring fourth in the nation high jumper who received All-America recognition, Jeff Brydges Most Valuable cross-country for the last two seasons, who will run the 800 and 1,600 meters, and John Mason NAC conference outdoor shot put champion.

Sprinters Devin Hensley and Mike Walston will anchor the sprinters with Jim Langster and Jim Lancaster will shore up the distance corps and transfer Greg Davis should be very strong in the javelin.

"We expect to be stronger in the sprints and also in individual field events, and should have a good showing in the conference and region meets," said head coach Bob Nolan.

Quality not quantity seems to be the case for the Hawk track squad as in almost every event Harper has someone who can win, but lacks depth to pick up the marred seconds, thirds, and fourths, necessary for winning invitational meets.

If you like to jump, run, throw, etc., here is your chance contact coach Nolan in DRA or call ext.

The team's first meet is the Northwestern Invitational featuring both two year and four year schools.

Bird hunting will not be offered at Harper. Seasons and classes on proper techniques will begin on March 22.

Remember the sports everyone used to laugh at and make fun of in high school? Well, what sports does everyone participate in after graduating from high school and college, what sports do people take up in their leisure time for recreation and to stay healthy? Right, the ones you used to laugh at.

Lifetime sports such as running, tennis, golf, etc., are usually big jokes in high school and college but as one gets older he or she finds that they can't play football, basketball, tennis, field or ice hockey, or participate in gymnastics as well as or with the same abandon as before as they turn to these.

But people still want to remain active in and compete. Lifetime sports fills the bill, as most are individual sports or at the most two on a team, one doesn't have twenty people depending on him or her and can go as fast or as slow as they want.

Some of the sports have been taken up by people in great numbers the last few years. Running is becoming a national trend, one isn't with it unless they run at least twice a week to prove that they are healthy and own a pair of Adidas, Nike or Tiger.

Racquetball is another sport turning into a booming business. In the last five years and early 80's one could count the places to play racquetball on one hand now every community is keeping up with their neighbors must have at least two.

Tennis is the forerunner of the stay in health fads as at one time when tennis was at its peak courts were filled from six in the morning to midnight and one had to tell his mother, and give away his first born child to receive a half hour of court time at outrageous prices.

Cross-country skiing is now coming on strong as more and more people find this one of the most inexpensive and best forms of exercise. Now one is able to go to almost any forest preserve and ski in solitude and check out the scenery but if it keeps growing one might have to rent trail time as well as skis.

All these sports have been proven if done with vigor and done correctly will add years to one's life and people are now caring about their health more than ever.

In the next few weeks, the Harbinger will explore every aspect of a particular sport, the cheapest place to play, type of equipment the pros, coaches, and long time users recommend and how to get the most out of your respective sport.

Intramural Basketball

Anyone who can do a double windmill reverse slam dunk or nail 4-footers with ease while being triple teamed is invited to intramural basketball at St. Viator H.S., Dryden Ave., Arlington Heights, on March 8, 11, 20, and 22. Upon arrival ask for David Cavano or Mr. McClane. If there are any questions call Mr. McClane at Harper after 1 p.m. ext. 466 or 467.

Racquetball is one of the fastest growing sports in the U.S. It combines all the skills needed in any athletic event. (Photo by Terry Teresaki)

Harper student indicted for murder by grand jury

by JOE FURLIN

A Harper student accused of murdering a fellow student and wounding another, was indicted by a grand jury Tuesday morning.

Iwan A. Johnson, 21, Riverdale, was indicted on charges of murder, felony murder, attempted murder, aggravated battery and armed violence in connection with the March 1 stabbing death of Patricia Baldwin, 21, of Lombard.

The wounded victim, "Green Bush, 19, Bensenville, is listed in fair condition at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights after undergoing surgery for neck wounds.

All three students involved were enrolled in the Hearing Impaired program here.

Johnson was escorted in his preliminary hearing to the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court by three police men and two bailiffs.

Johnson entered the courtroom with his blue turtle-neck sweater pulled up over his face, in an attempt to remain anonymous to news photographers.

Ignazio Kreft, a Harper instructor in the Hearing Impaired program, assisted Johnson in communicating with Judge Brian J. Young.

Both Johnson and Kreft were sworn in as the judge and Johnson's attorney Rick Halperin questioned the accused defendant. Halperin was named his client was allowed to speak through his interpreter) to police officials before he had a chance to counsel with Johnson.

He and the indictment before the preliminary hearing was depriving the defendant of his "constitutional rights."

Halperin also made it clear that he did not want Johnson to talk with any law enforcement officer of any kind and that Johnson only wanted to talk with the attorney.

Johnson was to be examined by Chicago psychiatrist Dr. Melvin Levin before being arraigned last Friday morning at the Evanston branch court. Johnson's defense requested the arraignment to take place Tuesday morning as scheduled. This request came because of the special problem Johnson has.

The judge then held a closed door meeting with Johnson and his attorney before deciding to release the hearing until March 8.

Johnson showed the hearing wounds in his knuckles that resulted from the stabbings last Thursday. He also had his right wrist bandaged after allegedly inflicting the wounds himself. As of March 4, the murder weapon had not been found.

Halperin would not comment on the rumor of Johnson attempting to commit suicide.

President McGrath talks at memorial service

by CINDY CARAVELLO

Gifts us at Harper," he said.

We want to remember Patty Johnson, she was known and loved," Harper President, James McGrath said at a memorial service held for Miss Baldwin.

Over 50 administrators, students and members of the Harper community participated in a memorial service held last Wednesday.

McGrath addressed the congregation by expressing the need for people to reach out and listen to one another in a time of need - to try to understand someone else's problem even if they can't help.

A heavy silence filled the room where mourners of Miss Baldwin's death sat and listened intently to what McGrath had to say.

McGrath talked about Dean A. Johnson, 21, who is accused of killing Miss Baldwin on March 1 in Harper's parking lot number 2. As a community college, we have to remember Dean.

McGrath said, "Dean's family is going through a difficult trial," he said.

In order to prevent any similar incidents in the future, McGrath said people must "grow up peace with one another. Let peace begin with us at Harper," he said. An McGrath 2nd other speakers spoke to the people there, an interpreter translated the words for the hearing impaired students who attended the service, into sign language.

A Bible lay open on a table at the front of the room as various speakers read brief passages from it.

Those who came to the service sat in a semicircle along the sides and the back of the room and read portions along with Sister Peggy Freeman of Campus Ministry.

"Include your sin O Lord, answer me, for I am afflicted and poor. Keep my life, for I am devoted to you, save your servant who trusts in you."

Then Christine Dwyer, hearing impaired counselor, read a passage from the Bible interpreting for the hearing impaired students as she read, she was very troubled and she was left speechless, as tears welled up in her eyes.

Fasting the strength to go on, Miss Dwyer composed herself and then finished reading the passage. "Ours when hymns were sung, along with the sad strains of one musical, was the silence of the room truly broken.

Also present at the service was Kevin King, public safety supervisor, and several of public safety's police officers.

The solemnity of the occasion could be seen in one of the public safety worker's face, as his eyes looked red and watery from listening to the deeply concerned members of the service speak about Miss Baldwin and the tragic occurrence.

Others who came to talk were Sister Julia Flynn, Campus Ministry; Joanne Jackowski, hearing impaired program; Fr. John Nickerson, Lutheran Minister; Pastor Frederick C. Hill, Lutheran Campus Ministry; and Reverend Carey Landry.

Miss Baldwin, 21, was fatally stabbed on March 1 while she was in Harper parking lot no. 2.

Also involved in the same incident was Steven Bush, 19 who suffered penetrating neck wounds; Bush is now listed in good condition.

Baldwin, Bush, and Johnson were all students enrolled in the hearing impaired program at Harper.

Editorial

News is news and must be told

The Harbinger has received a lot of flak regarding a picture on the front page of the March 5, 1979 issue. We feel that under the Bill of Rights, in the section about Freedom of the Press, and by our own moral standards that the photograph was presented legally and in good taste.

Many people have different views on this subject. However, as the saying goes, "No one can please all of the people all of the time."

The main purpose of any newspaper is to report the news. The main purpose of a school newspaper is to report the happenings at the school, whether they be good or bad. It is much better for students of the school to know the truth, than for wild rumors to be the basis of their understanding. A newspaper should inform the student body of what is happening on their campus.

Some people say putting incidents like the one previously mentioned, on the front page is morbid, tasteless, and unnecessary. The idea behind putting this extremely important, and most unusual event out in front was to make people face the reality that this sort of thing can happen anywhere. People who can't face up to the facts are the first ones to say it should not be allowed.

As for the major concern of some people regarding college recruitment and college relations, after reading the true story most people will realize that this tragedy was a freak occurrence that will probably never happen again. If there was not a story, people might never know the truth and hysterical rumors might cause a decline in college recruits and poor college relations.

No one can hold the college entirely responsible for the terrible incident that happened. Likewise, no one would avoid coming to Harper just because of this single event.

Harper students selected for Who's Who List

Twenty students from William Rainey Harper College in Palatine have been selected for inclusion in the 1979-80 edition of Who's Who Among Students in American Junior Colleges.

Student selection was based on academic achievement, service to the community, leadership in extracurricular activities and future potential.

The country's most outstanding campus leaders were chosen from more than 700 institutions of higher learning in all 50 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico.

Harper students, listed by community residence, are:

Letters to the Editor

Is anyone there listening?

Dear Editor,
Something terrible happened on our campus. A young handicapped girl died violently, her death is in critical condition in a nearby hospital and their assistant is in jail. Anger, fear, blood, violence, death creased into three young lives. Days will never be lived, lives will never be loved, and something will never be learned, and others learned far too well. The families of these young people feel pain as knowing that words can only longer their agony. An agony that death with what seemed to be the only absolute left: death. Pain, for them, will never sleep, but mercifully time will fade. Yet the Christmas will come, and the Easter, and the summer holidays and the holidays but that face will be forever gone. There will never be an enduring love, a beautiful wedding, and children; physical life for this young woman will not return. Life!

Within the rippling of this tragedy we still find with shock, we cannot yet reason and we may never answer the question that screams, "WHY?" Most of us did not know this young woman who could not speak and could not hear. I personally did not know there was a special program for the handicapped at Harper, in fact my professors might say could be added to my already fragile list of things I don't know!

Without the ability to hear, she came to Harper to hear what trained intelligent, caring teachers had to say. Education dedicated to helping us be thinking, reasoning, knowledgeable human beings able to understand our world, and for some privileged few, improve our world. The world can be very small; ourselves, our homes and immediate families. For others it can be as vast as the universe—but for all it is as deep as the human mind and the human spirit. She wanted to learn to solve problems with perhaps God's greatest gift to man, reason. With education we can become very knowledgeable, smart if you will. But it is only when knowledge meets another of God's wondrous gifts, the emotion of compassion, are we wise. In this past week we have experienced the horror of jealousy and anger gone berserk, unbridled, from reason and thought.

One would have believed this handicapped young girl would have a limited world indeed, influencing only herself and those few persons with whom she came into contact. Now she will never know the exquisite joy of physical maturity gives us a gift of her spiritual maturity. She could not hear, but she heard best. She could not speak, yet her death cry is an all: education is not apart from life; it is life. It was life in the confines of a world that could neither hear nor speak, and it is life between people, and it is our hope for future life in this earth.

Now it is asked that those who have ears, listen and those who can talk, speak. It is by our students we have been taught. It takes a lot of money to get teachers, run Harper and other factors about which I know nothing. But the tragedy on our campus has shown we cannot afford not to pay this price.

Who is Tom Chapin?
Done the program "Make A Wish" ring a bell?

If not, surely the Chapin name is familiar to most people especially Harry Chapin, the popular singer-songwriter of the 60's and 70's.
Tom Chapin is a singer, songwriter and entertainer in his own right and doesn't feel stifled by his brother's popularity.
"I think it helps me," he commented while performing at Fremd High School in early March.

It didn't seem to help him very much at Fremd when his evening performance gathered only about 200 people, and as he said of his afternoon audience, "I almost outnumbered them myself."

Born in New York, Chapin started a singing career early in high school when he branched up with brothers Steve and Harry.

They were known as the Chapin Brothers.

After singing with his brothers for a number of years, he appeared on the weekend morning program
"Make A Wish" for five years.
The educational show was geared to children and made it fun to learn.

The show was only a side-line job and ended after five years. "We won the Emmy and the Peabody awards and the show had gone as far as it could go, so we went off the air," the now-named Chapin explained.

Chapin now lives in Los Angeles and has been performing around the country for the last three or four years. He was in Chicago last summer to perform in Chicago.

"I don't have to go on big nationwide tours like big bands do," he said, "I don't have to pay the costs a band does. I only pay for myself."

Chapin had been doing a syndicated television show called "Everyday" for the past six months, but the show went off the air.

"It was a mixture between 'Good Morning America' and 'Saturday Night Live,' and after five or six months I decided it wasn't for me," he explained.

The Fremd concert opened with a humorous ballad called "Traveling Man." The song was a "round" in which the audience was strongly encouraged to participate.

The tall, slender folk singer then continued to blend strong lyricisms with light-hearted ballads. The stereotypical audience participation became voluntary after only the first few songs.

"I wrote 90 percent of my songs and melodies," the balladeer said, "I sometimes collaborate, but not very often."

After a standing ovation, Chapin returned to the small, informal stage to perform a sad love song for an encore.

The crowd stood up again, but he disappeared behind the curtains.

Junk mail changes name to Fun

Ah yes! The mailman has just dumped several envelopes in your mailbox outside. This can be the highlight of the day.

It's time to check out the mail situation and see what goodies the mailman has left you this time.

You bad! There's no mail addressed to you. No wait! There is something that you can open. Yes! It's addressed to "occupant," "resident" or "whoever lives here now."

You must have seen this kind of mail at least once in your lifetime. You call it "junk" mail. But if you stop and think about it, it's not "junk" mail at all. No, instead it should be called "fun" mail.

Why? Because it's so much fun to read all the crazy

Generally Speaking

by CINDY CARAVELLO

Advertisements companies bother to send to you when you know that you'd never buy that perfume they select by mail, anyway.

Instead of the "fun" mail being junk" mail, it's just the other way around. It's valuable mail. After a long, dreary day of school or work, you can look forward to browsing through colorful brochures, glossy displays, encyclopedias, egg slicers, or all brand dandruff shampoos, and then you can salvage the envelopes they always manage to slip inside.

Think of all the money you waste each year on buying envelopes. You could be making the most of a bad situation by re-using all the envelopes they send you.

How? You ask. It's very simple. Just take a pen and cross out the preaddressed portion and you're on your way to looking fabulous.

By using your "fun" mail to its fullest potential, you can really go far in life. You can entertain yourself by reading the phony claims they always seem to make in their glossy brochures and you also get to save the return envelope. Such a deal!

So the next time you go to your mailbox and find only "junk" mail, don't brush the situation off too lightly: you just may have a harvest of fun on your very doorstep.

Marketing classes offered

A marketing major at Harper can choose from a variety of marketing, management and other business courses to earn a two-year degree or a one-year certificate.

Campan Digest News Service

ARIES: (March 21 to April 19) - Don't make unreasonable demands on others - work quietly and happily in the background. Get plenty of rest and watch your diet. If a current problem persists, remember how you handled a similar situation in the past.

Taurus: (April 20 to May 20) - Get out and have fun with companions at sports events, theater, etc. You are very creative now and could entertain beautifully. Keep appointments promptly, attend to correspondence and phone calls.

Gemini: (May 21 to June 20) - You can relieve your inner tensions by expressing your honest opinions and standing up for what you believe. Maintain calm composure, though, and don't create a scene. Home projects could bog down if not thought over carefully.

Cancer: (June 21 to July 20) - Activity slows down somewhat but there are still projects "hanging fire." Use patience and don't force things. If traveling, arrange the details yourself to an organized way. Don't let last-minute changes upset you.

Leo: (July 21 to Aug. 20) - Money matters are accentuated, but there are still projects "hanging fire." Use patience and don't force things. If traveling, arrange the details yourself to an organized way. Don't let last-minute changes upset you.

Virgo: (Aug. 21 to Sept. 20) - People will listen to what you say now, so be sure it is worthwhile and you can back it up! You can overcome opposition if you move cautiously. Go after your dream if the foundations are practical and firm.

Libra: (Sept. 21 to Oct. 20) - Energy is high and you could be "walking on air" - feeling very special. You can accomplish an enormous amount of work and you look and feel very good. Regarding a personal relationships problem - better not involve in anyone.

Scorpio: (Oct. 21 to Nov. 20) - Both work and social life are accepted, almost equally. Ambition is high and you can tackle the toughest of jobs with ease. Relax and enjoy romance during your off hours for a feeling of wellbeing.

Sagittarius: (Nov. 21 to Dec. 20) - Don't get too involved in family problems - allow others to work it out for themselves. Avoid emotional disturbances and concentrate on career. Keep your plans to yourself and be true to your word at all costs.

Capricorn: (Dec. 21 to Jan. 19) - Go that "extra mile" at work. Volunteer for overtime and keep your eye on your long-range goals. Keep your mind on your job and plan ahead. Clear up any misunderstanding with a loved one by being tender and considerate.

Aquarius: (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) - Be patient with an associate who is more concerned with petty details than you. It is helpful to have that point of view. Avoid being touchy in personal matters - charm and graciousness can open up the communications.

Pisces: (Feb. 19 to March 20) - Be adaptable to the wishes of the majority now. Not the time to take a stand. Take care that you don't exaggerate, and view any promotional scheme that comes your way with caution. Resist being sarcastic.

Help offered for rape victims

by BUE CONROY

Women have to be more aware of where they are going and what they are doing. This was the main point that Helene Berendt, from Women Against Rape (W.A.R.), made in her lecture at Harper.

Ms. Berendt, from the Northwest Chapter of Women Against Rape, said the non-profit organization has two objectives. The first is victim advocacy. There is a hotline number available seven days a week, twenty-four hours a day for anyone who just wants to talk to someone. The number is 286-0777.

Their second purpose is education. Volunteers from W.A.R. speak to many high schools, church groups, and colleges, about the legal, physical and psychological aspects of rape.

"It isn't that someone sees a photographic movie and then goes to rape the first woman he sees, that has nothing to do with it," Berendt explained.

Rapes are very planned in as much as the offender usually studies himself in a place where he knows women are vulnerable. Elevators, laundry rooms, and apartment hallways, are the prime places where women become targets.

"Singles bars are really the biggest boom to rapists," she commented. There is no specific program for rape prevention, but there are a few things women can do when confronted in this situation.

"As the police say, if you are going to try to hurt your attacker it has to be really good, really fast, really hurt, and you'd better really run," Berendt said.

For women who want to avoid being a target at all, the first piece of advice is not to look vulnerable. "When a woman is walking alone the street looking dirty with no where to go," Ms. Berendt said, "she is a prime target."

When a woman is confused or lost she should walk in a specific direction. Women are beginning to report rapes more often now, although rape is still a highly unreported crime. Only about 10 percent of the actual rapes committed are reported yearly.

Tornadoes

The Environmental Health and Safety Committee has issued some precautions for use in case of a tornado at Harper.

Students are warned to do the following:

1. Select the safest and most structurally sound parts of the building for safety. These areas should be, if possible, below grade level and away from glass.
2. Move to lowest floors available.
3. Avoid using areas with wide roof spans.
4. After reaching designated shelter areas remain calm and be ready to shelter and protect vital areas of the body, usually done by lying down and covering your head.
5. Students will not be dismissed during tornado alarm.
6. Persons should be reminded to stay away from all windows.
7. Special assistance will be given to any handicapped student, to college staff.

TORNADO ALERT AND TORNADO PRECAUTIONS BY BUILDING

Building A - College Center: In event of tornado approach, all members of the college community will go to the basement floor.

Building B - Physical Plant, Votek Shop: All persons will move into the west end of B Building shop area.

Building C - Fine Arts Building: Evacuate second floor. All persons will move to rooms C-101, C-106.

Building D - Science Building: All persons will move to the first floor corridors and rooms without glass. Due to the large amount of glass, the entire second floor will be evacuated.

Building E - Lecture/Innovation Building: All persons will move to the classrooms.

Building F - Learning Resources Building: All persons will evacuate the second and third floors and report to the south corridor of the first floor.

Building G - All persons will move to rooms G-158 and G-164 and 159.

LEARNING

Movie

Harper College will be presenting the film "Silver Streak" Friday, March 16, at 8 p.m., at $1.00.

The box office hit "Silver Streak" combines romance, murder and intrigue in a cross-country comedy adventure starring Gene Wilder ("Young Fuggles"), JBI Clayburgh ("An Unmarried Woman"), and Richard Pryor.

Admission is $3.00. Students are allowed one guest. The film is rated P.G. and is sponsored by the Program Board.

Film series

The Program Board will be presenting a series of comedy short films, Monday, March 19, from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. in A31.

The line-up of films include "The Music Box," starring Laurel and Hardy; "The Gold Rush" starring Charlie Chaplin; "Mary Poppins Festival"; and the "Pink Panther".

Admission is free. Sponsored by the Program Board.

Workshop

A three-day workshop "On Being Male" will be offered at Harper on April 6, 7 and 8, in A213.

Being male today is often a confusing experience," said Harper counselor Bruce Baber. "Males frequently live by rigid rules and expectations that result in repetitive, stereotyped responses. Our workshop will help participants examine the attitudes, beliefs and feelings of being male and enable them to become aware of their identity." Baber continued.

Topics to be covered include: Discussion of sex roles; The role of the father; Stress situations; The mid-life crisis; Career changes; Intimacy and sexuality; and Friendship with other males.

Group leaders will be Clete Hixon, counselor, Bruce Baber, and Leighton Clark, counseling later.

The workshop will meet on Friday, April 6 from 6 to 9 p.m., and on Saturday and Sunday from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. Tuition is $17 and the class may be taken for credit. Additional information is available at ext. 283 or 304. To register students may call ext. 306.

Seminars

Transfer seminars for Harper students who plan to transfer to a four-year institution will be held at 10 p.m. tomorrow and 7 p.m. Wednesday in D207.

The topics to be discussed will include: how to select a four-year institution; transferability of courses and curricula; entrance requirements and admission procedures and compact agreements with the state universities in Illinois.

These seminars will be conducted by Nancy Foy, Bill Nelson, and Ray Hylander, members of the Student Development Faculty.

CETA

The electronic assembly and inspection training program at Harper is training workers for employment in the electronic assembly industry. Under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA), the Electronic Production Skills Program consists of ten weeks of intensive training followed by ten weeks of employment placement.

The tuition-free, twelve-week course runs eight hours a day, Monday through Friday. CETA pays each participant an allowance of $116 per week for full attendance.

Subjects covered include: math; blueprint reading; wiring; soldering; factory assembly and inspection of electronic products; and use of electronic test equipment such as the voltmeter, meter and the oscilloscope. The fundamentals of first aid are also taught as well as shop safety and proper use of hand tools. In addition, the program provides training for employment. How to groom oneself for a job interview, how to write an effective application and how to remain poised during a job interview supplement the basic training in electronics.

To be eligible for the program an individual must be a resident of suburban Cook County, at least 18 years of age, be unemployed for seven working days or underemployed and economically disadvantaged.

Interested persons should call Harper's CETA office at ext. 238.

Nurses

A workshop for registered nurses who want to obtain a Bachelor of Science in Nursing will be at Harper on March 31 from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Representatives from Elmhurst and St. Xavier Colleges, Governors State, Loyola, Northwestern, and Rush Universities and the University of Illinois will provide information on admission requirements and the time commitment necessary to obtain a BSN degree.

Admission is $10. To register students may call the Harper Continuing Education Admissions Office at ext. 416, 417 or 201.

Health Fair

Harper is having a Health Fair from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. Wednesday in the student center of Bldg. A.

Exhibits and literature will be provided by such organizations as the American Cancer Society, Catholic Charities, Chicago Hearing Society, Easter Seal Society, Illinois Right to Life, Lutheran General Hospital, Muscular Dystrophy Assn., Northwest Opportunity Center, and T.O.P.S., Take Off Pounds Sensibly.

Health representatives from Harper include: Dietetic Program, Dental Clinic, Operating Room Technicians and Nursing.

Health screening and testing will also be offered.

Casino

Harper is holding a Casino Night Benefit for Cerebral Palsy March 23.

Admission for dinner, show and gambling will be $4.50 for public and $5.50 for Harper students and staff. Advanced reservations must be made for the dinner.

Admission for strictly the Casino will be $2.50 for public and $2.50 for Harper students and staff. Further information is available at the Student Activities office, ext. 302.

Recital

A duo piano recital by Harper faculty members, Elva Johnson and E.L. Lancaster will be broadcast on WKXV, 90.3 FM, Tuesday, at 3 p.m. and again on March 18 at 6 p.m.

The recital was originally performed on March 28, 1975 at Harper. It includes works on Bach, Mozart, Schubert and Milhaud.

Jobs

Students looking for full-and part-time jobs should stop by the Illinois Job Service located on the first floor, Bldg. F.

The service has a wide range of jobs with temporary hours and summer jobs available and is provided free of charge. Interested students should contact C. Lee Maguire or Carolyn Rich.

Discussion

To meet the challenges of advancements in industrial technology, the Illinois Industrial Education Association has organized nine roundtable discussion groups throughout the state. The Chicago Metropolitan Roundtable No. 8 will meet at Harper Friday at 3:30 p.m.

More than 200 participants will tour local industries and the college's vocational facilities in addition to attending a slide program on the use of microprocessors in areas such as architecture and automotive and mechanical shop classes.

Displays of products related to industrial technology will also assist teachers in updating their knowledge of the field. Local firms who wish to attend the meeting or set up a display should contact George Dornier, associate dean of the college's Engineering, Mathematics and Physical Sciences Division, at ext. 275.

Play rehearsals underway

Rehearsals are now underway for the Harper College Studio Theater's production of The Scoundrel Scapin, by Moliere. Production dates are set for April 14, in the TV Studio, Bldg. F.

Moliere was a seventeenth century French playwright whose plays have given the world a rich tapestry of comic characters. Some of his most popular works were farcical and used characters and situations first created in the commedia dell'arte, a type of theater that flourished in Europe for over two hundred years.

That Scoundrel Scapin, first produced in 1971, is the story of two wealthy but stingy fathers, living in the seaport of Naples, whose sons do the unspeakable: they choose their own brides without their fathers' permission. The play concerns the efforts of their servants, Sylvester and Scapin, to win over the fathers. This is accomplished chiefly through the cunning and trickery of Scapin.

Cast in the title role of Scapin is Harper student John Loprieno (Elk Grove). Other Harper students in the cast include: Scott Peterson (Elk Grove), Joe Pullio (Schaumburg), Shirley Turpin (Hoffman Estates), Mike Pose (Schaumburg), Kay Hutchinson (Elk Grove), Patrick Caulfield (Mt. Prospect), Joe Marich (Arlington Hts.), Bruce Weaver (Elk Grove) and Linda Roach (Palatine).

Tickets are $2.50 for the public, $1 for students and staff. A special Dinner Theatre Package is being offered for the April 7 performance. A buffet dinner featuring carved rounds of beef, chicken or ham, salad bar, potato, dessert, and beverage will be served in the Dining Room, Bldg. A, beginning at 6 p.m. followed by the play in the TV Studio at 8 p.m. Cost for the Dinner Theatre Package is $8.50 for the public and $7.50 for Harper students and staff.

Tickets may be purchased in the Student Activities Office, as of March 21.

An uncontested Board election?

by GAIL MILLER

As many important decisions are being made regarding the future of Harper College, it might be time for some of the students to take a look at just who is helping to make those decisions. On April 24 elections will be held for two vacant places on Harper's Board of Trustees.

One seat is that presently held by Vice Chairman Shirley Munson of Palatine, who is running for re-election. The other is a seat in held by Jeanette M. Nicklas of Palatine, who is not running for re-election.

Although three petitions for office have been taken out from the office of Dr. James D. Perry, vice president of administration services, only two have been returned. In addition, to Mrs. Munson's petition, a petition has been filed by Roy Mills of Palatine. Mr. Mills is a former District 311 counselor, who is often on the campus.

If no further petitions are filed the election will be uncontested, but deadline for filing is not until March 25.

The voting polls will be open April 24, from noon until 7 p.m.

Harper's board of trustees consists of seven members plus one student representative. The seven community representatives are elected for three year terms, although this may change in December of 1980 when a Consolidation of Elections Bill will be implemented. The student representative is elected each year. This year's student trustee is sophomore Pete Marabary.

In order to qualify as a member of the board, a candidate must, on the date of his election, be at least 18 years of age and a citizen of the United States. In addition, they must also be a citizen of the territory included in College District 512 for at least one year prior to the election.

Finally, the candidate must not be a member of a campus school board or a school treasurer.

The petitions must be signed by at least 30 voters or 15 percent of the voters of the district whose vote is less. The petitions must be accompanied by an authorized statement of candidates to be filed in the administrative office, third floor of Bldg. A.

Other members of the board include Joan Klusman of Arlington Heights, chairman; Natalie Weber of Roselle, secretary, as well as Jan Bone and George P. Dasher, both of Palatine; and David Tombeck of Barrington.

After a canvass of the election returns are made, the official results will be made public in local newspapers on April 24.

Shirley Munson, vice chairman of the Harper Board of Trustees is up for re-election. With the lack of interest shown to date, the re-election of the Board may be filled by the only two people who turned in petitions. (photo by Ed Martineir)

Student Activities budget committee starts work

by GAIL MILLER

With so many financial problems at Harper and a rapidly declining enrollment as well, the job of deciding how to distribute funds for student activities is not an enviable one but it is an important and necessary one, which requires a great deal of hard work.

intelligence and insight.

The people who do that job make up a special student activities budget committee. The committee is established each spring. The member's job is to decide how to distribute student activity money to the different clubs, athletic teams and other student organizations for the following year.

The committee consists of the president and the treasurer of the student government, the director of student activities and three members selected by the student government from a list of volunteers. The student government treasurer serves as chairman of this committee.

The committee will have its first meeting in one week. They will then spend approximately one month dividing among student activities the amount of money anticipated as income from student activity fees next year. This figure is divided upon by the vice president of student affairs, Dr. Guerin A. Fisher and the student government treasurer.

The expected amount is based upon anticipated enrollment in regular credit classes and the ratio of full time students to part time students. Full time students pay an activity fee of $12.00. Part time students, taking eleven hours or less, pay a $6.00 fee. This fund is completely separate from and not submitted by the educational fund.

Also affecting the division of funds are budget reprisals submitted to the student activities office by the groups requesting money for next year. These reports include the amount of money being requested and a breakdown of how funds are to be used.

Once the budget committee concludes, the formalized budget must be approved by the student senate. Then it goes from the vice president of student affairs, to President McGrath and then to the college board of trustees. This is only the second year the board of trustees approval will be necessary.

This year's budget committee includes student activities director Jeanne Pankam, student government president Alan Berstrom, and treasurer Linda Mueller. In addition, the three volunteers were selected from four candidates at a special student senate meeting. They are John Blum, Steve McClellan and Judy Saunders.

Advise Jeanne Pankam said, "They have their work cut out for them. Prices go up and enrollment goes down. Anything's possible."

Student Trustee elections soon

Petitions are now available for the position of student representative to the Harper Board of Trustees.

The petitions can be picked up in the Student Activities Office, A238 and deadline for returning completed petitions is noon March 27.

Elections will be April 9 and 10 from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the lounge, Bldg. A and from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. in the first floor lobby of Bldg. D.

To qualify, a student must enroll for a minimum of nine credit hours for the 1979-80 school year and must reside within the boundaries of Harper College, District 512.

The Student Trustee is a member of the board of trustees and is allowed to make or second motions, is admitted to all sessions of the board, including executive sessions, and receives all material, confidential and otherwise, that other board members do. His/her vote is an advisory vote which is not counted in the official tallies and is not considered in determining a quorum for action by the board.

The student trustee attends all monthly board meetings, special board meetings, and board committee meetings to which he/she is appointed.

He/she voices their opinion and the opinion of the students in the decision making process of the college which include the future and goals of the college, appointments and resignations of faculty and administrators, budget planning, policy making and faculty negotiations.

The term of office is April 15, 1979-April 14, 1980.

Pete Marabary, the current student trustee, will be available in the Student Senate Office to answer questions. Students may stop by the office, A238 or call ext. 344 for an appointment.

Election procedures and campaigning regulations are available in the Student Activities Office.

FORUM

Editorial

Board positions still available

After all the problems that plagued Harper this school year one would think that many people would want to be involved in the running of the college if they had the chance. Since many members of the community and the student body criticized the administration and the president for the way they handled the dilemmas, they should get involved and try to do a better job themselves.

The elections for two positions on the Harper Board of Trustees will be on April 14, and to date only three petitions have even been taken out. Shirley Munson, vice chairman, is up for re-election, and the other vacant position once held by Jessalyn Nicklas, has been filed for by Mr. Roy Mills of Palatine. The third position has not been, and isn't expected to be, returned.

The petitions were available on February 28 and the last day for filing is March 23. With less than one week left, three petitions is a very poor showing, to say the least.

Harper has gone through teacher lay-offs, a referendum failure, declines in enrollment, budget cuts, second campus problems, and a projected deficit this school year alone. These are probably more problems in one year than the school has gone through since it opened.

To think that people have the chance to step in and help the college with its many financial burdens, and only three people are interested says something about the critics and complainers.

It says that people will make criticisms, but when it comes to getting actively involved they don't want any part of it. If no one takes out petitions the election will go uncontested. This wouldn't be fair to either the Board or the candidates, because it means that the two people who filed petitions will automatically get the positions.

The Board of Trustees is a very important and influential part of Harper and anyone who wants to help the college in its time of need should consider filing a petition by March 23.

For those who say they don't have the time or interest to join the Board, maybe they should think twice before they contemplate criticizing, complaining, or evaluating the school or the people who try to run it.

Film on alcoholism to be shown here

On Wednesday the film "Hollywood and Vine" will be shown continuously in the College Center Lounge. Bride A This film deals with alcoholism and life afterwards of famous people such as Dick Van Dyke, Michael Ryan, Gary Crosby, Hans Anderson and Bill Haver.

"Hollywood and Vine" lays to rest the idea that alcoholics are just two bums. Alcoholism is a democratic illness, it respects neither profession nor reputation. The vast majority (95 percent) of alcoholics are functioning. That means they can be employed, are in school, or are getting through their daily chores.

The film looks at people who are famous - successful stars of stage, screen and television. These people are successful, at least up front, but their personal lives were once a disaster. Their drinking began to consume their very existence and eventually threatened their careers. These talented people speak frankly about what their lives used to be like, what happened, and what it is like now.

The film provides a understanding that alcoholics are sick people, not just people. But above all, it gives hope for recovery and shows that life after drinking can truly be better.

Letters to the Editor

Former staff member upset

I have a few comments I'd like to express concerning your editorial of March 1 which addresses itself to proposed legislation to raise the legal drinking age in Illinois to 21. First, a good portion of your editorial (nearly half) tells your readers of how to 'defeat' or 'stop' the legislation. The only preceding arguments you give prior to this instruction on how to petition a legislative body are weak at best. I'm still wondering the reason for your editorial stance. Will the legislation if passed not only be 'unfair' to the majority who don't abuse the privilege or will it also be unfair to you as well. If that's the case I do not feel the editorial page is a place to air your own feelings. Write a letter to yourself and print it. Secondly, I feel the most assinine argument you give in your 'editorial' is when you say 'Government thought that by making drugs illegal that people would stop using them, but obviously that hasn't stopped it. Raising the drinking age in Illinois probably won't stop the drinking of younger teenagers either. Let's take this bit of profound reasoning or logic a step farther. By your reasoning I suppose you would have murder legislated as well. I mean, what the hell, our government has made murder illegal and hopes people will stop killing each other, but obviously that hasn't stopped it. Our body of state representatives who we put in a position to make laws, do not always make popular laws, but nevertheless we put them in that position. If they pass this kind of legislation, or do not pass it, I won't lose any sleep over it.

I'm 18 and have an increase in the drinking age. My reasons are based on the alarming statistics which center on teenage alcohol abuse. Again I reiterate, I won't lose any sleep pending the outcome of the legislature's vote. I just hate to see imbecile and poorly presented editorials.

Student complains

Dear Editor,

Harper is having to undergo some trying times as any reader of the Harbinger in recent weeks can see. In a more minor side, I would like to register a protest. It is necessary to page in WRCM and their weekly musical sets on the cafeteria during evening dinner hours. I work and normally finish a day and would like to eat dinner in peace and go to class. It is not quite loud enough to listen to, but still irritating. WRCM, not my dinner. Then everyone have to be set to music! Conversation does not really need to beat and silence can be gotten. Could we try it in the cafeteria?

"Focus on Future" program dies

by GAIL MILLER
March has seen a great deal of friends at Harper, including the death of one of its most beneficial programs, Focus on the Future. From on the Future was a program for displaced homemakers. A displaced homemaker is not a dissatisfied housewife. A displaced homemaker is a woman, 35 years or older and living in suburban Cook County, who has been dependent on the income of her husband, but has had that income cut off because of death, divorce, separation, or recent disability. The program was sponsored by CETA, the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act. The goal of the program, which ran on three week cycles, was to help women make the transition from dependence to independence.

Unfortunately, the program was stopped by a budget cut and the way of some new guidelines and restrictions initiated at the end of last December. Mrs. Anne Rodgers, a counselor at Harper's Life/Health Science Division, who directed the program, said the guidelines were probably put into effect because of abuses the government had seen in other CETA programs.

Regardless of the reason behind them, the guidelines have made it impossible for enough women to qualify for a new cycle. So despite the endurance and determined efforts of Mrs. Rodgers and her staff, the program will be shut down by the end of the week.

The new guidelines require that in order to be eligible for the program a woman with a family of four must have a total family income of less than $7500 a year. Although numerous inquiries were made by women who needed the program's help, only four qualified under the new guidelines. A full cycle requires two months.

Ironically, the program, whose staff has been working on a largely volunteer basis since federal aid was cut off at the beginning of the year, had recently been authorized from CETA with enough money for two more cycles. The program also received donations, the major ones from Atlanta and the Jewish Federation. Also, a grant was awarded from Richmond Community College in Decatur, which awarded $15,000 worth of mini-grants to different organizations to promote sex equity in vocational education. The program was begun last May and has aided 185 displaced homemakers prior to the establishment of the new guidelines. The program helped women who are suddenly placed in the position of having to support a family prepare for this responsibility.

The program was set up in the form of a simulated workshop. From 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Mondays involved counseling for personal resources, confidence building, and the emotional aspects of being single, as well as parenting classes such as nurses and teachers talked about such subjects as decision making, time management of time and finances. The afternoons were career oriented.

Counseling by career guidance specialist Peggy Simmons, they were aimed toward helping the women prepare for future employment. Such things as skills assessment, job outlook, and interview preparation were included.

Mrs. Rodgers, herself a former displaced homemaker, said, "These women come to us at a difficult time in their lives. Many haven't worked in years. We help them move from dependency to independence."

The program was highly successful as most of the women involved were not only quickly placed, but are still in their jobs. Placement was directed by Kathy Faxon. Since the program had been in action for several months, staff members began getting calls from customers which had employed program graduates, requesting more women for help.

One of the reasons the program was so successful, was that although all of the separate parts of the program were available elsewhere, the package was unique. Mrs. Rodgers said, "There's nothing else packed to deal with all these needs. The combination we've found has been so successful. It was a transition mechanism. Now there is no bridge."

The women involved praised the program highly. Elizabeth Hudson of Hanover Park said, "I would recommend this program to my friends because it brought out the best in me."

One particular point in the program was that the support they received meant a great deal. Lorena Warner of Shaker said, "This program was helpful to me because it gave me a new outlook on my life, plus a new career. The fact that there were other women in the same situation I was in, reassured me and I gained the confidence I lacked."

Mrs. Rodgers commented on this, "A woman in that situation would feel terrible alone. It's a great support to her to talk to people who understand."

CETA's main purpose is to help the unemployed or underemployed improve their situation so that they can be self-sufficient. This also helps to make them less of a drain on the federal government. But because of the new guidelines the program is no more.

What can be done? Not much more now as the new guidelines have just gone into effect and will probably be difficult to change. Letters to federal representatives will help, but it is a slow process. The time of the program will have an effect on many people. Many women who desperately need help, but cannot meet the economic guidelines will have to look elsewhere for aid. To put it in a nutshell, many women need help.

But they just aren't poor enough. Mrs. Rodgers said that the employees were sorry to see the program cut too. She said, "I think the guidelines are too strict for the northeast suburbs. A family of four cannot realistically afford to live in the northeast suburbs on under $7500."

The reason we stayed with it so long was we believed in it and saw the excellent results of the program. It's very difficult, both personally and professionally, when you have something worthwhile and you have to see it come to an end. We want to give the services and we can't because of the guidelines. There's a limit to the money it cost. There really was no other choice," Mrs. Rodgers said.

Counselors in the "Focus on Future" program. (left to right) Peggy Simmons, Anne Rodgers, and Phyllis Stephens-Hillier, help many women adjust to being independent. However, the program has been handicapped by a budget cut and new guideline restrictions. (photo by Scott Arnesen)

Pauline Buss wants to take action into her own hands

by TERRY MAY

Pauline Ann Bass, assistant professor of English at Harper, is running for Trustee of Arlington Heights. Mrs. Bass says that she is running because "I'm angry."

Bass is angry primarily because "land speculators are getting a better hearing by the board than the citizens" and also because of "board members being ill-prepared in meetings."

Bass attended board meetings before her decision to run and was the founding director of the Central Action Coalition, the Taxpayers Action Group and the Director of the Park Manor Homeowners Association.

The Central Citizens Coalition was formed by a group of members concerned with the "quality of life in Arlington Heights."

Two years ago the Taxpayers Action Group was formed to monitor the way the board spends its money. They were called "board watchers."

Another point Bass would like to see come about is that the board and commission appointments should be made by the nine board members" as opposed to the present of the board. Bass also calls for "more integrity." The present zoning calls for nine story buildings, but future plans are for an eight story building to be erected. Bass feels the developers are now determining the future of Arlington Heights; not the citizens.

Pauline Bass, assistant professor of English at Harper is running for a position on the Board of Trustees in Arlington Heights. Bass would like to see the citizens' action, re-organizing integrity, and a change in board and commission appointments.

Arlington Heights has a large voter turn out with 75% of the population voting. "People have to realize they have a responsibility to not only vote, but to get involved."

Bass is running in tandem with Madelyn Schroeder. Both women are independent candidates. Bass feels running independent is difficult because "you aren't sure of your support."

The Arlington Heights Board does not have a screening process for candidates. Bass would like to see the citizens' action re-organize. The caucus purpose was to screen the candidates and to determine if they were qualified. The caucus was destroyed by "the elites" according to Bass.

By her running, Bass feels the people are getting a choice. There are nine candidates running for four spots. Five of the candidates are running as independents, in the April 16 election.

Many people take advantage of Health Fair

By CINDY CARAVELLO

By looking at the parade of people marching through Harper's Bigg, A lounge last Wednesday, it looked as if someone was giving away something for nothing, and they were.

A health fair, where over 50 health related agencies set up displays was open to students, faculty, staff and the community.

Those taking advantage of the educational experience ranged from grammar school students to senior citizens.

The Palatine Police Dept. displayed one of their breathalizers and a detailed diagram of how it works. "If you drink, don't drive," said Sergeant Sorky, of the Palatine Police Dept. Right alongside the police dept.'s display was the Palatine Fire Dept.'s next arrangement of paramedic equipment and brochures explaining their functions.

"Our goal," said Norm Malcolm of the Palatine Fire Dept., "is to expose people in emergency service in this area." One of the aims was to inform people what to do to help someone in the event of a heart attack.

Also present at the Health Fair was the Heart Association of North Cook County. Over 100 people sat down, filled out a form and then had their blood pressure taken.

It may have seemed odd to witness someone take off his shirt so that his feet could be examined in the lounge, but Dr. Joel Lipkin from the Illinois Podiatry Society said that about 25 concerned people with aching extremities did just that.

"There's no reason why feet have to hurt," said Lipkin who viewed peoples' legs and toes whose ages ranged from 16 to 86 years old.

"I'm just trying to give them an idea of why their feet hurt," Lipkin said.

Alexia Brothers Hospital had a biofeedback machine set up so that people could try and see if they could regulate their own bodies.

A lot of people are curious about their body and what it is doing right now," said Judith Wilts, R.N. from Alexia Brothers, "and biofeedback helps them realize what makes them relax."

At the very back of the lounge there was a display set up by the Central Service of Wheeling Township Government. Their aim is to help out senior citizens with a variety of services which include: driver refresher courses, bus service, a newsletter, discussion groups, counseling service and health screening.

The Arlington Heights Cycling Park District Association sent their representative in. Decked out in his black knit shorts and bright yellow sweatshirt with black stripes, 77-year-old Ray Rutherford looked like he was about to take off on a bicycle, but he didn't because he had just finished riding his bike all the way from Arlington Heights to Harper.

Rutherford, who looks like he has more energy than many of Harper's students has belonged to the bicycling association for 15 years and he claims that practically nothing can stop him.

"I bike everyday," he said, "I have biked 10 to 15 degrees below zero weather."

He stressed the importance of wearing a helmet when biking since it can be dangerous. Rutherford said that he recently went flying off his bike when a cat got tangled in the spokes of his bike while he was riding.

Harry Ralph, an 80-year-old senior citizen took advantage of the Health Fair for the second year in a row. Ralph was picking up literature on diabetes for his wife who is afflicted by the disease and mentioned that the last year's fair proved to be beneficial to one of his acquaintances.

"My friend discovered he had high blood pressure," Ralph said.

Those people who carried out handfuls of free literature and ate salt free sugar cookies by the fat-free ones are hopefully more enlightened about their health and what they can do to help themselves.

Financial aid budget cuts

by JEFF GORDON

(CDNS) The 1979-80 federal education budget includes large cuts in funding for student grants and loans.

But Joe Califano and the Department of Health Education and Welfare feel that the cuts will not lessen the availability of financial aid available to college students.

This year $2.6 billion is allocated for student grants. Next year, if the budget is finalized as is, only $1.7 billion will be available for student grants.

But HEW says there is $700 million left over in its coffers from unused grant money. In addition, HEW feels it will be getting enough money from rejected applications to make up the difference.

A new HEW computer makes the grant approval process more efficient.

This year $720 million was budgeted for direct student loans, an net year only $220 million is budgeted.

HEW expects that $94 million in new reductions will make up the difference. Again, more efficiency will make more money available—officials expect to cut down on the 18 percent default rate on these loans.

Califano, saying that there will be a surplus of doctors by the 1990's, has ordered the elimination of federally-funded programs which encourage college to expand medical school enrollment. He eliminated enrollment based aid to medical schools.

Other budget cuts included the ending of $261 million in health education student aid, the phasing out of $135 million aid to dependents of dead or disabled Social Security recipients, and the reduction of GI benefits from $2.5 billion to $1.9 billion.

Califano said despite the reduced budget for student aid, the Middle Income Student Assistance act will be fully funded. That act raised the family income ceiling for educational grants to $20,000.

HEW expects 78 percent of the 1.5 million newly eligible students to apply for the grants.

The number of eligible students will decrease as inflation puts more families over the $20,000 limit.

The cuts are part of President Jimmy Carter's austerity moves in the budget. Overall, $200 million is cut from the higher education budget for 1979-80.

UPCOMING

Secretary

"The New Secretary," an all-day workshop sponsored by the Harper College Women's Program, will be held on Thursday, March 22, 1979 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Board Room of Building A. Tuition is $12.50 and includes lunch.

Mary Ann McKinn, coordinator of the Executive Secretarial program and Barbara Frazier, instructor in secretarial science, will lead the seminar.

Participants will explore various areas of secretarial concern: the secretary and her company; the secretary and her boss; and the secretary and her future.

To enroll, students may telephone the college Continuing Education Admission Office, ext. 416.

Cooking

A new course, advanced quantity cooking, will be offered for the first time during the 1979 summer term at Harper.

The course, a continuation of basic quantity cooking, may be taken as part of Harper's Food Service career program or to upgrade the skills of persons already on the job.

"This course is designed for students or graduates of college level restaurants, hotel management or home economics courses," said Cliff Weaver, director of Food Services. Students will be placed upon development and strengthening of basic culinary skills, poultry, cold buffet work, product utilization, menu development, in addition to the creation of a wide repertoire of varied and interesting dishes.

The eight-week course will meet Monday through Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. An enrollment is limited; individuals are encouraged to enroll as soon as possible by calling ext. 877.

Casino night

Harper is sponsoring a Casino Night Benefit for Cardinal Palmy at 8:30 p.m. Friday, in the College Center Lounge of Bldg. A.

The evening will begin with an optional dinner and show. Casino gambling consisting of roulette, craps, blackjack, poker, beat the dealer, western poker, chuck a luck and pool will begin at 9 p.m.

Public admission for the dinner, show and gambling is $9.50 and $3.50 for Harper students and staff. Advanced reservations are required for the dinner. Admission for the Casino is $5.00 for the public and $2.50 for students and staff. For further information, students may call the Student Activities office at ext. 241.

Game room

Harper's Game Room, located on the third floor of Bldg. 1, offers pool tables at $1 an hour. Up to four students may play per table at a time.

The Game Room also has chess, checkers and Monopoly games. The Game Room is open Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., and on Friday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Transfer day

About 80 colleges, both state and private will have representatives at Harper from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and from 6 to 8 p.m. Wednesday in the College Center Lounge.

There will also be representatives from the armed forces and non-traditional types of schools.

Public safety

The Harper College Public Safety Department is taking applications for the position of cadet.

Cadets work under the supervision of the Public Safety Officers and perform many duties related to the safety of faculty, staff and students and the protection of buildings and other college property. They perform first aid and vehicle patrols and other Public Safety duties as assigned.

Wheaton Chamber gives concert

The Wheaton Chamber Artists will appear in the final free concert of the spring semester afternoon mini-concert series at 12:15 p.m., Thursday in P208.

The program will consist of works by Mozart, Beethoven, Kodaly, Prokofiev and Mendelssohn.

The Wheaton Chamber Artists are three faculty members from the Wheaton College Conservatory of Music. Traditionally known as a piano trio, the Wheaton Chamber Artists go beyond performing trio only. The variety of repertoire that they offer individually and collectively assures any audience a rich experience. The group consists of William Phemister, piano, Denise Tevo Szepessy, violin and David Szepessy, cello.

Phemister, winner of the 1971 Young Artists Competition of the National Federation of Music Clubs, has received recognition for his poetic artistry on three continents.

While on a precedent-setting State Department concert tour of African countries, the Natal Mercury in Durban wrote that "he is a technically gifted musician, his playing being of exemplary clarity and precision."

A Juilliard alumnus, Phemister studied at the Ecole Normale de Musique in Paris and in 1973 received the Doctor of Musical Arts degree from Peabody Conservatory under Leon Fleisher. His bibliography, The American Piano Concerto, is soon to be published by the College Music Society.

Previously, Phemister received the Young Artist Award at the University of California at Los Angeles, the Young Musicians Foundation Distinguished Award, and a Fulbright Grant to France.

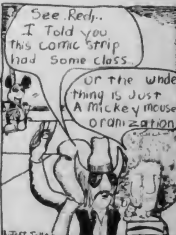

Ms. Szepessy is a 1972 graduate of Indiana University where she was an artist student of Josef Gingold. During the next three years she was a special student of Ivan Galamian in New York at the Mendelssohn School.

While at Indiana University she won the Zaslavsky and the Mark-Weber Awards which are given to outstanding string players. In addition, she was the concertmaster of the Indiana University Philharmonic. While still a student, she was invited to perform with the New York String Orchestra in their premiere series of Carnegie Hall Christmas Concerts.

Szepessy brings to the concert stage a wide background of musical and cultural experience. A long-time student of famed cellist Jeno Starker, Szepessy is a graduate of Indiana University. He spent two seasons with the Pittsburgh Symphony and participated in a three-month State Department tour of Europe and the Middle East. While soloist with the Columbia Artists Chamber Orchestra he toured the United States performing many concertos.

Reif captures national crown

by PAUL PRESSBERG

Mike Reif is a national champion. A sophomore, mowed down five opponents on his way to a national title. Reif encountered his toughest match in the semi-finals, which he won 14-0 over Bill Sennan of Grand Rapids, Michigan. Reif wrestled through the rest of his matches winning either by major decision or pins.

The 147 lb. weight class had five returns from last year and was rated as one of the strongest weight classes in the national tournament. Reif went to nationals as a freshman but didn't win a match. Reif said, "After losing last year, I was really psyched up."

Couch Lovelace said "Mike is the best kid I've coached at Harper, and I knew if he wrestled well, we could tough him."

Reif closed out the year with an impressive record of 36-3 and a national crown in his pocket.

The Harper wrestling team will get a great loss next season in losing 136 lb. Joe Rissa, 136 lb. Tom Smith and 143 lb. Mike Reif. Coach Norm Lovelace felt their presence from their first practice as Sophomores Mike Reif, Joe Rissa and Tom Smith, the backbone of Harper's wrestling team, celebrated with Reif grabbing the national title in the 147 lb. weight class.

Freshmen Lovelace said "all three guys were so serious about wrestling and were a joy to coach."

Rissa, a two time national qualifier, was a 118 lb. 98 a freshman and moved up to 128 lb. this season. The transition didn't seem to hurt Rissa, who went on to win another 15 matches this two years at Harper. Smith chalked up over 35 wins and will be greatly missed.

Mike Reif wound up his two years stay with a national title. Reif is probably the youngest wrestler Lovelace has coached at Harper. In two years Reif has won over 60 matches.

Mike really desires everything he gets, he works as hard," said Lovelace. "I've never had a kid who was so successful as a freshman. I know this year would be the one for Mike."

Reif got off to a little slower start this year compared to his freshman year, but really came alive at the end of the season. Lovelace felt Reif's intensity on the mats was the key to his success. "Mike never let's up," said Lovelace.

These two sophomores have continued for over 140 wins in two seasons for Harper. Coach Lovelace and the rest of the team will surely miss their three super sophers.

Downhill is not the only answer

by NANCY BAKER and JOE KUSK

Let it snow, let it snow, let it snow! That is the alpine theme song. If you're having second thoughts on taking to the slopes, there is an enjoyable alternative. It's called Nordic, ski jumping, ski touring, or the same everyone else knows it by, cross-country skiing. This rapidly growing sport is inexpensive, easy to learn and basically a lot of fun.

Developing the latent water fish? X-country skiing is probably the best thing you can do for your body in these wonderful snowy months.

Dr. Marvin Clev, head of the sports medicine team at the University of Denver tested athletes in all sports for physical conditioning. He concluded, "The cross-country skier is the most perfectly tuned of human machines." Nordic exercises every part of the body, offering complete exercise for the legs, abdomen, midriff, arms, back and shoulders. Depending on how fast one goes, cross-country burns more activity than any other sport. Not to say alpine skiing isn't exercise, but downhill tends to come in spurts, not the constant motion cross-country offers.

To some the slopes mean just terror. In cross-country there is no fear factor. It is always relaxed and at your own pace. In every 100,000 downhill skiers, 30 will be injured. For every 100,000 cross-country skiers, only two will be mildly hurt (wristed ankle, etc.). There are no lifts to take a dive from, no trees or obstacles to become part of, and if the x-country skier runs into here hills than he can handle, a simple map of the bindings and off come the easy to carry skis.

If sports seem to lighten your wallet, x-country is a surprisingly money saving activity. Here is a 1979 comparative list of downhill vs. x-country equipment.

	Downhill x-country*
skis	$100-250 $25-100
poles	8-40 8-10
bindings	40-110 5-15
boots	75-200 20-40
TOTAL	$233-440 $46-172

*There is no lift fee

Often people rent the equipment for fear they won't like skiing enough. There is little risk of not liking a country, for witness the fact that most x-country ski schools offer a refund for the cost of lessons if you don't take a liking to it. Very few downhill lessons make such an offer, if any at all.

Once you've made the decision to buy equipment, buy it from a place with at least three kinds of skis, one should be the so-wax type. The store should also have all the extras to go with the main equipment, such as wax, blow torch to put on the bindings correctly, scrapers, etc. The decision of waxed or non-waxed skis is like choosing between stick shift and automatic transmission. It's a matter of how much time you want to spend on the sport. One also has to choose between wood and synthetic skis, each has its pros and cons. Wood is for the purist skier. They wear better and glide better. But they also gouge on stone and break easier. Synthetic types can be more expensive but they will stay in one piece longer with less attention or care.

To get a proper fit, extend an arm above your head. The ski should reach somewhere between the meeting of your wrist and palm, and the meeting of your palm and fingers. If two lengths seem right, go with the shorter ski. If you're afraid you can't handle the extra weight.

Light bamboo poles are the next step for outfitting yourself for x-country skiing. They should rest on the floor and comfortably rest under the arm. The boots are very important. Do not get leather; they only soak up water and become extra weight in carry. Do not even get leather soled boots. Plastic soles have been proven to be the best bet. You can opt for ankle high or regular shoe cut. Ankle highs are not really much warmer and again are just extra weight.

After you're all set, equipment-wise, how to dress is the most important step. X-country skiers are usually out in the cold longer than downhillers. You want to avoid frostbite, yet not get overheated once you get started. Nordic has five basic things to wear: warm underwear, turtleneck shirt, sweater, and windbreaker. The secret is layering, which permits the skier to take off clothing as he or she heats up. A hat is an essential item as 90% of one's body heat is lost through the head. Wind mittens are also a must.

Ski properly, don't "tag" blingling in when someone takes downhill skis, attaches left/cor cable bindings and uses hiking boots. To some this is a poor equivalent of cross-country skiing. One is now ready to enjoy go work, while very much to the American tradition, a remnant of Paul Hindemith in the extended use of counter-thematic treatment in a thorough contrapuntal manner. Also to be performed is "Suite Française", an orchestral work for band by Darius Milhaud, based on folk tunes from the various French provinces. The final selection of the Wind Ensemble is "Jubilant" by Robert J. Zacher.

The Jazz Band, directed by Roy Vonnack, will feature "Holly Vonnack" by Greg Tynes. This is the first performance of this work commissioned by the Harper Jazz Band. Other selections include "Have Strains Ahead" and "Have Nice Day" from the Count Basie Library, "Sunny Over" arranged by Mundell, "Sunny" arranged by Roy Vonnack, and "Chantrelle" as arranged by Jay Chittaway.

Here are some places to go skiing: Morrison Hills State Park (near McHenry); eleven miles of bike trails used for cross-country skiing. Blackwell Park on Butterfield Road - west, $2 to $6 for non-DaVale residents. Cabotree Nature Center in Barrington.

Harper Wind Ensemble plays here

The Harper College Wind Ensemble and Jazz Band will present a concert Tuesday, at 8 p.m. in the Calder Center Lounge. The program is open to the public free of charge.

The Wind Ensemble, directed by Dr. Robert Tillison, will feature Philip Browne's "Suite No. 7" which was selected by the College Band Directors National Association as the winner of the 1978 Max Winkler Award. This Lobbyist requests support for the drinking age bill

Dear Editor,

In March 26 I will be going down to Springfield to testify before the Senate Executive Committee against the raising of the legal drinking age. I will be representing the following: Northern Illinois University, Kishwaukee College and Harper College.

On March 27 the Senate Executive Committee will hold the actual public hearings in room 222 at 3 p.m. in the Capital Building.

There will be two bills introduced to the effect of the drinking age. The first bill sponsored by Sen. Cingra, Senate Bill 2. The second bill is sponsored by Sen. Regner, Senate Bill 83.

Cingra's bill, SB-2, would have the effect of raising the drinking age back to 21 as it was prior to 1973. This would include purchase and consumption back to 21.

Regner's bill, SB-83, would have the effect of raising the drinking age back to 21 for purchase only, i.e., liquor stores. I would provide, however, that consumption still would remain the same in controlled areas.

As a result of passage of HB-1 from the Executive Committee of the House, on March 9, it is inevitable that the state will take some action.

With all of this information now presented before you, I hope that there will be some support from the schools, which will help me in Springfield. I suggest that letters be written to your state senators in favor of Sen. Regner's SB-83, and the letters should voice opposition to Sen. Cingra's SB-2. These letters could be dropped off at the Student Senate Office and I will then forward all letters.

These letters will help when I testify before the Senate, as a proponent of Regner's bill, and an opponent of Cingra's bill.

We must keep in mind even after the committee hears these bills, there will be debate on the House and Senate floors where these letters still could be presented.

Sincerely,

Clubs raise money for charity

A dance-a-thon, a skate-a-thon and a Casino Night have all been planned this school year for various Harper clubs and organizations to raise funds for charity.

We think it is truly commendable for these clubs to raise contributions for needy organizations instead of for their own benefit.

Knowing the financial straits Harper is in, it's great that we can think about other people's needs at the same time we are thinking about our own.

Circle K and Catholic Campus Ministry (CCM) started off the year with a dance-a-thon for Muscular Dystrophy. They had projected that 50 dancers would come, but out of the 50 that signed up, only 25 showed up to dance. They raised approximately $1700 which was more than half of their original goal. The dance-a-thon was deemed successful and they hope for an even bigger crowd next year.

Circle K also tried a skate-a-thon at the Fireside roller-arena in Schaumburg, but this event wasn't as effective. On the day before the skate-a-thon only four people had signed up, so it was canceled. The contributions from this were to go to Cerebral Palsy. Since the skaters had two to three weeks to sign up, and almost no one made the effort, the skate-a-thon had to be called off.

The Casino Night planned by Program Board was the biggest effort made by Harper to make a contribution to a charity. The contributions went to Cerebral Palsy. Casino Night enlisted the help of over 50 students and projected a crowd of two to three-hundred people. Although they had no specific goal in mind, they expected to make between $200 and $1000 for charity. In the past, a few clubs and organizations have raised money for charities, such as the Clearbrook Center in Rolling Meadows. However, Casino Night was the biggest event so far to raise money. Program Board started working on the preparations for Casino Night in December and many hours were put in by all involved.

These clubs and organizations mentioned above should be admired for giving up their time and efforts to help people who really need them.

With Harper's clubs and organizations totaling over 30 in all, if each club did one event for charity, it would be a great accomplishment. Maybe that would be something to think about at the next club meeting?

Dear Editor,

This is in response to the letter from Dick Pickard printed in the March 18th issue of the Harbinger. He indicates that he is a student of Harper College, and in the letter, he had some complaints about WHCM Radio. Mr. Pickard said that WHCM in the cafeteria "is not quite loud enough to listen to, but still irritating," during the "lunch hours."

The volume levels of WHCM have been determined for the benefit of the students. In hours when student traffic is heavy, such as at the noon hour, the volume in the cafeteria and other locations on campus is raised substantially. However, at times when there are fewer students, the volume is set at a much lower level. At the time Mr. Pickard is taking his dinner the level in the cafeteria is the lowest it is all day. Also, during the hours of 4 p.m. and 6 p.m., WHCM has a format of Easy Listening music which we feel is much less "irritating."

Mr. Pickard seems to be a visitor, as we receive few complaints concerning the volume level of WHCM. I suggest that if he has any further questions that he stop by the WHCM office, room A311, between the hours of 4 a.m. and 6 p.m. and I will show him how the volume levels are determined. If Mr. Pickard would not like to hear WHCM at all, after 7 p.m. WHCM shuts off in the cafeteria.

Sincerely yours,
John H. Blum

Handicapped students at Harper

Thirty-six million disabled persons exist in America today. It has been estimated that one out of every ten persons has some disability that prevents them from using environments designed for the physically fit.

Many handicapped students are presently enrolled at Harper College. During the 1978-79 school year, some of the students have been meeting to discuss their progress in college and their concerns. This winter, inclement weather and snow have been of concern to all, but these conditions were difficult for Harper's physically handicapped.

During their last meeting, these students were eager to point out that many able-bodied persons were most helpful in offering assistance to them during the snow. Some students even stated that their attendance would not have been possible without this kind of help. And for this Harper students and staff are to be commended!

However, the abuse of the medical parking facilities by the able-bodied is of much concern to the handicapped students and to those persons working with them. These spaces are allocated for persons who are permanently or temporarily disabled and are greatly needed to allow handicapped persons to take classes at Harper. A brief stop in the lot may seem trivial to persons who are able-bodied, but that 15-minute same time may prevent a handicapped person from getting to class. Requests students to stay out of the medical parking areas if they do not have a sticker.

Harper namesake an innovator

by JOAN PETERSON

Twenty thousand people attend a large group of buildings known as William Rainey Harper College. However, very few know very much about its namesake, William Rainey Harper.

Harper was born in 1856 at New Concord, Ohio. At the age of 18 he had already earned a Ph.D. at Yale University. He later taught Semitic languages there.

A teacher, scholar, writer and administrator, Harper was chosen by John D. Rockefeller, millionaire oil tycoon, to become the first president of the University of Chicago in 1890. Rockefeller, in 1903 then, a philanthropist, had donated $20 million to the college.

As president of the college, Harper contributed much to the schools' success. He picked only great professors and enhanced them with his strong belief in academic freedom. During his 15 years as president he became a leader in the movement to reform higher education. He introduced the quarter system, the university press and an extension division.

In 1896 the university was divided into two sections. One was an academic college for freshmen and sophomores and the other was the university college for juniors and seniors. Because of this, Harper has been known as the father of the two-year college.

Before the junior college became well established, part-time students were not very desirous to colleges and universities. Admission to a university for these students was considered a privilege. This privilege would be ended if the school felt it was not in the best use. The age group of these students tended to be from 22 to 25 years old.

Harper had many views and suggestions about higher education. In 1905 he wrote a book entitled "The Trend in Higher Education." In this book he covered many issues dealing with the problems of colleges and universities.

One problem that is still a big issue today is teachers being under paid. Harper writes that in Chicago teacher's salaries ranged from $800 to $3,000 a year for high school teachers and from $600 to $825 for the lower grades. Women were almost always much less than men. Harper felt that the teachers' pay was "grossly insufficient and inadequate." He considered this to be "regrettable due to this great body of faithful public servants."

Among other things, Harper had much to say about college salaries, student luxury, small colleges, education and college course length.

Though colleges and universities are going through a lot of change now, it is nothing to compare with the many changes among colleges in the early 1900's. Latin was slowly being eliminated. Graduation was becoming more accepted. And, the two-year college was coming into view.

Even though Harper died in 1905 his work in education is still visible today. His name has become a household word among Harper College students and it will live on for as long as the college stays alive, and junior colleges are in existence.

Committee formed to study funding

A solution to the financial problems plaguing a majority of state community colleges was initiated last month by the Illinois Board of Higher Education with the IBHE appointment of twelve citizens to a committee to study community college financing.

The committee member, Jessilyn Nicklas, Harper College Board of Trustees member, reports that the committee will review the present funding formula, identifying its strengths and weaknesses.

"The original funding formula, established in 1965, was built on enrollment and its constant rise. Now that enrollment has stabilized the enrollment driven formula no longer works," commented Nicklas, who was a founder of the Illinois Community College Trustees Association.

The formula penalizes colleges that keep program costs down, in addition to causing a major cash flow problem. Nicklas continued, "Local colleges are finding it increasingly difficult to plan and adhere to their budgets."

As a Harper trustee, Nicklas is particularly interested in rectifying the state formula and ultimately Harper's financial problem. A referendum to raise local taxes was defeated last September.

In addition to her grass roots knowledge of the establishment of the community college system, Nicklas brings a solid financial background to the committee's studies. A degree and employment in business coupled with her work on the Illinois Community College Board finance committee and her role as liaison from the Illinois Community College Trustee Association to the IBHE will enable Nicklas to analyze the state formula from a broad perspective.

The committee will meet monthly through the summer. Any recommendations for formula changes will be made by mid-summer so that changes can be incorporated in the fall budget process and thus be operable for fiscal year 1980.

Joggers give public run around

Just when the weather is really starting to shape up, something would have to come along and ruin everything. Hopefully we won't have to keep our fingers crossed much longer to wait away the snow and our first blizzard probably won't begin for at least another week.

Our main concern right now is the joggers who clog city streets and highways at all times of the day. Our sidewalks and private lawns have been invaded by this new species of man.

Joggers have to be in a class of their own. It's true that they are quite mental human beings while sitting at home watching television, but the minute they put on a pair of mud-caked gym shoes and a lacy gray sweat suit, they suddenly become transformed into speed-acting maniacs who couldn't care how they move down their next door neighbor while tearing through the street.

These jogging freaks have no respect whatsoever for incoming traffic. They must have a sense of

Generally Speaking

by CINDY CARAVELLO

power when running along at 15 miles per hour—and if like human people. How many times have you had to bring your car to a screeching halt just because some incoherent jogger has decided that you're in his way?

It may seem kind of weird, but they also enjoy inflicting pain upon themselves. You find you never notice that the more they're hurting, the more they'll run. Perhaps their goal in life is to drop dead at a heart attack.

You may not even enjoy walking, but they'll try to convince you to go running with them anyway. "Hey, want to go jogging with me? It's beautiful outside."

"I liked it's 1 on in the morning. Go back to bed!" They lose all sense of reality, everything revolves around running. They are obsessed with their feet and legs.

"Gee, don't my legs have nice big muscles? I'm up to 30 miles a day before breakfast."

These people are really no fun to be with. Everywhere you go, with them, they feel obligated to run.

"Cross Grandma, I'll race you to the hospital."

Trying to talk sense into a jogger is almost an impossibility. They just refuse to listen to reason.

"Get back into the house this instant. You're not going to run with your head full of mud. Finish washing your hair first!"

Hopefully the joggers will get over this obsession for running smack, but until then, let's try to be careful and not run them over with our cars or bicycles. And joggers out there, if you're listening, try not to run as aver with your overdeveloped calves as you plow through public parks.

If you don't know whether or not you're one of these hyperactive people, just ask yourself as you're reading this paper, "Am I standing still, or is the paper shaking because I'm running in class?"

Absentee ballots available

Two positions on the Harper College Board of Trustees will be filled on April 4 when district voters cast their ballots between 12 noon and 7 p.m. Qualified voters who will be set at Cook County on election day may now apply for absentee ballots for the Harper election.

A qualified voter must be a citizen of the United States, 18 years of age, have resided in the state and college district for 30 days immediately preceding the election date, and be registered to vote in general elections from a residence located in the college district.

To request an application for an absentee ballot for the Harper election, voters may call the Harper College Administrative Affairs office, ext. 380 during regular office hours. The office is open from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Completed applications must arrive at the office no later than Monday, April 9. Application may be made in person in Building A, Room 220.

Further information on the election of Harper College Trustees may be obtained by telephoning the Administrative Affairs office number listed above.

Draft hearings begin

by JULIAN WEISS

WASHINGTON, D.C. — On Feb. 9, Sen. John Stennis (D-Ms.) rose in the U.S. Senate to call for a "fair and equitable" military draft. Chairman of the powerful Senate Armed Forces Committee, Stennis complained the volunteer recruitment system — in effect since the Selective Service structure was disbanded in 1972 — wasn't working. "We're simply not getting the manpower."

Now, more than a month later, hearings on the new draft, which would affect 11 million college students as well as the other 36 million Americans between the ages of 16-26, have begun before the House Armed Services Committee. Though there are now several bills that would revivify the draft, most would offer some variations on the draft ended seven years ago.

But a staffer with the House committee told CTS that "enough people are thinking about a draft right now" to make it a reality in the near future. Passage this year seems slight, since Stennis' Senate Armed Services Committee already has a heavy workload this session, and is not expected to vote it onto the Senate floor.

If some see a new draft as an inevitability, no one's willing to predict just what form conscription would take. Secretary of Defense Harold Brown, for one, wants women participating in the draft. On Jan. 28 he told the House committee that "registration should include women if it takes place." Stennis, however, disagrees: "I don't believe (women) have the physical capacity for rugged kinds of duty, such as driving a tank over a terrain."

Yet another version of the draft now seeming to gain support is a universal service plan, in which all people perform some kind of "national service."

The idea was first proposed in 1906 by Prof. William James of Stanford. He called the plan "the moral equivalent of war." Different versions of the plan (and uses of the phrase) have been floating around since. The last such bill to come to Congress was in 1970. Now, talk is that a universal service plan could be adopted and in effect before the fall, 1980, semester gets under way.

Jacqueline G. Wester, president of Hunter College in New York, is pushing the universal service idea along with former Byrns Manor president Harris Wolford. They are for voluntary participation in projects like tutoring, social work, hospital aid, urban development, and other, essentially non-military tasks. Wester, who helped form the Committee for the Study of National Service in Washington, D.C. in February, says mandatory registration would probably be a part of the plan. Yet it would, Wester maintains, give men and women an alternative to military service should the draft be reinstated.

The idea has been formalized in a bill, introduced in February by Rep. Paul McCloskey (R-Cal.). His "Youth Service" plan would have all 17-year-olds of both genders registering. The registrant could choose between some non-military service and becoming eligible for a military lottery. The "service" of either choice could last one year.

Still another version of the same idea would give 18-year-olds four choices. They can put off two years of military service in return for 36 months of education benefits or training assistance. They could also sign on for six months of active duty, followed by another five and a half years in the reserves. The other alternative mimic the choices open under McCloskey's plan.

President Carter, of course, has called for some kind of mandatory registration for 18-to-36 year olds. The registration would necessarily be the same thing as automatic military service, but in all probability the registrant would take tests and be classified according to availability in case of emergency.

Recital

An organ and harpsichord recital, jointly sponsored by the Harper Music Department and St. Michael's Episcopal Church, will be performed by Gary Zwickey, faculty member of Eastern Illinois University, at St. Michael's Episcopal Church in Barrington at 8 p.m. tomorrow.

Zwickey has selected the music of Couperin, Sweelack, Kuhnau, Albeniz and Bach to perform on the unusually fine instruments owned by St. Michael's Church. Jerry Davison, assistant professor of music at Harper and Minister of Music at St. Michael's, has arranged for this recital to take advantage of the Bosch tracker action organ and Halbardier harpsichord at St. Michael's. The church is located on the southeast corner of DuSable Ave. and Illinois in Barrington.

TV club

Harper's television Production Club has begun work on an upcoming presentation of two new students coming to Harper for the first time. Needed are interested students for script writing, camera work, and most important, acting. Interested students should contact Pat Ptasinski in the TV studio, located in F110.

Workshop

"I've Got to Get Organized!" an all-day workshop on house, time and money management, will be offered by the Harper College Women's Program on April 2 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Board Room of Bldg. A. Tuition is $12.50, and includes lunch.

Rena Trevor, coordinator of the Women's Program, and Audrey Isbely, associate counselor, both of Harper College, and Ann Howell, former editor of Money Management Institute, Household Finance, Chicago, will lead the workshop.

To enroll, telephone the college Continuing Education Admissions Office at ext. 610.

Jobs

The Counseling Department is hiring students to assist counselors in coordinating summer orientation sessions.

These orientation sessions are for new students who will be attending Harper for the first time this fall. Those who are hired will be involved in a variety of orientation duties.

These summer jobs will begin in the beginning of June and end in the middle of August. Hours will be from 8 a.m. to approximately 3 p.m. Salary is $2.00 per hour or your current salary if you are presently employed as a student aid. Students who are planning on going into any career which involves dealing with people will find the experience of this job to be very beneficial.

Students interested in applying for one of these positions may pick up an application in the Counseling Center, A207 or contact Bruce Boller in D115.

Gary Burton of the Gary Burton Quartet will perform at Harper Friday.

Quartet coming

The Gary Burton Quartet will perform jazz and rock at Harper at 8 p.m. Friday in the College Center Lounge of Bldg. A.

Burton, who was named "The Number One Vibraphonist" for his eighth straight year by "Down Beat" magazine, formed the group in 1967. The quartet was one of the first groups to combine the new, more sophisticated forms of rock music with the improvisational intricacies of jazz.

In addition to Burton, the quartet includes Tiger Okami on trumpet, Steve Swallow on bass and Bob Moses on drums.

Admission is $2.50 for public admission and $1.20 for Harper students with an activity card. For additional information students may call ext. 340.

Brooks' poetry touches hearts

by CINDY CARAVELLO

"I adore you," one woman said to black poet, Gwendolyn Brooks after Miss Brooks had finished her presentation of poems in Harper's Big A lounge.

The evening began with flames flickering in the lounge's fireplace as Miss Brooks, Pulitzer prize winner in 1950 and named poet laureate of Illinois in 1968, stood before her captivated audience. Reciting several poems that she has written over the years, Miss Brooks touched the hearts of many in the audience as they smiled, laughed and clapped after hearing a verse that had meaning.

Wearing a cranberry red dress with an olive green bandana on her head, Miss Brooks, 62, from Chicago, reached out to her audience and in a deep resonating voice said, "I want to write directly and specifically to blacks."

Miss Brooks' poetry encompasses no single area or subject, but taken into account many different areas.

"Yesterday's garbage ripening in the hall," recited Miss Brooks from her poem, "Kilchenette Building," which depicts the conditions of many of her habitations in earlier days.

Her readings ranged from recitals on cows in a sad poem on abortion.

In a poem about loneliness, Miss Brooks read, "I like aloneness but I don't like loneliness. Aloneness is delicious."

Prior to her appearance to the general public, Miss Brooks spoke in Harper's classrooms to faculty members and students who were eager to ask for her secret to poetry writing.

"I filled many a composition notebook about nature and soldiers," she said to the class of interested listeners.

Miss Brooks then went on to quote Leo Tolstoy to show the audience what she looks for in a poem. "Make it strange, make it strange," she said.

"I like daring," emphasized Miss Brooks. "Poets can dare to be themselves."

What does Miss Brooks use for her inspiration?

"I write about what happens to me in my life. I feel suitable for poetry," she said. "I find a lot of inspiration on transportation."

But does poetry have to rhyme they asked the experienced poet. "I feel," sighed Miss Brooks, "that some of the most beautiful poetry has been rhymed. I urge everyone not to feel that you have got to rhyme."

If a poet composes, will a reader misconstrue their words?

"They're bound to get something out of the poem that I did not put in there," said Miss Brooks. "I have something to say and once it's out in the world, it's subject to many interpretations."

Miss Brooks used her poem, "We Heal Ourselves" as an example of a mis-understanding. Her poem was banned in Nebraska because of the line "We just jump."

Readers thought "jump" was being used in a sexual sense.

Miss Brooks, a woman with an obvious sense of humor, looked up at the audience and said that even though she had not intended the word "jump" to be interpreted in a sexual sense, it was a good idea.

"I don't object to your causing the audience to break out in laughter."

Is college hazardous?

Attending college may be hazardous to your health.

Like a sniper shooting randomly into a crowd, suicide kills thousands of college students every year.

According to Mary Miller, Ph.D., a consultant in counseling based in San Diego, suicide was the second leading cause of death on American campuses in 1978. Only accidents were responsible for more collegiate deaths and many accidents are actually diagnosed suicides. Other suicides are purportedly certified by the authorities as accidents to protect survivors from stigma and/or to increase the amount of insurance benefits payable.

The real tragedy of collegiate suicides is that the situation appears to be growing worse. For example, in 1963 the suicide rate for people aged 15 through 24 was 5.6 per 100,000. By 1965 the rate had risen to 8.9 per 100,000 and by 1975 it had leaped all the way to 18.3 per 100,000.

"With the suicide rate among young people almost tripling in 20 years, it appears that a real epidemic of self-destructive behavior is now evident in the United States," Dr. Miller recently observed.

The problem of suicide on campuses has become so widespread that people who attend college have at least a 10 percent greater chance of dying by suicide than do young people in the same age group who don't attend college.

What can someone do to help? Learn the warning signs of suicide and be persistent in obtaining professional assistance for a friend when you spot the clues in his or her life.

One of the strongest clues is a previous attempted suicide, especially if the attempt was serious enough to have caused death.

Related behavioral clues are the typical depressive symptoms such as loss of the ability to sleep, concentration, energy, drive, appetite, and zest for life.

Sometimes college students in a precarious state will give away a valued possession, such as a stereo set or a pair of expensive skis, and say, "Take this. I won't be needing it anymore."

Situational clues might include the sudden ending of a relationship with a spouse or lover, a drastic drop in grades, being fired from a job which the student needs in order to remain in school, or loss of other financial assistance.

When several of these danger signals are apparent, Dr. Miller urges friends of the troubled student to contact the student health center or counseling service, a crisis center, or a community mental health center as quickly as possible.

He emphasizes that the longer a person hesitates to seek help for a potentially suicidal friend, the less likelihood there is that they'll ever have a second chance to be helpful.

Harper B-ball finishes at 13-17

by JOE KUSEK

The Harper basketball team was a puzzle to many of its fans, against teams like powerhouse DuPage and Joliet, the Hawks played them even or better (losing to DuPage twice by a total of five points and losing Joliet) but right when people thought the Hawks had it together they would try and suble a team with a worse record in ability, to give the Hawks a 13-17 record overall and 5-6 for a 10th place finish in the ever-stronger NHC conference.

"I thought with the material we had we would have a better win-loss record in the beginning of the year," said coach Roger Bechtold, "but injuries hurt us, and we couldn't put together a full 40 minutes of basketball."

Injuries were probably the biggest factor for Harper as they won their first eight out of eleven games, but the center Ron Waring sustained an ankle injury and sharp-shooting guard Jeff Martinko broke his finger, then Brian Wachin, Bob Dorey and Craig Rawlins all missed several games due to injuries. (The Hawks faced DuPage with only seven men, losing 57-66.)

"We are almost as good as any JcC teams in the state, and with the new facility next year it should come some of the needed distance to catch up," Bechtold said.

The Hawk's steady Rock of Gibraltar was Brad Sinclair who could always be counted on for scoring in double figures. Sinclair, a unanimous pick for first team all-conference, led the team in scoring, being a shade under twenty points a game with a 19.4 sixth best in the conference.

Others hitting for double figures were Martinko (third team all-conference) who averaged 13.3 and was one of the Hawk's top scorers the last few games and Rawlins (second team all-conference) who had a 14.3 average.

Frontman guard Craig Chupik set a new season record for assists in dealing out 77 for an average of 3.2 a game.

Harper had three players hitting over 30 percent of their shots with Martinko leading the way at 33 percent, Sinclair 33 per cent and Rawlins at an even 30 per cent. John Moran led all the Hawks in free throw percentage, nailing 83 per cent from the line.

Harper loses its inside strength next year with the loss of Sinclair and Waring, but will have an experienced squad overall.

"We'll be in good shape next year, but right now the difference between us and them is the quickness of the guards, but we should be all right on this as a good high school area, but I'd like to have a quick point guard," said Bechtold.

Slick passing guard Brian Wachin will be one of the returnees to Harper's basketball team next season to give the team a solid base for next year. (photo by Dean Rutz)

Tennis ready to capture 2nd title

by RORY KORTAS

Now that spring is here, that familiar phrase "tennis anyone?" will be heard more often around campus. It is also that time of year for Harper's men's tennis team to capture the state title again.

Coach Roy Kearns is pleased with this year's team. "More depth is present this year," said Kearns. "We are very fortunate to have two state champions back on the team," referring to Nick Kokai and Mike Rosenberg who captured the state crown last year.

With the addition of Mike Niemce from Poland the top three spots are well seen as Naimie's European and international experience will definitely show throughout the season.

Holding the next steps down the ladder are: Bob Blum, Mike Fraumeni, Gary Kortas, Gary Stern, and Mark Schneider.

The team begins its journey for the state title against Wright at home Tuesday, then they play Thornton on Thursday and head for the Springfield Invitational Friday and Saturday.

The team's toughest matches will come against DuPage and Joliet. If the Hawks can successfully blow these two teams away it will strengthen the chances of repeating last year's state title.

Important notices:

There will be a very important women's inter-collegiate volleyball meeting April 4, at 4 p.m. in Big U.

Coach Bony is looking for an exciting season for the fall of '79 with use of the new facilities. If you cannot make it contact Mrs. Bony at ext. 406.

Here's your chance to make a big hit. Women's softball at Harper still has openings for this year's Practice today at 4:30 p.m. on campus at Big U or try to contact coach Diane Everson Ext. 406.

"I heard about your jump... You know everything but the result."

Title IX gets test

Several university administrators recently traveled to Washington D.C. to discuss the effects of Title IX regulations in athletic programs with Department of Health Education and Welfare officials.

The Administrators returned home discouraged. They had hoped to convince HEW to exclude football and other revenue producing programs from Title IX regulations. They failed to budge the HEW attitudes towards college sports.

Under the recently clarified federal law, universities would have to spend the same on women athletes as they spend on male athletes.

Since universities spend an enormous amount of money per capita on male athletics and considerably less on female athletes, the cost of equalization will be high.

The college administrators had hoped to have revenue producing sports eliminated from the per capita spending formula, arguing that since those sports make money, athletes in those sports should naturally receive more money than athletes in sports that lose money.

HEW officials have refused to buy that argument. Fainting football players or basketball players from the per capita spending formula would have greatly reduced the amount of money universities would have had to spend on female athletes.

For example, a female volleyball player, in a sport that loses money, would have to get the same amount of money as a male wrestler, who is also in a sport that loses money.

But under the current HEW standards, women athletes will have to get the same consideration as football players, who are in a sport that generally produces revenue.

As a result, some officials have predicted that all male sports except football or basketball will be eliminated in order to fund women's sports.

At most universities, either the college football or basketball programs support all other sports with its revenue. Virtually all women's sports lose money, yet under the Title IX guidelines, they would be entitled to the same benefits as athletes in the revenue producing sports.

After the recent meeting with HEW officials, one college administrator said, "I think that people from HEW are listening to some of the problems connected to the implementation of the guidelines as they now exist."

"I don't think there is any sympathy for the outright exemption of football from the guidelines. HEW officials are pretty far down the road with their plans and are unlikely to chuck them entirely. But they are willing to listen to other points of view about the problem," the administrator said.

Universities that defy the federal government's Title IX law could lose all federal monetary support, a move that seldom actually happens.

Many file student trustee petitions

by CINDY CARAVELLO

Five Harper College students have petitioned for the position as student representative to the Harper Board of Trustees.

The elected student trustee attends all sessions of the board where he or she casts an advisory vote, which is not counted in the official tallies and is not considered in determining a quorum for action by the board.

Students who have issued their declaration of candidacy are Edward M. Mosnier, Mosnier is studying Legal Technology.

"I would like to try and discharge some of the political thoughts of the trustees. I'm qualified to hold the position from my activities with the American Civil Liberties Union, Illinois Paralegal Association and the Cook County Legal Assistance Foundation Inc. where I draft all policy and help in decision making."

Mark J. Commey, Commey is studying Business.

"As the philosophy of Harper College is to involve the entire community in the workings of the college, I strongly believe that the students should be involved at this college. Having the student trustee is the best way for me to become deeply involved in the workings of Harper. I believe I can represent the students on the board of trustees, because my frequent attendance to board meetings gives me a better understanding of the problems of this college."

Glen Weber, Weber is enrolled in the Liberal Arts program.

"I would like the experience of talking with people, meeting new people, and being an important part in various decisions that will affect the school. I believe my strong qualification is a sincere desire to represent the students of Harper College."

Linda Mueller, Miss Mueller is also enrolled in the Liberal Arts program. "As a current student trustee, a member of several committees on campus, and as an interested student, I would like to declare my candidacy for the position of student representative to the Harper College Board of Trustees."

"In the year that I have attended Harper, I have come to know and love the school. I feel as though the experience I have with the working of the campus can be contributed best as a member of the board. I have learned the problems Harper has and the advantages it has to offer to its community."

"I have been an active member of numerous committees on campus. I have dealt with the budget, budget-cutting procedures and am currently chairing the student activities budget committee through which I will learn the actual budget making process."

"I have through committees and senate, represented the students to the best of my ability. I would like the chance to continue my involvement in the position of student trustee."

"I have also been involved with clubs and organizations on campus. This has given me the opportunity to deal with different cross sections of students, and to learn of their problems and concerns."

In addition to assigned or elected work, I have also voluntarily attended every board meeting, regular and special sessions, during the school year, with the exception of one meeting and executive session. This has given me the ability to answer questions from students' company. I have also been able to transfer the information I have received from these meetings to my work on campus."

"I feel my experience and personal involvement with the college can benefit the students here on campus greatly. Through student senate, I have worked with both administration and students. I hope to further this endeavor in the position of trustee, where I feel I can be of greatest assistance to the college and its students."

Miss Mueller is also on various budget review committees, institutional committees, and she is a member of the Astronomy Club and Catholic Campus Ministry.

Bruce J. Zanca, Zanca is studying Business Administration.

"I contend that it is essential to maintain a line of communication between the college's student population and the college's board of trustees. Without that 'communication line' it could be difficult for the trustees to respond to the students' wishes along with their social and educational needs."

"I feel, I can be that 'communication line'. My experiences in high school government as to local politics have given me the knowledge to understand and represent students' wishes, needs and problems."

"None of my qualifications and related experiences are Harper College Speech Team, Forest View High School class president, and involvement in local politics in Elk Grove Township School Dist. 39 School Board elections, Des Plaines City Council elections, State and Federal Legislative elections, member of Elk Grove Township teen age representatives."

Zanca also works for Jewel Food store and is "interested in his fellow students."

It is stated in the description of the role of student trustees that the trustee elected would be "responsible for the governance and for serving the needs of the institution, particularly those of the students."

Sophomore Pete Marikahay during his term of Student Trustee this year, has tried to represent the students during Harper College Board meetings and participate in Student Senate.

By attending board meetings, the student trustee provides input into the decision making process of the college. These decisions include the future and goals of the college, appointments, and resignations of faculty and administrators, budget planning, policy making, and faculty negotiations.

Any student who has petitioned for candidacy as student trustee must be enrolled for a minimum of nine credit hours for the 1979-80 school year and must reside within the boundaries of Harper College, District 312.

The term of office is from April 15, 1979, April 14, 1981.

Harper College is bound by law to have one non-voting member on the board of trustees that is a student enrolled at the college under the jurisdiction of the Board.

This law, which became effective on Oct. 1, 1975, was signed by former Governor Dan Walker and provided that all boards governing higher education including two-year community colleges and four-year institutions must have a non-voting representative on the Board.

Elections will be held April 9 and 10 from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the lounge, Bldg. A and from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. in the first floor lobby of Bldg. D.

Toy causes student hassle

by DEBBIE TESCHKE

A child's toy caused havoc on campus recently and resulted in a Harper student being called before the Student Conduct Committee.

William Durkin, 19, of Palatine, went before the committee last Monday after being charged with disorderly conduct for carrying and shooting a cap gun.

Durkin said he had used the gun for a speech for a class and had forgotten to leave it at home.

On March 22 he took it out of his coat pocket and fired a shot into the air. A friend grabbed the gun and ran into Bldg. A and started playfully shooting at people, he said.

Durkin said he took the gun from his friend and started walking to the parking lot.

Palatine police said they received a call about a "man with a gun" from the college at approximately 1:40 p.m.

Durkin said the police arrived on the scene after he had gotten into his car. They asked him to step out of his car and the frisked him and removed the gun from his pocket, he said.

No arrest was made because no one wanted to prosecute, police said. The matter was then turned over to the Public Safety Department.

Kevin King, chief of Public Safety, was unavailable for comment.

Fred Valerri, head of the Student Conduct Committee, said he was not at liberty to discuss the matter.

Garvin A. Fischer, vice-president of student affairs, said he had received the report from the committee but would not talk about its results.

"Under the rules of the Student Conduct Committee, the meetings are closed unless open meetings are requested by either party and the request is approved," he said.

Ray Rayner, "Cherissan", and his buddies stopped at Harper on their way back home from Florida. "Cherissan" was quoted as saying he is now ready to go back to work.

Students no longer apathetic, trustee race will be tight

The petitions for candidacy for student representative to the Harper Board of Trustees are in. Five people have petitioned for the job.

It's relieving that so many people want to take an active part in their school. Just when so many people were putting down Harper's students for being apathetic, these students go out and show interest in the goings on at Harper.

Five people are the most that have ever petitioned for the position of student trustee. In recent years there have been two or three candidates at most.

The position of Student Trustee is an important one, as it gives the students a voice in the politics of the school. Although the student member's vote doesn't count in official tallies, and is not considered in making a quorum, it is a privilege.

Without a student member on the board, the other members would tend to do what they think is best for the college and not what is best for the students. The largest group in the college is the students, therefore it is only proper that they have some say in the actions of the school.

With five people petitioning for this position, it will make for a competitive race. Those involved will have to campaign hard and show real interest and desire for the position, or else one of the other four will easily take the job.

The idea of a student trustee was to let students participate in school Board decisions. If no interest was shown in filling this position, it might even be taken away. This surely won't happen if we continue to have the enthusiasm that we had this year.

The position was made available to the students, and it is about time that several students have regarded it as a privilege and a duty, their duty!

Columnist offends joggers runners speedy to reply

Dear Editor,
Thank you Cindy Caravella! You may have succeeded in convincing the worst of the "Invasion of Body Joggers." We are certainly endangering the human race.

I would like to clear you up on several misguiding fantasies. First off, if we appear to "clog city streets and high ways at all hours of the day," it may be because the wonderful government feels that the muddy, hole-packed road shoulders are "unsafe" of the world. I have been jogging for slightly over a year. Most of this time, I was forced to run on narrow shoulders, and most people I know that run, try our hardest to avoid the swarming cars, and huge trucks that fly along life's busy highways. Yet, the same silly reason, do not retain the idea of being hit by a car, any more than you do.

"How many times have you had to bring your car in a screaming halt just because some uncouth jogger has decided your is his way?" Well, Cindy, I'm sure from the way you write, that you must have had to buy at least three new sets of tires, such a waste of rubber!

Secondly, you don't even realize how contradicting you are of yourself. "They enjoy inflicting pain upon themselves." "Perhaps their goal in life is to drop dead of a heart attack." This does not even bear expounding upon, as you are obviously naive or medical facts. Running can aid in reducing heart attacks.

But to someone as obviously insecure and terrified of being "run over by joggers," facts such as those must be beyond your grasp.

Archie Hunter and his legged feelings have nothing on you. Third, there are some joggers who are curious when they are out running. There are those who like risks who may make drivers apprehensive. I am not a health nut, a competitive athlete, or an overweight slob. I am only somebody who gets tired of people like you getting on the soapbox about all the wrongs done them by joggers.

I use to enjoy your articles I'm sure I will enjoy some in the future. But truthfully, this one was really low. I realize that I, a 130-lb jogger, pose a serious threat to your one car automobile. Want a journalistize hint? Don't generalize when your "generally speaking!" C. Stalder

Albee confesses failures

by JOAN PETERSON

When a Pulitzer Prize winning playwright like Edward Albee speaks to a group of students and community members it seems hard to believe that he would spend over half of his time talking about his failures in life.

Albee said that all his life he wanted to be a writer. He tried many different forms of writing including short stories, essays but to no avail.

Between the ages of 6 to 16 he tried hard to be a poet. "I didn't feel like a poet. I felt like someone writing poetry," he said.

When he was 17 years old he decided he would look up the famous poet W. H. Allen. To Allen's residence in New York he brought 150 of his poems and thrust them into the handwritten poet's hands and told him to read them and that he would return in a week.

A week later I went back and found he had not moved. Albee said, "For the next two hours he discussed my poetry with me skimming my poems which really upset him. He said there was a lot further distance to go for excellence. He was generous and gentle about this."

Another generous and gentle man when Albee met was the renowned poet Thornton Wilder. Twenty-two year old Albee quickly gathered 20 of his poems and thrust them at Wilder to read. This guy was either a friend or a liar. He said, "I read your poems and I want to go out and get you drunk!" Albee said, "So we discussed my poetry and drank bourbon for a while and I noticed that as the bottle was getting emptier, the lake was slowly being covered by my poetry." Wilder then turned to him and said, "Have you thought about writing plays?"

As far as school went, young Albee had a rougher time of it than most students. He had been thrown out of a large number of Eastern schools until, finally, he was graduated from a school in Connecticut.

The school taught me how to make a fool out of myself in public," Albee said. "It is exceedingly important to respect it and use it to your own advantage." The 31-year-old playwright admitted, "At 11 I knew everything about everything, but as the years go by knowledge has slipped by me as wisdom has slipped in. As I grew older I knew less and less."

Albee then tried his luck at Trinity College. He said the only reason he went to the school is so he could tell people he had a good education and thus add to his credibility as a writer. He didn't care too much for the school and refused to go to his required courses because he thought they were too unnecessary. Instead he went to senior courses.

I was getting an exceedingly good education, I thought, but was failing my required courses," he said. They didn't catch on to him until the middle of his sophomore year.

When called in the ad ministrators' office to discuss the situation Albee said, "I am a twit, I should have some say about how I am to be bent." The administrators said that they owed the Real Estate and that they could bend his twig any way they wished. "So I packed up my twig and went to New York."

Albee didn't begin successfully writing plays until he was 30 years old. He went on to write 19 plays including "The Zoo Story," "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?," "The Sandbox," "Tiny Alice," and "American Dream."

He described a good play as "one with something to say and the ability to say it." Albee became famous for his controversial plays that strongly criticized the social institutions and values of the establishment.

Albee said the reason he enjoys a playwright is because a play is "happening rather than having been happened."

He said that when he writes a play, "My responsibility is to become that character. I write. Most of my characters come from my imagination. They surprise me. They have perceptions that I don't even have."

He also said that before he puts an idea down on paper, it has to formulate in his subconscious mind. This may take even 18 years before he can write a play. "I've never decided to write a play about anything," Albee commented. "It has come into my head without me consciously knowing about it. The unconscious is more creative."

Club gets down and discos

The Get Down and Disco Club of Arlington Heights was formed about six months ago by the instructors of a disco class offered through Harper. The instructors, Bruce and Blue Meyer and George and Janet Tucker, together with a few friends and students, started a not-for-profit disco club, which is now seventy members strong.

Members of the club share their interest in disco dancing by meeting on each Saturday night at a local discotheque. Once each month the club has a special get-together, a "disco of the month" which usually includes dinner, no cover charge and a special area set aside for the disco for the members. Recent get-togethers have been at Studio One, Galaxy, and Martini's Red Pony.

The club members enjoy other are advertised in the monthly club newsletter. The club has several large private parties each year for members and their guests, with the next one scheduled for the end of April. This "Spring Fever" dance party will feature live instruction in some basic steps taught by the Fred Astaire Dance Studio, a live disco fashion show put on by P. J. Harris of Woodfield, as well as several door prizes and lots of dancing.

The club is also chartering a "disco boat" for a fun cruise on Lake Michigan this summer. There will be about 150-200 people on the cruise and some tickets will be sold to the public.

If you are interested in finding out more about the club, please call 840-1161 during the day, or 830-1117 evenings.

IAC announces art competition

The Illinois Arts Council has announced an open competition for Illinois artists to create an original sculpture to be presented to the Museum of Contemporary Art in Chicago and Robert Curran, Curator of Art for the Illinois State Museum in Springfield.

The Awards are presented each year to individuals and organizations which have made significant contributions to the cultural life of the State.

In addition to being an art work of art presented at the awards ceremony, the winning sculptor will receive a $100 cash prize.

The entries will be judged by a panel of jurors which will include sculptors Richard Hunt, Virginia Ferrari and Joseph Bartlett, as well as Lewis Mumford, President of the Museum of Contemporary Art in Chicago and Robert Curran, Curator of Art for the Illinois State Museum in Springfield.

Works in bronze, welded metals, polyester resins and terrazzo are to be no more than 12 inches high and must appropriate for producing in multiples or in a series.

The base for the sculpture must be included in the winning sculpture cost. The base will be prepared by the artist under his/her supervision or cost.

which cannot exceed $300 per finished piece.

Interested sculptors should submit slides of five works executed in the past three years, with three views of each work. The top of each slide should be indicated along with the artist's name, the medium, and the dimensions of the work. A complete resume should be included.

Deadline for entries is April 30. Judging and announcement of a winner will take place in May.

Entries should be addressed to: Hon. James V. Rossi, Arts Council, Illinois Arts Council, 111 N. Wabash, Chicago, IL 60601, or phoned to 786-6779 or 786-6786.

Looking for a job can be humiliating

"She then threw herself at his feet, begging, screaming and crying." No, this isn't a passage from the Bible; it's just a typical example of what happens during the course of a job interview.

Looking for a job can be one of the most humiliating experiences of your life. People who hire you will expect that you're in the upper per cent of your class, that you're an outstanding athlete, an outstanding typist, errand boy and all-around "sweet person."

This process of humiliation begins when you pick up the first newspaper and see that you just don't seem to fit any of the qualifications in those pages and pages of want ads.

Some ads for jobs can make you feel about as big as a squashed grape. Does this ad look familiar?

"Do you like excitement? Want to travel? (Up and down the hallway.) Must have good figure aptitude. Must speak English, Hungarian and Pig Latin. Must have associate degree, bachelor's degree, PhD and masters degree. Wash windows and sweep floors. Experience preferred."

When you finally find an ad that looks half-way decent, the next step is going in for your job interview. This is where the real humiliations begin.

The interviewer is usually somebody who's better than you or at least that's what he or she wants you to think. They usually wear dark blue polyester knit suits with snags on the sleeves.

Their machine gun like mouths don't take the time to reload as they fire question after question in your face.

"What's your name? What's your social security number? Let's see your driver's license. Let's see the birth certificate of your kids. Photo."

Walk into any clothing store and ask what the starting pay is.

"Excuse me sir, but what do you start out your new employees with?"

"What played Godzilla in 'That Big Overgrown Monkey'?"

Even though you're able to answer all the questions, even the trivia ones, they always seem to find some excuse for not hiring you. Yes, right when you think you finally got the job, they let the axe fall.

"I'm sorry, but we were looking for someone with curly red hair and freckles."

"What?"

"Yes, we feel that if we're going to fork out $2.50 an hour, we want top quality workers. Besides, that birth certificate of your kids. Photo."

"Excuse me sir, but what do you start out your new employees with?"

"What position are you interested in?"

"Oh, you know. I want to be a pushy salesperson who jurns all over the customers as they come in."

"Well, I pay all my slaves, excuse me, employees, $2.50 an hour. Are you sure you know how to be pushy?"

"I'm a fast learner."

"Do you mind the fact that I watch over my employees with a whip?"

"No, that's okay. At my last job they used a gun."

"I can see that you're going to work out just beautifully. You're hired."

HAIR raises good time for many movie viewers

By BRAD CASE

When I heard that a film version of the popular Broadway musical "HAIR" was being produced, my initial reaction was negative. HAIR was one play that, if anything, was outdated. To transform it into a motion picture acceptable for audiences of the 70's to me seemed untenable. But, somehow, the wisdom of the fir's drug protest movement never seemed fresher. As a movie, "HAIR" jokes fun at the events and the characters, of this era and comes across as a wonderful parody.

Director Miles Forman ("One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest") is the man responsible for making "HAIR" work. He gives the film a unique look, and a nice smooth flow that catches the eye and keeps it throughout the length of the picture. His creative touches are especially evident on the musical sequences, where I have never seen humor and song mixed so effectively. In a lot of movie musicals, the music seems irrelevant to the story, and you wonder why it was ever put there in the first place. In "HAIR," the songs for the most part fit in with the continuity of the story, and even when they don't, they're so well done that you don't mind hearing them anyway.

Another major asset of "HAIR" is it's cast. Consisting of mostly newcomers, the six main characters turn out to be perfect for their roles. One face you will recognize is that of John Savage, who has gained recent popularity from his last film "The Deer Hunter." Savage plays Claude, a farm boy from Oklahoma who takes a bus ride to New York where he'll spend his last few days before reporting for duty in the Armed Forces. As he arrives he is immediately befriended by four hippies, well played by Treat Williams, Ann Golden, Dorsey Wright and Chicago's lead guitarist, Don Dacus. From then on they introduce Claude to their lifestyle, and the circumstances that unfold as they try to make him adapt, border on hilarious.

One of the films subplots revolves around the attempt of the foursome to track down a rich girl (Beverly D'Angelo) that Claude falls in love with at first sight. Their pursuit takes them to a high society gathering which they proceed to turn into a circus. The class conflict represented in this scene of the haves and the have nots comes across as a joke, but actually in thinking about it, is not that far from the truth. That type of humorous honesty is evident all through the film and even though you are not lulled fed any messages, the story is not pointless.

"HAIR" is a movie that is bigger than life. It is a spectacle to experience, as well as a really good time. The production of the film, from Miles Forman's direction, to Sylvia Thayer's Choreography, to Treat Williams' performance, is all first rate. It stacks up as one of the best movie musicals to come along in quite a while and definitely a flick worth seeing.

"A superbly suspenseful, expertly crafted, riveting entertainment."

Teachers balk at joining unions

Examinations are going down. Faculty members' jobs are threatened. Other jobs are hard to find. But even as pressures gather that normally would lead to an increase in union growth, the Carnegie Corp. is reporting that faculty union growth hit "an 11-year low" in growth in 1977.

Carnegie's researchers — Joseph Garbarino and John Lavelle, both of the University of California Berkeley — found that faculty unions actually suffered a net loss of some 10,000 members. However, faculty unions actually suffered a net loss of some 10,000 members. However, faculty union growth has been, according to one observer, "consistently erratic" since the late sixties. The major growth in union membership since then has been in Illinois and Ohio.

Yet faculty issues are heating up at colleges and universities nationwide in anticipation of declining enrollments. College teaching jobs that lead to tenure are increasingly rare. A recent Wall Street Journal account claimed that 30% of the new English Ph.D.'s in 1978 won't be able to find anything better than temporary employment. Hazing or mobile insured pedonates are frequently not replaced if their positions are filled. It's often with part-time teaching assistants.

All these factors make college teaching a very insecure profession, and create the kind of tensions that have historically led other kinds of workers to seek securities unions offer. One of the reasons more teachers haven't joined unions in the face of these pressures is that many of the most easily organized schools have already been organized. A majority of four-year colleges in states that allow public employees to bargain collectively have already held union elections. Two-year schools have, until recently, been considered difficult campaigns on which to organize. Teachers on more than 300 campuses are currently represented by unions. The National Education Association (NEA) represents 400,000 members, with another 100,000 teachers split among the American Federation of Teachers and the American Association of University Teachers.

NEA organizer Bob Miner speculates that another reason for the leveling off of union growth may be that when the economy is uncertain, people don't like risking going on management's bad side. Faculty members at eight schools voted down joining unions last year, while two schools (James-Lewis College and New England College) dropped their affiliations.

But, generally, union activity has picked up. Teacher unions have in some incidences grown increasingly tough in contract negotiations. At least three campuses in Montana, for example, have been the scene of often-bitter negotiations. The state legislature voted to increase the student faculty ratio from 17:1 to 19:1. Some talk was heard of Montana State, where the measure eliminated 60 full-time teaching positions and stampeded the faculty into the American Federation of Teachers, the University of Montana, and Eastern Montana College.

Similar administration efforts to cut back on faculty hiring led some teachers at the University of Missouri-Kansas City to form a chapter of the American Association of University Professors last spring. They threatened a strike unless the administration agreed to show "compelling reasons" why someone would be denied emure.

For Theodore H. Lang, former director of the National Center for the Study of Collective Bargaining in Higher Education, thinks such issues will become more common in the coming years. "I'd think the bargaining will be more over the security of the union's position and of the employees themselves." The major issues will be re-hiring procedures, part-time employment, the establishment of "preferred lists" of teachers to fill vacancies.

Students can save wads of money in Europe

by CHERYL OATHOUT

CEB Europe's low-cost youth hostel and railway systems are the key to successful travel, say students who have traveled there. A line of $15 to join the European Youth Hostels Association could save a student traveling in Europe more than $20 a night in hotel expenses, they say.

Youth hostels are located in most major European cities, except University of Nebraska student P. Alex Chausche, who backpacked around Europe in 1977. With a membership card, a student can stay in any hostel for only three to eight dollars a night, he adds, with some even providing breakfast. Although it may be possible to write for an advance reservation, "it's usually not hard to get a spot," he says.

He describes the hostels as "big dorms, with about 12 bunk beds in a room. And even though they give you a tube-shaped sleeping sack you should have your own sleeping bag.

He goes on to say, "Some Youth Hostels are very strict—some are great. The French and Greek were not real nice, but the Swiss and Germans were very clean."

Stanford University pre-medical student Jerry Kent, who traveled in Europe two years ago and is now in Europe, says he saved $1,300 on his summer study tour in Europe. He expects his $1,300 stay in Europe will only cost him $750.

Public transportation in Europe is quite different than in the United States, and student travelers highly recommend buying Eurail Youthpasses, because trains are relatively inexpensive and go almost everywhere.

Kent says his one-month Eurail pass will make it possible for him to travel in fifteen different countries for $160, and a two-month pass would only cost $340.

Pat Kennedy, who traveled in Europe last year with a Ruge Nader group and works with the Civil Aeronautics Board, remembers that European train stations provide good lunch information on where to eat, bus routes, or directions to a student travel office.

She also says some groups of travelers have solved the transportation problem by buying a car when they arrive and selling it when they leave.

A rental car, however, "costs more to rent and twice as much in gas as it does here in the U. S."

claims Chausche. "Besides you must get an international driver's license, which can be a hassle," she says, and there are some airlines which fly charters exclusively, such as Trans International World Airlines.

Stan Pronger of the University of Nebraska Overseas Opportunity Center, which arranges tours and provides travel information for students, says that by charter, a round trip ticket from Lincoln, Neb., to London costs $200, while a commercial flight can run more than $1,000. However, by charter, the student must leave and return on specific dates.

New airlines are often cheaper than established ones, Kennedy says, because older airlines do not have to compete so much. She says, however, that cheaper flights may be crowded and may not serve as many cities as more expensive flights.

She says she flew Laker Airlines Skytrain, which goes from New York to London on a "first come, first serve basis." No reservations are taken except for those who are not able to get on the first flight they wait for. "The whole operation is simple," she said.

A Skytrain now also flies round trip from Los Angeles to London for $367. The round trip flight from New York is $253. In-flight meals are an additional $1.50.

Although she flew the London-based Skytrain, Kennedy suggests going by American carriers overall, since they must conform with U. S. regulations even while flying in other countries. U. S. regulators don't clearly have this same enforcement power over foreign carriers operating outside the U. S., she adds.

Major League Baseball; Chicago teams near bottom

by BRAD CASE
177 MAJOR LEAGUE
Baseball Forecast

AMERICAN LEAGUE EAST

1. NEW YORK: Despite off season pitching acquisitions, the Yanks need another standout year from new Gentry to repeat as World Champions.
2. MILWAUKEE: An even mixture of youth and veterans will make the Brewers a serious contender to O's.
3. BOSTON: Seeking Revenge, the Red Sox need full recoveries from the injured Hatch, Hummel and Carlton Fisk if they're to be successful in this race.
4. DETROIT: A very talented young team, the Tigers with the return of "The Big" Fyfe, will be up with the pack come September.
5. BALTIMORE: You know the A.L. east is baseball's best division, when a quality team like the Orioles will have to struggle to finish in the top four.
6. CLEVELAND: A strong offense is totally offset by an extremely weak pitching staff. The outlook appears dismal for the Indians with this competition.
7. TOMMORO: Totally outclassed in this division, the Blue Jays have a long way to go before they can be taken seriously.

WEST

1. CALIFORNIA: Red Curry looks like just the man to lead the team.

2. TEXAS: With Sparky Lyle in the bullpen, and Oscar Gamble in the lineup, the Rangers now have the balance they need to be a big threat in the west.
3. KANSAS CITY: The perennial divisional champs who can never make it to the World Series, are going to have an even tougher time making the playoffs this season.
4. CHICAGO: With manager Don Kessinger stressing fanatical faith, don't be surprised to see a much improved White Sox team during the '79 campaign.
5. MINNESOTA: The last couple of seasons have drained just about every decent player from the Twins roster. They'll be lucky to finish this high.
6. OAKLAND: The only thing keeping the A's out of last place is the incredible toughness of Beane.
7. SEATTLE: This team is of minor league quality, and doesn't have a prayer in this race.

NATIONAL LEAGUE EAST

1. PITTSBURGH: With Stemetz and Conderia healthy again, the Pirates are going to be one team to reckon with.
2. PHILADELPHIA: They have the best starting nine in baseball, but lack the bench and pitching depth it takes to be champs.
3. CHICAGO: The hitting will be there this year, but the big question is how many of the pitching staff will have to get for the Cubs to contend.

4. MONTREAL: The Expos on paper have the talent to win it all. Once they take the field it's a different story.

5. NEW YORK: Still in the building stage, manager Joe Torre already has the Mets back on the road to contention.

6. ST. LOUIS: Outside of Ted Simmons the Cards have little re-sensitizing championship timber in their way down.

WEST

1. SAN FRANCISCO: Solid, well balanced offense along with a strong pitching staff could make this the Giants year.
2. LOS ANGELES: The loss of Tommy John may hurt enough to determine the reigning N.L. champs.
3. CINCINNATI: This might be the last hurrah for the aging superstars who barely resemble the "big red machine" of the early '70's.
4. HOUSTON: Having Cedeno back in the lineup will bring respectability as well as capability to Astros.
5. SAN DIEGO: After looking at the Padres chances this year it's hard to rate them any higher than this.
6. ATLANTA: No matter how much money owner Ted Turner spends he can't seem to get the Braves out of the cellar. This season will be no exception.

Many involved in Trustee election

by GAIL MILLER

The April 11 election for Harper's Board of Trustees will not be unexcused after all. As of mid-March, only two petitions had been filed for the two vacant board seats, but the deadline for filing was not until March 22 and three candidates filed in time to have their names included on the ballot.

Munson - "The board's budget goal - a drive to get higher enrollment."

The Board of Trustees consists of seven members who serve three-year terms, as well as a student representative who is elected annually by the student body. The seats to be vacated are those presently held by Shirley Munson of Palatine, who is running for re-election and Jennifer M. Nicklas also of Palatine, who is not seeking to retain her seat.

In addition to Mrs. Munson, the candidates include Angela Walls of Schaumburg, Michael LaVarnay of Elk Grove, Joseph Miller of Inverness and Ray Mills of Palatine. In a recent interview with the Harbinger, the five candidates discussed such matters as the firing of faculty members, what to do with the land Harper appropriated for its "second night" campus, the possibility of a new tax referendum and the proposed budget cuts and alternative methods of raising money.

Although all of the candidates agreed that with declining enrollment the second site land would probably not be able to be used in the next few years, only one, Joseph Miller, said it should be sold within the near future.

The others felt that since the most amount of money gained from selling the land could not be put directly into the educational fund, but could only be used for new buildings, the land should be held onto for a while. During this time legislation might be passed to make the funds transferrable and meanwhile the land would appreciate in value.

Miller - "The school has to market its product to the community."

Mills - "We have some very serious problems."

Miller, however, said that with enrollment declining so rapidly and no brighter perspective in the near future, the land should be disposed of. In addition, he said that there would be a conflict in raising because of the land's near proximity to Jackson Community College.

All of the candidates were in ready agreement that a new tax referendum could not possibly be passed now. Mrs. Munson called it a "last consideration for the moment." Mills said that not until a new budget was approved and it was proven that everything possible had been done should the idea be considered.

Michael LaVarnay was adamant that such a bill could not be passed at the present time and Miller agreed that other alternatives must be found. Angela Walls is being backed by a homeowner's group who are determined to avoid a rise in taxes, which, she says, is the mood all over at the present time.

There was no dispute among any of the candidates that the much publicized, and widely protested faculty cuts were an extremely unfortunate occurrence. Only LaVarnay would quietly state that he thought they were necessary, since he said that cuts had already been made everywhere else and there was really no choice.

Mrs. Munson said she was very upset at the faculty cuts, but is afraid that it will be necessary. Ms. Walls believes that other cuts should be made first. Mills, who first got involved with the board by presenting a petition of protest against the fact of one faculty member, would also like to see another alternative be explored.

Walls - "We should consider changing to a four-year college."

Miller feels the situation needs to be studied more closely.

The candidates also had their own ideas as to how to go about raising money and making budget cuts.

Ray Mills is in his third year as a student at Harper after over 20 years as a high school counselor for District 211. He plans to propose action to suggest that the opening of some of the new buildings being constructed, with the exception of Bldg. N, be delayed until it can be better afforded. He is also looking forward to studying the present budget proposal more closely.

Michael LaVarnay is a business administration student at Harper, who plans to transfer to receive his bachelor degree. He stresses a program to increase enrollment by attracting high school students. LaVarnay argues that if more (cont'd to page 3)

Student Trustee will be elected this week

Elections for student trustee will be held today (April 9) and tomorrow (April 10) from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the lounge Bldg. A and from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m. in the first floor lobby of Bldg. D.

The student trustee who is elected will attend all Harper Board meetings and cash on arbitrary vote. The vote is not counted in the official tally and is not considered in determining a quorum for action by the board.

The term of office for the student trustee will be from April 15, 1979 to April 14, 1980.

Jean Panknin, student activities advisor, said that last year 200 out of the 14,000 full and part-time students enrolled at Harper voted in the election. Miss Panknin said that last year's turnout was "the lowest turnout of memory."

The only thing that students will not see when voting is their student activity card. "People should exercise their franchise to vote in all elections," said Miss Panknin.

"Especially in the student trustee election, which is a position that was created to represent the students."

Glen Weber: Weber is enrolled in liberal arts and believes that his strongest qualification is "an sincere desire to represent the students of Harper College."

Mack J. Connors: Connors is studying business and believes that "training for student trustee is the best way" to become deeply involved in the workings of Harper.

Linda Mueller: Miss Mueller is studying business and believes that "I had no experience and pre-ent involvement with the college can benefit the students here on campus."

Bruce Zanca: Zanca is studying business administration and he wants to "maintain a communication line between the college's student population and the college's board of trustees."

Edward M. Messner: Messner is studying legal technology and "would like to disrupt some of the political thoughts of the trustees."

Get involved and vote for Student Trustee

Student trustee elections are coming up and everyone is encouraged to vote.

We aren't endorsing anyone in particular, and we feel all the candidates are current and capable. The main objective is to get out and vote for the candidate who has the proper qualifications.

The voter turnout for student trustee elections in the past has always been below the predicted average. This is uncomprehensible when one realizes all that is necessary to vote. A voter simply needs his student activity card for identification, and perhaps five to seven minutes of his time to complete the ballot.

Voting is not a complex procedure. In this election voters are only casting ballots on one issue; the student representative to the Harper College Board of Trustees. The voting procedure merely involves identifying yourself, to prove that you do attend Harper College, then marking the paper ballot for the candidate of your choice, and then placing the ballot in a sealed container to insure secrecy.

The last two issues of the HARBINGER have devoted front page space to covering the candidates, the issues, and obtaining the necessary voting information to provide readers with everything they will need to vote for the student trustee. If voters didn't want to research the subjects at hand on their own time, they could have picked up the school newspaper and almost everything they need to vote intelligently is right there in black and white.

The elections are most important to all the students who attend Harper. This is the chance that the students have to pick someone to represent them and their views to the Board and Administration at the college. If students want to be heard the least they can do is to vote for someone to bring their ideas and/or problems out in the open so they can be discussed.

So, vote for the candidate of your choice in the April 9 and 10 elections. Elections will be in the lounge of Bldg. A in the first floor lobby of Bldg. D.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

The purpose of this letter is to update the student body of Harper. On March 27, 1978 I was present and gave testimony in the Senate Executive committee. The results were passage of SB-4 which has the effect of raising the drinking age back to 21 statewide, regardless of home rule power. The other bill SB-61 was held in committee, this bill would allow for on premises drinking for 19 and 20 year olds.

As a result of passage of SB-5, by a vote of 13-3-0 will now go to the full Senate floor for a vote. This bill needs 16 votes out of 30. If this bill is killed the home rule provision would be removed to assure passage.

Now for the sake of argument let's just say the House Bill (HB-21) passes the full house floor. At the same time the Senate will pass the full house floor. What must happen then is the house version must go to the executive committee of the Senate and the Senate version in the House for passage so as you can see it is still far from law.

It is now up to you. I leave, with others like Ken Voss, publisher of the Illinois Emmentamer, done all we can. If we don't have more support fast it will go through for sure. When it does, don't come to me or Ken Voss to cry because now is your chance.

These letters can be dropped off at the Student Senate office and I will forward them when I go back to Springfield.

Yours truly,
Paul Seigmann
Lobbyist

Editor's note: HB-21 has been defeated in the Senate since Seigmann submitted this letter. However, other bills to increase the drinking age are expected to come before the House and Senate in the future.

Student speaks against WCHM

Dear Editor,

I am sure this letter speaks for a lot of people. Normally I am in the Harper cafeteria from 2 to 3 hours a day. Let me say this house is quite extraordinary. Do the people running WCHM really want to play our music?

Usually I hear it not everybody else also: the same times when the same time I am here. The song entitled "Ty Like an Eagle" by Steve Miller, which is followed by "Dream Weaver" most people I talk to would like to decorate Harper's parking lot with these records. That being only one example of the usual routine of dull music that WCHM plays.

There are a lot of people who literally get tired of the same music everyday. From references I know that WCHM has very many albums most of which have not been inserted properly at all this whole school year. With so much music to choose from, why the same repetition of a relatively small category of music? Of the music I have requested, it has been played and then discarded in favor of their usual array of music.

I speak for relatively many people and I hope maybe this letter might help the Deansays upstairs in

WCHM change their ball styles ball. Please, how about it change Mark White Angela Watts is a bookkeeper and a part-time student at Harper. She believes that cuts should be made in administrative areas first, followed by extra activities and facilities last. She also thinks that what was so bad about the faculty cuts was not so much the cuts themselves, but the manner in which they were handled. She also suggests more attractive far part-time students.

Shirley Muesel, an accountant, is the board's present vice-chairman. Mrs. Muesel is helping to carefully analyze the present suggested budget cuts in what is considered to be the first round of the issue. She also believes that the board should be involved in helping to formulate a plan for increasing enrollment.

The polls will be open from noon until seven p.m. on April 14.

College catalogues a farce

by CHIP BERLEY

(CPS)—Most college catalogues seem to favor actual photo essays of pastoral campus scenes, rounded with encyclopedic listings of courses offered at least once a century. Their object, of course, is to lure high school seniors into the schools. But in truth not much of the information in the catalogues helps in choosing a college or planning an education.

These catalogues have, since the beginning of the decade, been the focus of a gathering protest by education activists who want colleges to provide information in their publications that might actually be useful to their students. Much of the protest, though, has been in senate conference talk. Now, however, the federal government and student lobby groups have imposed a deadline of the schools. The "movement" has suddenly gained some power, and, later this month, a major report from a conference on catalogue information promises to cause great commotion among college administrators.

In December, Ted Marchese of Barst College in Illinois coordinated a federally-sponsored conference, called Improving For Student Choice, which, for the first time, brought together a broad range of student commentators. They drew up a report, and will release it to the public in late February.

A copy of the draft report released to CPS details strategies for improving the flow of information to students. Ken Fischer, a higher education consultant, says the conference participants went "beyond the point of merely developing a plan to the point where names, dates, and tasks—what to do, when, and where—were identified. Commitments were made to implement the plan."

The report includes a draft list of steps colleges can take without performing a major overhaul of the current publications. This list of important information includes 19 topic areas ranging from financial aid and job prospects for certain kinds of majors to grievance procedures and how credits earned at the school will transfer to another school.

The report also calls for legislation requiring schools to publish "significant" changes in admission policies, and the names of courses that may prove hard to get because of staff shortages.

These latter two items alone would be a major reform that could end cases of students enrolling in a college only to find their majors are being phased out, or prerequisite courses with severely limited enrollment. (See story below.)

Such reforms are especially threatening to colleges because they stand a very good chance of success. As the report is released, conference participants will be testifying at congressional hearings on the Higher Education Act of 1978. That act is up for renewal this year, and is the umbrella legislation that makes all federal funding of education possible. Congress' self-imposed deadline for renewing the act is this October. In the meantime, several key congressional staff members involved in drafting the renewal have already expressed concern over colleges' compliance with current federal laws dictating what kinds of information the schools must provide their students.

Current federal law, originally sponsored by Sen. Jacob Javits of New York at the behest of several student groups, says that colleges must supply students and prospective students with various types of information—mostly concerning financial aid—or lose their eligibility for federal funding.

In the law's wake, the Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education (FIPSE) has sponsored several projects to show schools what Congress intended. The National Student Educational Fund used the grant for its Information Gap project. Funds also went to a coalition of eleven colleges, including Marchese's Barst, that revamped their catalogues to provide unusually candid information about their institutions.

Despite the mountain of research reports and the eleven exemplary catalogues, the vast majority of colleges continue to view the student consumer movement with either indifference or bold hostility. Many institutions now begrudgingly provide the information required by federal law "on request," but few have actually tampered with their catalogues.

The reason is that, with the pool of potential students shrinking and the rates of tuition rising, a much more spirited competition among schools for students has replaced the laissez-faire admissions recruitment of prior years. It is the heat of recruitment, many schools have adopted clever commercial marketing techniques to "sell" their programs. One of the most visible selling tools a school has is its catalogue.

Colleges and universities apparently are reluctant to sacrifice those tools. But with the new higher education authority legislation promised for October, there's a kind of legislative sword of Damocles hanging over their heads. Fearful of tougher federal catalogue requirements, the schools have been scurrying to develop guidelines of their own to head off federal intervention.

Most recently, the National Association of College Admissions Counselors published a "Statement of Student Rights and Responsibilities in the College Admissions Process." Other groups are expected to follow suit.

But meanwhile, the pressure promises to keep building. In April, the prestigious Carnegie Commission on Policy Studies in Higher Education is expected to release its long-delayed "Fair Practice in Higher Education: Rights and Responsibilities in a Period of Competition for Students." Observers anticipate the report as a kind of code of ethics for college administrators in this era of enrollment decline. Student commentators expect it to deal extensively with how to provide useful information to students.

And this month, the second annual conference on Statewide Educational Information & Counseling Services has listed Marchese's conference report on improving the information flow as a major topic. Marchese is confident some of the report's recommendations will become law, no matter what kinds of guidelines schools impose on themselves. "People realize that what's in the law regarding student information now is a little outdated. Anything that's done on paper and makes sense has a chance of being included in the legislation."

Entrance exams show students stupid

By JEFF GORDON

People have telling us that high school students are becoming more and more stupid as years go by. The college entrance tests point that out, and so does the alarmingly high rate of functional illiteracy among high school graduates.

New George Gallup, in a survey published in the Washington Post, has more evidence that high school students are less and less educated. He tested 1,000 17-and 18-year olds across the country for their "civil literacy" and came up with some startling results.

Gallup presented the survey results at the National Municipal League conference on government in Louisville.

The results of Gallup's survey and an earlier survey of 17-year-olds, the National Assessment of Educational Progress, show that Only three percent of the group could identify Hawaii and Alaska as the last two states to join the union.

Twenty-five percent of the group did not realize that New Jersey is on the East Coast and that Oregon is on the West Coast.

Only 34 percent of the group realized that you don't have to vote a straight ticket in an election.

Only 25 percent of the group realized that political convention made the selection of presidential nominees.

Thirty-three percent did not know which party had a majority in Congress.

Only four percent of the group could name the three presidents who served directly before Gerald Ford.

Only 23 percent had any idea what the distance between San Francisco and New York.

Only 43 percent of the group had ever heard of the absentee ballot.

Only 34 percent of the students realized that the President did not appoint people in Congress.

Thirty-three percent of the group thought that newspapers and magazines should not be allowed to print articles critical of the government.

Sixty-one percent did not realize that Mexico was more populous than Canada.

Only 48 percent really knew what NATO stands for.

Only 28 percent of the group came close to naming the population of the United States.

Only 18 percent had any idea what detente meant.

Only 18 percent knew that Ottawa was the capital of Canada.

Barely 56 percent knew that each state had two senators and that the number of representatives is determined by population distribution.

Less than 30 percent knew that the senate must confirm Supreme Court nominees.

Only 46 percent knew which war had state's rights as an issue.

Only 16 percent knew what country Josef Stalin was from.

Only 32 percent knew that Russia fought on the side of the United States in World War II.

Only 33 percent could match Golda Meir with Israel.

Only 46 percent matched Indira Gandhi with India.

Only 28 percent matched Marshal Tito with Yugoslavia.

The Washington Post quoted Anna Arban, president of the National Council of Social Studies, as saying "Social studies are receiving very low priority in the curriculum and the attention rate of these courses is very high. Electives are being substituted for hard-core government courses."

Circle K wins award

by JOAN PETERSON

Harper's Circle K club recently came back from a three-day Circle K district Convention in Quincy Ill., with several outstanding awards according to Circle K president Glen Lambert.

The club won the Best Single Service Award for its Dance-a-thon project which took place last October, in which Altona Senior was the committee chairperson.

Donna Perakia won the Outstanding Secretary Award in this district.

The club also won the Main Miles Award for having the most miles traveled per member to the convention.

Max G. Neteland was elected as the district secretary.

Lambert was elected as the District Landmark Governor.

The club as a whole went from being the number 29 to the second best Circle K club in Illinois.

Lambert said, "When you're able to jump on many spots as we have it's a great achievement."

"This is the most dedicated group I've seen as far as speech team is concerned," said Marcia Litrenta. "They work very hard and they're very dedicated students."

Other members of the team who participated at the Parkland tournament were:

Joe Pulin, Anita Schaefer, George Piemonte, Mona Teyron, Tom Alberti, Steve Wilbey, Bruce Zanca, Judy Duani and Marilyn Hata.

The next tournament will be national, at Normandale College in Minneapolis April 11-14.

UPCOMING

Financial aid

All Harper students in the National Direct Student Loan Program must come to the Financial Aid office for an exit interview if leaving school at the end of the spring '79 semester.

Movie

The Harper College Program Board will be presenting "Enter the Dragon" today, April 8, at 12:15 p.m. (A-34). "Enter the Dragon" represents the first filmmyed-style dramatization of the kung fu art of self-defense, and is part of the Bruce Lee legend that has given the film its fame. Admission is free.

Blood drive

Health Service is having a blood drive April 25 from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. in A-34.

The blood drive will cover the donor and his immediate family. The donor must be in good health, be between the ages 17 and 65, weigh at least 110 lbs. and wait eight weeks between donations. The North Suburban Blood Center is the agency that will be on campus for the drive. This agency provides the blood for major north and northwest suburban hospitals. For more information, call ext. 340 or stop by the Health Service office, A-34.

Speaker

Martin Margulies, CLU, general agent of the John Hancock Mutual Life Ins. Co., will be at Harper Tuesday (April 10) at 10 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. to discuss opportunities in John Hancock Marketing Management Program. Further information and appointments can be made by calling the Job Service at 397-4402.

Workshop

"Mothers and Daughters," a workshop exploring the myths, goals, conflicts and affirmations of a complex relationship, will be offered by the Harper College Women's Program Tuesday, April 10, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Board Room of Bldg. A. Tuition is $12.50 and includes lunch. Workshop leaders Rita Michalak and Mary Hagen-Turner will lead exercises in examining guilt and effective problem solving. Ms. Turner, a psychotherapist in private practice, will help participants develop skills in strengthening relationships. Harper instructor Rita Michalak will examine the myths, contemporary research, literature and films depicting the mother-daughter bond. To enroll, interested persons may call the Continuing Education Admissions Office, 397-3900, ext. 410.

Journalism teachers to judge this year's Golden Key Awards

Instructors from the Harper College Journalism program have been selected to judge entries for the Golden Key Awards presented by the Illinois Department of Mental Health and Developmental Disabilities. Harper's Journalism program coordinator, Suzanne Havlic, and Associate Professor of Journalism Henry Hensley will judge the competition.

Two former graduates of the Journalism program will assist in the judging. They are Diane Norman of the Harrington Courier and Gene Dyer, video coordinator for Weber-Manning in Arlington Heights.

Four Golden Key Awards will be presented for outstanding contributions in public understanding of mental health, developmental disabilities (mental retardation, cerebral palsy and epilepsy), and alcohol and drug abuse. The newspapers, radio, television and magazine media may enter news stories, features, editorials, documents and photo stories. Entries will be judged "on journalistic enterprise, insight and understanding of the problems inherent in the treatment of mental illness, developmental disabilities and alcoholism," explained Meyer Preiner, chief of the Office of Public Information, Department of Mental Health.

Twenty-two entries from major newspapers, radio and television stations are being considered.

Awards will be presented at the annual mental health luncheon in May at Springfield. Golden Keys for best material will be presented to the author. Radio and television awards will be presented to the station and program.

Hensley pointed out that in past years the Golden Key Awards were judged by the Merrill College of Journalism, Northwestern University. This is the first year that Harper's Journalism staff will select the winning entries.

Vacationing in poverty

While most Harper students will be spending their spring vacation basking in the warm sun of Florida or are catching the sights in Europe, several members of Catholic Campus Ministry (CCM) will be spending their vacations in the poverty stricken Appalachian mountains in Ravens, Kentucky.

CCM's president Mike Halm, Sue Terach, Ann Graham and Sisters Peggy Brennan and Julie Flynn will be staying at St. Elizabeth

Church and Mission during their week long stay and work on the Appalachian Project. They plan to work on various projects such as painting barns, working in a day care center and helping the needy mountain people.

"I think this gives us the opportunity to help other people and show them that we care," Halm said.

Child care available

Child Care Services are offered to all Harper students, faculty and staff on a space-available basis. Pre-registration is necessary.

The service is also open to parents seeking special arrangements for child care on a one-day basis (i.e. workshops, extra study time). Parents must be on campus. A call in advance to assure space availability is needed for one day service.

Children ages two (toddler trained), through kindergarten (not entering first grade) are accepted.

The summer service will be open from 7 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday through Friday, if there is sufficient enrollment to maintain staffing. Hours may be extended if enrollment warrants. Students who have paid an activity fee will be charged $1 per hour for one child and 75 cents per hour for each additional child. The fee for all others is $1.25 per hour per child.

Parents who are considering using the service are responsible for obtaining the current regulations for the Child Care Center before registering for classes.

Summer registrations will be accepted on May 3 and June 1 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. in D-215, for new students. Current students should pre-register during office hours from May 14 to 18. All parents must register in person and bring a copy of their class schedule and child's birth certificate.

With millions of Americans' college students spending over $120 million each year on hand-held calculators, the silicon chip wonders have become a major educational tool.

Calculators that used to cost $100 a decade ago now retail for less than $10. Business Week magazine reported. And the market's explosive growth has "transformed a three-in, one-out computer of 23 years ago into a 12-ounce, hand-held unit priced at $20 today."

Even with a wide range of models more financially accessible to students, three criteria should be taken into account when choosing a calculator: personal needs, the unit's power source and the manufacturer's warranty.

The most expensive units—the programmable models—are like mini-computers, says David Blumer, a research chemist who earned his doctorate as a teaching assistant at the University of Illinois.

A student, however, must write a program to solve a problem. Blumer claims, and "by the time he's through writing it, he should have memorized the equation."

Programmable calculators may be nice, but Blumer advises undergraduates to buy units which "fit to your own personal needs. Some want to get off on cheap as they can, some want prestige."

He suggests that the basic four-function calculator costing under $10 is usually adequate for a business major or for personal use, but would be inadequate for an engineering course. "These calculators need to be able to do logarithms, square roots, trigonometric powers, and other math functions. Usually calculators with all these features can be purchased for under $40."

Business calculators may be needed for figuring inventory control, calculating capital budgets, forecasting market shares, and a variety of "financial analysis" operations, according to Peter L. Bonfield, division manager of professional calculators for Texas Instruments in Lubbock, Texas.

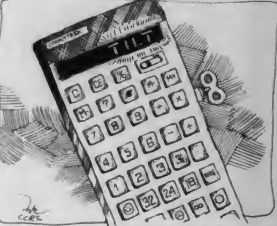

Bonfield adds that students by his company show more college students buying "professional and scientific calculators with memories, statistical functions, trendlines, etc."

This trend is due to "increased awareness of the capabilities of calculators and how they can be applied to class work," he contends. Blumer basically agrees with this assessment, but says, "when it's just a status symbol" to have a more complicated calculator.

battery replacement.

Bonfield also advises students to shop not only for price, quality and number of functions, but also warranty. "Find out whether it is an American or foreign manufacturer, or at least whether there is a repair center in the United States," she says.

Some units must be sent back to the factor or to a service center, she says, but some manufacturers only require the customer to return the unit to the store where it was purchased or to an authorized dealer.

Bonfield warns that shipping costs may end up costing more than the unit is worth. Most warranties are for 90 days or a year from date of purchase, she adds.

For advice in selecting a calculator which will fulfill course requirements, graduate student teaching assistants and professors are an excellent source of help. Blumer says.

But be sure to compare shop. Bonfield concludes. "Try it out, test the calculator by working problems on it. If you don't know how to operate certain functions, read the instruction manual, and then ask a salesperson if you don't understand. Instruction manuals should be clear. The display panel should be easy to read, keys easy to hit, and the size comfortable."

Men's tennis grabs two wins

by RORY KORTES
"Fantastic" is the word that best describes the men's tennis teams play up until now.

Their undefeated record started with a 6-0 victory Nick Keson, the team's No. 1 player had this to say about the teams first win: "The team was mentally puffed and physically ready for their match."

The teams first show of their talent was put in the test at the Springfield Invitational during the weekend of March 30 and 31. Harper completed with eight teams in singles and doubles competition. The outstanding players were Nick Keson, Mike Eisenberg and Mike Niemiec.

Out of the top four singles players in the tournament Keson, Eisenberg and Niemiec held three of those spots. In the semi-finals Eisenberg beat out Niemiec 3 to 2.

tough match.

Playing well, Keson successfully put away his opponent from Lane Land college in the semi-finals. Keson and Eisenberg battled it out for first place with Keson coming up the winner in a well played match for both players. Coach Keson was glad to see so many Harper players at the top of the tournament. "The men had to play hard and tough to get there. It's good to see all of them finishing at the top," some of the colleges participating in the Invitational were Lincoln Land, Rock Valley, Sauk Valley and Blackhawk college.

The doubles competition was a repeat of the singles. Keson and Eisenberg, last years doubles champions, easily played their way through to the finals of the doubles competition. They put away Lake Land college in two sets.

On the way down to Springfield the team stopped off at Thornton college to play a match. The victory against Thornton wasn't as convincing as the 6-0 against Wright. But the team shined up with a close 5-4 win. Mike Niemiec and Barry Korman played a tough match to pull off a close victory.

Dupage college was next to be added on the chain of victories. The team played Dupage last Tuesday at 3:30. The first three singles, Keson, Niemiec and Eisenberg won their matches. The outcome relied them on the doubles teams. Keson and Eisenberg won their match in two sets.

This evening out the score at 4 points all for each team. Niemiec and Korman played a nerve-racking match to get the fifth point. After losing the first set 1-6 they stormed back to take the next sets 6-1 and 6-2.

Dupage was the toughest team as far as the toughest match will come against Joliet on Tuesday of this week at Joliet. If the team can successfully get by them the familiar phrase "We can for sure" will come closer to being a reality.

The team of Waco, Texas is the place where the national tennis competition is held each year. This is the goal of every tennis team.

But only three top teams from Illinois get to compete in national. Harper's tennis team will have a good shot at winning the state tournament this year if they keep their winning streak going.

Upcoming meets will be against Rock Valley, the Harper Invitational this Saturday, Joliet and the University of Wisconsin at Whitewater.

Sprinters lead track team

by JOE KUSEK

The Harper track team, especially the 440 relay is showing despite the lack of numbers it still is a team not to be taken very lightly.

The strength of this season's team in the sprinters and this showed at the 11th Annual Northwestern Invitational.

The 440 relay team of Mike Walston, Paul Panagiotis, Dave Ervin, and Devin Healy placed fourth with a time of 48.5, the first time they ran it all year.

"Our 440 team will be very competitive, we expect to be one of the stronger 440 teams in the region and will be ready to go head-to-head with Wright," said the team's only coach Bob Nolan.

In the 160 meters Walston, Healy and Ervin made it to the semi-finals with Walston and Healy then going on to the finals, where Walston placed fifth at 1:11 and Healy placed sixth with 1:12.

The 800 meter finals didn't have anyone from Harper in it, but Walston and Healy ran very respectable times with 2:12 and 2:13. The winner was clocked at 2:14.

The meet was mostly four-year schools with only Harper, DuPage, Triton, Oakton and Wright the only junior colleges.

Jeff Brydges turned in some of the best performances of the day, doubling in the 1500 and 800 meters being the only junior college runner to place in either. Brydges turned in a 5:40 only three seconds behind the winner in the 1500 to place fifth and then ran close to two minutes in the 800 to place sixth, second in his heat.

"It was a good first effort, considering he had no real indoor season training," said Nolan.

Panagiotis missed the finals of the long jump by a half inch, but the rest of the field events were had a difficult time with the cold and windy weather.

"I was pleased overall with our first meet, we had some good performances in the running events and our field events will definitely improve with practice," said Nolan.

The team travels today in the Junior College relays, held at the University of Chicago.

There is one woman at the squad this year, discus thrower Sue Veloso, who was IHSA state champion last year and hopes to repeat as the junior college champion. Sue's first meet will be the Northwestern Valley Invitational where there will be both men's and women's events.

The team will be hard pressed to win any big meets with absolutely no hurdles to run in any race.

On a sadder note, the Harper Invitational was cancelled for this year due to the unpredictability of the weather. "The weather" was bad, and with our indoor training curtailed and you always want to have a decent showing at your own meet," said Nolan.

Softball starts season

Women's softball hampered by weather conditions, welcomed new coach Mrs. Sue Osborne with a game against Thornton.

"Unfortunately it wasn't the kind of welcome one would want to receive every day as the Hawks lack of practice was evident in losing 15-4.

"We lost 15-4, but the girls did a great job. In spite of the fact they had very little practice due to the weather," said Osborne. "This year's team has a lot of talent, and if the weather cooperates and we could practice on the field we could really develop the talent available."

The teams first home game, is hopefully Tuesday April 16, vs. Northwesterns, and then they play an "NYC" conference game vs. Dupage, April 11 at home, both start at 5:30 p.m.

It's finally over Harper's Jeff Brydges finishes up in the 800 meter run. Brydges finished second in his heat and finished sixth overall. The only junior college runner to place in that event at the Northwestern Invitational. The team's sprinters, made a strong showing with the 440 relay placing fourth. The team travels to the Junior College Relays today at the University of Chicago.

Board hikes tuition $1, raises laboratory fees

by DEBBIE TESCHKE

Tuition and fees for Harper students will cost more beginning with the Summer 1979 session.

The Harper Board of Trustees approved a $1 per credit tuition increase April 12.

The increase raises tuition to $19 per credit hour, second highest among Illinois Community Colleges.

The board also approved fee increases for continuing education courses, laboratory instruction, dental hygiene clinic services; admission, financial aid, health services; testing, and parking stickers.

Students will now pay a $15 application fee to Harper, $1 per transcript after the first three are requested instead of after the first five; and $3 per semester for a parking sticker.

Laboratory fees will go up from $36 to $10 depending on the course.

The tuition increase will generate $183,500 in revenue, college officials said.

Student Senate President Alan Bergstrom criticized the board for doing a "rush job on the increase."

"Has anyone thought to ask the students how they feel about it," said Bergstrom. "This whole deal will be passed without asking us."

Student Trustee Peter Maria has questioned the board as to how the tuition increase will affect the recruitment of students.

"The board has sought other revenues and we are seeking other sources," said Joan Khamman, board president.

"We do understand how you the students feel, but if the increase must be considered now for printing registration," she added.

Reasons cited by the college for the tuition increase include: a decrease over the past four years in the share of per student cost covered by state aid and property taxes, the failure of a referendum held in September 1978, and the erosion of revenue from chargebacks for out-of-district students.

The board also approved a change in its policy manual regarding course refunds.

The manual currently states that ED credit and non-credit courses give 56 percent refunds if the class is dropped up to the third class meeting.

The change will limit the refunds to the second week of class only, as is done with regular credit courses.

After the second week of classes no refund will be given.

Zanca elected Student Trustee

by CINDY CARAVELLO

Bruce Zanca was elected student trustee amidst controversy and confusion when another candidate tried to dump him out of the race to boost a third candidate.

Zanca, who won the election with 127 votes said, "My primary goal as student trustee is to give the position some actual meaning in the eyes of the committee on the Board of Trustees. If I can go and achieve the respect of the trustees, I will effectively be able to represent the students of Harper College," he said.

The controversy surrounding Zanca's election began when student trustee candidate Edward M. Meunier, filed a complaint with the Student Senate that Zanca's campaign posters were illegally displayed.

Zanca said he received a phone call from the Student Senate on April 8, informing him that some of his posters were illegally displayed throughout the campus. Zanca said he then came to school April 8, to him in his campaign efforts. Zanca said, innocently put up the posters where they were not allowed.

Zanca said he did not display the posters in the illegal areas "deliberately" as he was accused of doing.

The source of the complaint, Meunier, said "I had to drop out of the race because I was moving out of the district. I would of had to resign anyway if I won," he said. Meunier started his push for candidate Mark J. Cunniff, when he discovered that his plan to move out of Harper District 512 made him ineligible for candidacy. Meunier decided to promote Cunniff because they are "good friends."

"I think he's going to screw it up," Meunier said about Zanca's term as student trustee.

Charges against Zanca were dropped after he appeared before the election committee at a meeting on April 11. The new student trustee said he would like to just forget the whole incident and keep good relations with those involved with Harper during his year long term.

A total of 369 votes were cast at this year's election, which was a large increase over the number who turned out last year.

Joanne Pankam, director of student activities told why she thinks more students involved themselves in this election. "Students have become more aware of critical issues facing Harper today," she said, "which results in increased interest in student election as in other elections."

Alan Bergstrom, student senate president, said that there was "more enthusiasm" this year during the election.

ing the election.

"He'll have his work cut out for him," Miss Pankam said about Zanca. His biggest problem, she said, is going to be the budget which includes tuition increases, tax referendums and the improvement of enrollment trends.

As student trustee, Zanca will attend all board meetings and call an advisory vote on the decisions made.

Other candidates for the position as student trustee were: Mark J. Cunniff with 110 votes, Glen Weaver with 25 votes, Linda Mueller with 27 votes, and Edward M. Meunier with 29 votes. There were five write-in ballots and seven invalid ballots cast.

Car goes for swim in lake

by CINDY CARAVELLO

Two divers from the Palatine Fire Department swam into the lake on the north side of Harper's campus on April 11 to help retrieve a car that apparently rolled in the night before.

Kevin King, public safety supervisor at Harper, said that three witnesses watched as the royal blue Maverick slipped into the water at about 1:30 Tuesday night when the driver left the auto in neutral with no parking brake on Public Safety officials were notified immediately after the incident occurred. Since no one was in the car at the time, operations to remove the vehicle were halted until Wednesday afternoon. King said they started to wait "for more favorable conditions" before sending the divers in.

Divers John Forsberg and Alex Schank, both were black, rubber suits, flippers and oxygen tanks during their rescue attempt. They made problem while under the water was the visibility. They had to use the "feel" technique to locate the car and attach two steel chains around its frame.

A private towing company then pulled the car onto land while King and his public safety cadets stood painting the area in the pouring rain.

Fla license stickers were on the car's windshield but officials declined to offer the name of the owner.

"It was accident as far as we can see," King said.

Munson, Mills win board seats

Shirley Munson, left, and Ray Mills were elected to three year terms on the Harper Board of Trustees recently. Munson won her re-election bid with a total of 5,135 votes and Mills received 3,823 votes. He takes the seat vacated by Jessalyn Nicklas, a longtime Harper trustee, who did not run for re-election. The pair took their seats during a reorganizational board meeting last Thursday night.

The subject should concern health issues on the college campus.

The length, format and style of the essay are left up to the individual.

Entries should be submitted by Sept. 1 to Leah Dickstein, M.D., Student Health Service, University of Louisville, Louisville, Ky. 40202.

The contest is sponsored by the Mid-American College Health Association (MACHA).

First prize is an all-expense paid trip to the 1975 MACHA meeting. Second prize is $50.

Letter to the Editor

Blim clarifies format of WHCM radio

Dear Editor:

This is in response to the letter from Mark White printed in The Harbinger's April with issue. Let me clarify some things for Mr. White. First of all, WHCM is started in format to provide the students with the best possible service. From 6 to 10 a.m., WHCM plays top 40 or contemporary music. From 10 to 1 p.m., WHCM plays album and progressive rock music. From 1 to 4 p.m., WHCM is formatted in easy listening music. From 6 to 10 p.m., WHCM is once again formatted in album and progressive rock. These formats were determined by a survey given to Harper College students last year. During these formats, I have told the D.J.'s to play only the requests that fit the particular format. In this way, the music stays somewhat consistent and artists like Debbie Boone and Pink Floyd will not be heard back to back. In reference to Mr. White's question, we will play the student's requests as long as they fit our format.

Secondly, being that it is late in the school year, some of the time slots in our weekly broadcast schedule have become vacant for one reason or another. When there is no disk jockey for the time slot, I play a two-hour pre-recorded music tape on air that period. I confess that our supply of music tapes is low, and at times the same tape is obviously being played much too frequently. The tape that contains the Steve Miller and Gary Wright songs is a tape that I recorded, myself. The reason we have such low tapes is that to record a tape, WHCM must be off the air. Since we are on some 60 hours each week, off the air time is precious and is often reserved for other production purposes. Over Spring vacation, I plan to make several more music tapes to help prevent the problem of constant repetition.

Thirdly, let me respond to Mr. White's comment about the "usual array of music." The staff to WHCM Radio consists of approximately 25 Harper College students who are involved with many other things besides WHCM. Since this is the case, they may not have the time to devote to expanding their knowledge of music. Therefore, it is possible to hear the same song in the same person's show two weeks in a row. Throughout the day, also, many new songs and artists are being played. This is because the D.J.'s are told to play a certain percentage of new music in their shows.

I hope that I have been able to make matters clear. If Mr. White has any further questions or if he would like to apply to become a member of the WHCM staff, I suggest that he contact me. I can be reached in the WHCM office, room A321, between the hours of 4 a.m. and 6 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Sincerely yours,
John W. Blum

Student jobs open apply in counseling

The Counseling Department is hiring students to assist counselors in coordinating manner orientation sessions.

These orientation sessions are for new students who will be attending Harper for the first time this fall. Those who are hired will be involved in a variety of orientation duties.

These summer jobs will begin in the beginning of June and end in the middle of July. Hours will be from 8 a.m. to approximately 3 p.m. on May 7 and 8.

A salary is $2.00 per hour or your current salary if you are presently employed as a student aid. Students who are planning on going into any career which involves dealing with people will find the experience of this job to be very beneficial.

Students interested in applying for one of these positions may pick up an application in the Counseling Center, A307, or contact Bruce Bolger in D319.

Track nears end of busy season

by JOE KURKE

The Harper track team has been busy individually and teamwise. Team-wise the team has completed in the Wheaton Relays, the Junior College Relays, the Pleasant Valley International and the Carthage Invitational.

Individually, almost every single member of the team has to perform in two or more events because of lack of numbers.

The Hawks finished a strong third in the Junior College Relays and finished fifth against some very tough competition at Pleasant Valley.

Harper can always count on some point in the javelin throw from Greg Davis and Jay Lenahan, who finished 12 at the Junior College Relays and 23 at Pleasant Valley, the winner being from a two-year school.

"Greg can definitely throw farther. He was getting the javelin way to high, and the wind was catching it causing him to lose distance. But I think we're disappointed that he lost at Pleasant Valley," said Head Track Coach Bob Nolan.

No one is exempt from going double duty as Davis also played second in the triple jump, setting a Harper track record with a leap of 41' 10". Lenahan took a second in the shot put and second in the discus.

The 440 relay team of Mike Walston, Devin Healy, Dave Barn, and Mark Nussgruber, who was replacing the injured Paul Panagiotis, placed third with a 4:41. The sprinter, middle of Walston, Healy, Jeff Brydges and Ervin captured a second place behind Wright with a clocking of 1:31.

The mile relay team of the same people took a fourth place. Harper got some other strong showings out of Jim Lancaster and Jan Langert, 4-5 in the 3-mile respectively and a buoy Ben Warring, who finished fourth in the triple jump, fourth in the long jump and second in the high jump.

One of the biggest bright spots at Pleasant Valley was Sue Valania who on her first three of the year before the qualifying mark by over five feet for the discus with a loss of 120's.

Sprinter Mike Walston, third from left, has been Harper's 'Mr. Everything' this season by consistently placing in every meet he has been in. Walston and the Harper track team will battle it out with DuPage and Wright Colleges for NAC conference honors.

This was a good accomplishment for her first meet of the year. Last year with her three it would have placed her sixth in the national meet," said Nolan.

The more chances she gets to throw the more chances for her to improve."

Sprinter Mike Walston has probably been the busiest member of the whole team, as he runs the 100, 200, and 400 meters. He has been the best one on his last mile. "Walston tied the school record of the 200 meters with a 2:11, and in the 400 relay game he moved the and ran the 200 meters.

In the 100 meters Walston ran an 11:0, the winner was timed at 10:8, the equivalent of a 9.2 hundred.

Nolan said, "it was a very tough meet for sprinters. In most meets that 11.4 would have been good for a first or second. Mike is a very tough competitor, he has had to see a lot of duty but has run a tough race every time. He had to run three 800's at Pleasant Valley and his best one was his last one. "Walston tied the school record of the 200 meters with a 2:11, and in the 400 relay game he moved the Hawks up from sixth to second on his leg.

Jeff Brydges turned in some top efforts with a 4:40 in the 1,000 meters, and in the 800 meters, in coach Nolan's words "there by everybody" on the outside in the last 220 to move up from sixth to third, timed at 1:58.4.

Jay Lenahan also placed fourth in both the shot put and discus. The team now hopes to make a strong showing in the NAC conference meet as they have someone who could score in every event this Saturday at Trilon at 1:30 p.m.

ARIES: March 21 to April 19: Stubborn persistence is a good matter that won't "give" results in frustration. Channel your energy toward more permanent and productive areas. The realistic in your goals and appreciate the progress you've made.

Taurus: April 20 to May 20: This low energy period to launch projects is progress. Tie up loose ends, and clear the decks for a more active period coming up next week. Get out socially and get in touch with people you haven't seen for a while.

GEMINI: May 21 to June 20: He-most the urge to initiate action for now. Take a seat on the sidelines—work quietly to yourself and don't get involved in personality conflicts. An overly active social life could keep you from working on things that are more important to you.

CANCER: June 21 to July 21: You could feel unhappy that things aren't moving as fast as you'd like, but it is a temporary kind of "stalemate." If changing jobs, get the ball rolling by actively looking around and making contacts—the effort.

LEO: July 22 to Aug. 22: A good time to relax and let others "carry the ball." Start planning your vacation coming up later in the year. Listen to the ideas of male or close associates and respond only after careful consideration of the factors involved.

VIRGO: Aug. 23 to Sept. 22: Accent is on study, intellectual pursuits and matters at a distance from you. Romance may be on your agenda too. Health matters are favored and it is an excellent time to adjust your diet for any desired weight change.

LIBRA: Sept. 23 to Oct. 22: Now you can look to your more personal interests that have been set aside due to high activity in other areas. Meditate, dream, look over the past and make future plans. Beautify your home base in unexpressive ways.

SCORPIO: Oct. 23 to Nov. 21: Energy is high and this is an exciting, active period. Finances and career matters are accorded in a favorable way. Investment matters, long term credit contracts can all be investigated with good results.

SAGITTARIUS: Nov. 22 to Dec. 21: You may have to give up something out of your life, but you can find the strength to do it. Direct your thoughts to career and personal rewards. Release any feelings of sorrow and look to the future cycle.

CAPRICORN: Jan. 20 to Feb. 18: Be realistic about business and financial matters; you could be overly optimistic. Just now. Stick to your budget for the present time. Large purchases and extravagances are not favored and may put you "in a bind" later on.

PISCES: Feb. 19 to March 20: Things are looking up for you and you could be in high spirits. A career goal may be developing into an optimistic plan that will give you greater prestige and status. Financial increase could be upcoming.

Workshops

Pat Beardon and Sandra Kinner, co-founders of Elk Grove Township Youth Services, will lead an all-day workshop on "Coping with Stress in Everyday Living" Thursday, from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. at the Schaumburg Library. Tuition is $6, and participants are asked to bring a sack lunch.

To enroll, call the college Continuing Education Admissions Office, ext. 439.

Rose Ann Richards and Glenda Hochstetler, emergency room nurses at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, will present a lecture-demonstration seminar, "The Jack and Jill Workshop," Wednesday, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the board room. Tuition is $12.50 and includes lunch.

The workshop will illustrate a common sense approach to dealing with children's accidents and illnesses, when to call for help and what to do before it arrives.

To enroll, call the college Continuing Education Admissions Office, ext. 439.

Child care for a fee is available by calling for reservations at ext. 385.

Scholarship

The Nette and Jesse Gervy Scholarship Foundation is offering a tuition and fees scholarship for the Fall '79 semester at Harper.

Criteria for selection will be financial need and consistent effort shown by student to obtain the best grades possible.

Applications are available in the Financial Aid Office, A284.

Deadline for submitting applications is May 15.

Applications are to be submitted to the Financial Aid Office, A284.

Meeting

There will be a special Student Senate meeting at 12:30 p.m. Thursday in the Staff Counseling room. The purpose of the meeting will be to discuss and approve the Student Activity Budget for 1979-80.

This is an open meeting and all interested students are invited.

Section 504

Harper College is in compliance with Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 which states that: "No otherwise qualified handicapped individual in the United States, shall, solely by reason of his handicap, be excluded from the participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance."

Metheny performs Friday

The Pat Metheny Group will appear in concert at 10 p.m. Friday in the College Center Lounge, Bldg. A.

At the age of 18, with only one semester at the University of Miami, Metheny was asked to join the faculty at the school. The following year he became the youngest instructor at the Berklee College of Music in Boston, Mass. He got the job through a recommendation from Gary Burton, whom he had met at the World Jazz Festival in 1972.

Burton then asked Metheny to join his quartet. After serving a three-year apprenticeship, Metheny struck out on his own and formed his own band.

The group has cut three albums already with a fourth to be released soon.

Seating is limited for the concert so tickets should be purchased as soon as possible. Tickets are $1 for students and staff, $4 for the public.

Further information is available from the Student Activities Office, A-28, ext. 382.

A free Frisbee demonstration will be performed by "The Aces" on Wednesday at noon in front of Bldg. A. The Aces have performed 750 shows in 24 states. "The Aces" are sponsored by the Program Board.

Applications for officer positions in these student organizations are now available in the Student Activities Office, A284.

Applications for the positions of Editor-in-Chief and Business Manager of the Hartinger may be picked up in the Student Activities Office between 9 a.m. and 6 p.m. daily. They must be returned to the office by Tuesday, April 24.

Harper's radio station WHCM has positions of station manager and program director open for next year. Students interested should submit their resumes to A284 by Friday.

All officer and five chairmanship positions on Program Board are open for next year. Students interested in being an officer or chairman of films, concerts, special events, afternoon activities or public relations should pick up applications in the Student Activities Office.

Reactions to proposed Student Activities budget

by DENNIE TESCHKE

The 1979-80 Student Activities Budget goes before the Board of Trustees tonight for approval. The 1979-80 budget was approved two weeks ago by the student senate after 146,000 cuts from 1978-79 in budget requests from Student Activities.

Jeanne Puskas, director of student activities, said the money was cut from the budget requests to equal the amount Student Activities estimates they will receive from student activity fees next year.

"I am not happy to make the cuts," she said, "but some things had to be reduced or eliminated. We projected $45,000 in activity fee revenue for next year and you can't budget for more money than you have."

Among the areas cut were Health Services, Point of View literary magazine, which was eliminated, national travel for all clubs and organizations, intercollegiate athletics and intramurals, and decreased in funds for several clubs and organizations.

Most of the people involved in the areas which received cuts were un-derstanding as to why the cuts were made. Ms. Puskas said:

Except one, Les McKay, director of Health Services, requested $12,500 for the Health Services physician but as-duced the request. Health Ser-vices was allotted its share of un-derpaid balance from this year's budget.

The doctor is available to students two hours a day, five days a week and two hours one evening a week.

"There's no way we can live on it (the allotment). The way we have lived on it (the budget) the last seven years," Ms. McKay said. "I don't think the cut was justified because I decreased no request this year to $3,000."

In light of the situation would Health Service begin charging stu-dents for services next year?

"It's very difficult to charge stu-dents not knowing how many students would use the service each week," Ms. McKay said.

There is no way of knowing ex-actly how many students use the service. On one day last week the doctor saw 17 people and on an- other day he saw 11 people during the first hour he was there.

"I will continue to be very con-cerned and be an advocate of med-ical care for college students. We will continue to offer the best ser-vice we can," Ms. McKay ex-plained.

Monat, speaks here

William R. Monat, newly an-nounced President of Northern Illi-nois University (NIU), will be the commencement speaker at Harper's eleventh annual gradua-tion, May 28, when approximately one thousand students will receive degrees or certificates of comple-tion.

A graduate of Virginia Junior College in Virginia, Minnesota, Monat completed his undergradu-ate work at the University of Min-nesota where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. He continued his stu-dies at Wayne State University, earning his Ph.D. in political science from the University of Minnesota.

Dr. Monat has served as faculty member, department chairman and administrator at Pennsylvania State and NYU, and City University of New York. He returned to NIU as vice president and provost in 1968, and was appointed President in July 1978.

In addition to his academic posts, Monat has also served as ex-ecutive assistant to a governor of Michigan and as consultant on manpower and budgeting to two Pennsylvania governors. He was, for one year, budget director for the Speaker and Majority Leader in the Pennsylvania State House of Representatives. In 1977, he was named by Illinois Governor James Thompson as a permanent member of the Governor's Panel on State Government Reorganiza-tion.

A prolific author, his books in-clude Letter Deep in War and The Pluton Library and Dr. Communist. He has also contributed chapters to eight other books and was editor of two books, including Public Education in an Era of Change, and has contributed to the Michigan Professional Journals.

DR. WILLIAM R. Monat, President of Northern Illinois University, will speak at commencement services at Harper on May 28.

Newspaper wins journalism awards

by GUY CONROY

"We won from a second place to a first place rating this year which shows our growing professional-ism," said Deborah A. Teschke, editor in chief of the HAR-BINGER.

This year the Associated Col-lege Press service, "ACP," based in Minnesota, awarded the new-spaper with a first class rating for the fall semester. The rating was for overall layout, editorial, editor-ial cartoons, copy editing, feature stories, headline writing, sports stories, columns, photographs and hard news.

The award explained that the Harbinger contained good sound journalism and that it reported actual news well.

The ratings are given out twice a year, one for the fall semester and one for the spring semester. In spring 1978, the Harbinger received a second class rating from ACP.

The Harbinger also received two blue ribbon awards from the Illi-nois Association of Colleges Journal-ists (IACJ). The awards were presented during an all-day conference at the College of Lake County in Grayslake. One award was for the coverage of the slaying murder on campus, "a good round-up of a difficult story," the award read.

The second award was for the good creation of unity in layout by combining pictures with story ma-terial for the issue covering the campus murder.

"I feel the staff did a good job handling this difficult situation, it was important that the students know what happened."

The rating for the spring semes-ter issues will not be revealed until mid-summer or early next fall, as they are not sent in until the begin-ning of the summer.

THE HARBINGER STAFF has won three awards this year for good sound journalism. Staff members left to right are: (front row) Editor-in-chief, Deborah

Photographer, Scott Armstrong. Next year's Editor will be Mike Petersen.

Clubs, services hit hard from decreased funds

We think the cuts were necessary and although many people are affected and have been upset, the budget committee had a very difficult time and a short deadline to meet.

Student accuses Public Safety

That something was the random search of young men and women. In this case we are to presume for the presence of alcohol. As I purchased my ticket and walked in the door, I and two friends encountered a young man in a Harper Security guard uniform who, to the probably desirable to prevent any harm which might reasonably be expected to occur to the performers as a result of bottles being thrown by a drunken and disorderly group of rock fans (a not unfamiliar sight), it is the manner by which the security guards undertook to preclude this that I object to.

Officers keep campus safe

by JOAN PETERSON
Even though Harper, had not been the most crime-ridden campus in Illinois, students can always rest assured of 24-hour police protection.

"We do have crime on campus, but we don't have a great deal of crime," but it could happen," said Harper Public Safety Chief Kevin King. "People think crime only happens in Chicago, and even though Harper is located in a good area people should be cautious. We don't live in a plastic bubble."

The Public Safety department, staffed with seven full-time officers, five male and two female, is responsible for the protection of about $50 million worth of campus as well as its students, teachers, faculty and visitors, according to King.

The officers have full police powers on campus, which include parking regulation enforcement. They spend 10 percent of their time patrolling the parking lot and 50 percent patrolling the buildings.

Public Safety officers, before becoming an officer, are required to take a 300-hour training course within six months, which includes a standard first aid course. King said that most of the officers are trained in Cardio Pulmonary Resuscitation, CPR, through Harper's VPR course.

The Public Safety department is also staffed with eight to 10 part-time cadets through Harper's Criminal Justice and Fire Science Technology programs. They are paid $5 per hour and gain on-the-job experience in the law enforcement field.

King said, "Cadets are basically student able, they are very important to our department. They provide good work for the campus. They work with the officers, staff the office, run the radio and maintain the squad cars."

Since the department's busiest job is to control the parking lot, occasionally they must give out a ticket or two. This, of course, doesn't make them the most popular members of the Harper

CHIEF KEVIN KING of Harper's Public Safety Department says that even though Harper doesn't have a lot of crime, his department is always there around the clock to see that it continues that way.

campus. "Not everyone can be a campus police officer," Officer Don Bulva said. "We have to deal with people in a different environment. It's a different approach to law enforcement."

King said that though there have been probably been several rapes, assaults and robbers on campus they were left unreported. "Many people don't know about us, so they don't report crimes to us," King said. "We do need the eyes and ears of students on campus to report these crimes. They can pick up any phone on campus and dial 211 whenever there's trouble."

Because the officers are not allowed to carry guns, when a serious crime is reported they must contact the Palatine Police Department for help. The Public Safety department has just purchased radios that will enable direct communication from Harper to the Palatine Department.

A fairly controversial subject involving the Public Safety department is the searching of the belongings of concert goers before entering the concert. King said,

"It's the desire of the college administration to keep contraband alcohol and drugs off of campus."

On the back of each concert ticket it states, "Management reserves the right to inspect any packages or objects in possession of patron, & to refuse admission or remove any person refusing inspection or where inspection produces content which management deems unlawful, dangerous or prohibited by college regulations."

King said, "We try to respect people's personal rights but it's our responsibility. Generally we don't arrest people for alcohol and small amounts of drugs." He said that only if they are hassled, in the person arrested and given a $50 fine.

"We found quite a bit of contraband this year coming into concerts, maybe a couple of pounds of marijuana and cases of beer and wine. All were destroyed."

King pointed out, no matter what the circumstances, the Public Safety department is a service organization and that even though they are not always the most popular organization on campus, they would like to be the most helpful.

Policeman talks on safety OFFICER Jim Haider of the Palatine Police Department gave up on personal safety to a group of Harper students recently.

(Photo by Scott Armstrong)

"If someone calls you on the phone and requests personal information, protect yourself first. Ask for their name, their company's name and their business phone number. Look this information up in the telephone book and then call them back. If the information they gave you is phony, and not found in the phone book, call the police immediately and ask for an officer to come by reporting suspicious activity. Protect you as well as others."

Street Safety

"After you have left your home

there are again some basic safety rules to keep in mind. Most people nowadays travel almost everywhere by car. Once you get in your vehicle, lock all the doors before doing anything else and check them over you have exited your car. Never park your car in poorly lighted areas after dark. If you have valuables, place them in the trunk or out of sight. Packages and other items left in the passenger compartment only tempt the possible thief," he said.

If out alone in your car and you develop car trouble, after opening the hood, remain in the locked car. When someone approaches to help, roll the window down slightly and ask them to notify the first available station they come to or to call the police.

When walking alone women should keep their purses next to their bodies and use the strap if their purse has one. Some women carry their purses upside down so that if matched, the contents will fall out. Ground products are available which can also turn your purse into a portable burglar alarm.

Haider also told of other safety

VIEWPOINTS

Weekly writer tells of weekly woes

As I sit here at the typewriter with my little crumpled bottle of legal paper near at hand, I am wondering how I shall survive the shock of knowing that this week's column will be my last.

To say that writing for the Harbinger has been a kind of chore would be an understatement. I'll admit that I've had my ups and downs, but at least it's not from taking drugs.

During my day on the staff, I accumulated a tremendous store of knowledge about life. I found out that if you verbally attack dentists, jugglers or Public Safety, somebody is going to try and have you removed from the staff or at least shut between the eyes.

I also discovered that if you refuse a date's frisk, they'll never send a rebuttal because they realize that I'm not trying to be vicious and besides they're always spaced out on drugs anyway.

Looking back over this year I remember a reliable source who said me that I would have to develop a thick skin if I wanted to continue writing Generally Speaking. Well, I stopped using my facial monitor and if you're interested, it really works.

As I write these last few parting paragraphs, I would like to mention something about Harper that I will always cherish and keep close to my heart for the rest of my life or at least until the beginning of the summer.

The memory that continues to haunt me is the thought of bending

Generally Speaking

by CINDY CARAVELLO

over the drinking fountain in the library and getting water squirted up my nose.

Harper College will always be remembered as a unique institution for learning. It's the only place where you can walk through the parking lot for 45 minutes and still get nowhere.

As you may have noticed, this column never seems to contain any information of importance and it also never contains anything that is relevant.

Many have found Generally Speaking a very insulting and crudely written column, that takes cheap shots at various groups or situations. It is very reassuring to me to see that I completed what I set out to do. I do admit that after writing this column, I don't have a single friend on campus, but I didn't have any before I started either.

Sure, Generally Speaking is about to kick the bucket. I would just like to leave you with these few words.

Try to be happy.
Life is a joke.
Don't be so serious.
One day we'll all croak.

Term papers cheat many

No student who has successfully used "mail order" term papers will forget the feeling of putting one over on the prof. But it turns out students may also be duped by term paper companies who themselves plagiarize the term papers.

Youngstown State University's latest paper, The Jamboree, recently discovered one such case in the process of investigative purchased term papers. Jamboree reporter Diana Clechilo brought "A Critique of Justin Kaplan's Biography of Samuel Langhorne Clemens" from Research Assistance, a Los Angeles-based firm that offers some 500 research papers in its 164 page brochure.

When YSU English professor Dr. John Mann, who wasn't aware the paper was purchased, graded the paper, he said it was worth an "A" or a "B." He noted, though, that it seemed familiar. With Mann's help, Clechilo located an article in a 1966 issue of Saturday Review which was "very similar" to the Research Assistance paper.

Frank Johnson of Research Assistance insisted that, in the company's eight years in business, such incidences of plagiarism "have never happened." Johnson said College Press Service that while there was no editorial review or fact-checking of Research Assistance writers, the firm did hire a "very reliable staff."

Students, however, had best not be so trusting. "This kind of thing," commented a Jamboree editor, "probably happens quite often."

to keep in mind when walking. "Wear clothes which will permit you to run if you must. Avoid getting on elevators with strangers and if you do, stand near the floor buttons. If needed, you can push as many buttons as possible to get the elevator to a floor quickly. If you suspect you are being followed from the street, enter a store, or wedge yourself into a phone booth and call the police. When a car is following you, turn and walk in the opposite direction, get the license number and notify the police.

"When you suspect your car is being followed, don't drive home. Go to where you can obtain assistance. Help is available at fire stations, police departments, all night groceries and gas stations. If you want you can drive around a block, immediately blowing your car horn until help arrives. Someone is bound to call the police, so the danger will cease," he said.

If Attacked

"If attacked the first rule is to low is to stay calm. There are many courses of action available if assaulted. Run, scream, fight, fight or submit and hope for the best, Hatcher said.

"There are two schools of thought on what to do in an assault situation: one is to retaliate, and the other is to think one's way through the crisis.

The officer said, "If you believe yourself to be the type of person who can fight, your first bet is to do so at the onset of the attack. When fighting an attacker you should do so violently and with force. The most vulnerable areas to strike on a male attacker are the eyes, throat, fingers and groin. You can use your fingers to poke and gouge the assailant's eyes, with your hand you can strike his neck as if to drive his Adam's apple out the back of his throat, or you may be able to grab one of his fingers and bend it back until he submits.

"The groin is also a vulnerable area. If you can execute a knee lift to this area from a balanced position you should defeat the attack. If the attacker grabs you from behind you can move your hips to the side, while using your hands to arrange his things, reach back and crush one or both of his testicles.

Anything used as a weapon may be taken away and used against a person. For this reason, weapons are not recommended. Many of the items which a woman would utilize as a weapon are in her purse, and chances are this is the first thing she would drop in an attack.

Post Attack

If one should become the victim of a violent sexual assault such as rape, or (in the case of men, deviate sexual assault), the first action to take is to call the police. Several points which you should consider in whether or not to call are: the attacker is still free and will attack again; his next victim may not be able to report it; and he is a very sick individual and needs professional assistance.

Upon calling the police after an attack, a victim will be taken to the nearest hospital for an examination by a physician and for the collection of evidence. After an attack one should not shower or douche, wash or remove the clothing one was wearing, as these all contain valuable evidence to prove guilt in such a case.

At the hospital, the attending physician will take public hair clippings, fingernail scrapings, vaginal swabs and in some cases a rectal swab. If you have been scratched, cut, or stabbed, photographs will have to be taken of the injuries you have received," Hatcher said.

During and after the physical examination police will speak with the victim in order to obtain information of the occurrence while it is still fresh in her mind.

The police will also assist in obtaining counseling assistance. There are several agencies available for this purpose. Some of the services which are available are personal counseling and group rap sessions to assist in dealing with the emotional trauma, as well as court advocates to assist throughout legal proceedings. The Illinois Attorney General's office also offers financial aid up to $10,000 to pay medical expenses and loss of earnings.

If you have any questions or would like a program on Personal Safety, feel free to contact your Police Department's Crime Prevention Unit," Hatcher said.

Teacher unions grow

Beaton University has the largest unionized faculty in the country so negotiations between faculty and administrators have drawn national attention.

Collective bargaining is a dirty word to college administrators, but it may be a word they will have to get used to. If the Beaton College situation is an indication.

The university professors, members of the American Association of University Professors, voted overwhelmingly to accept a contract giving them a 32.4 percent raise over the next three years.

Cheap food

An Ice Cream Social and Mini-Concert will be held at Harper Wednesday at 12 p.m. in the north patio of Bldg. A.

The mini-concert features folk guitarist Dore Rudof. Combining the lyrics and singing of Gordon Lightfoot, a dash of Simon and Garfunkel and an ability to do different types of music, Rudof created a style all his own.

Students may purchase their favorite blend of ice cream, chocolate, hotwatermelon and whipped cream for 10 cents. This social is sponsored by Program Board.

Voters

The Political Science Club is sponsoring a voter registration day at Harper Wednesday. It will be held on the second floor of Bldg. A, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Further information is available from Dale Markay, ext. 244.

Student aids

In recognition of the contribution made by student aids we are planning a self-appreciation get-together to meet one another, relax, enjoy and celebrate the end of the year in an informal setting. Interested student aids may call Pam Skahan, Pat Ray or Alex Cusack at 3404 to make a reservation (a must) by May 11 or if you have any questions.

The function will be from 12 to 3, may 17 at Cesar's restaurant, Golf and Higgins roads.

Legal exam

Prior to entering the Legal Technology Program at Harper, prospective students must pass an entrance exam. An exam for individuals planning to enter the program during the Fall 1979 semester will be held May 24 at 9 a.m. in A-207.

After completing the Harper admission application, interested individuals should contact the con-legn Testing Center, ext. 341, to register for the exam. On the scheduled test date, applicants must submit a written resume and a statement of career goals.

The Legal Technology Program, accredited by the American Bar Association, is a statewide approved program offering cooperative education courses at other community colleges. Trained to become technically qualified assistants to lawyers, students are taught the basic skills needed in an effective working relationship with a lawyer as well as an in-depth knowledge in a specialized area. Under the supervision of a lawyer, the legal technician may collect data, conduct interviews, or research documents. The technician may also organize data and do detail work in a specialized area. He or she may also draft legal documents and follow through with legal procedures.

Marketing

Martin S. Margules, C.E., General Agent of the John Hancock Mutual Life Ins. Co., will be at Harper on Thursday at 10 a.m. to discuss opportunities in John Hancock's Marketing Management Program. He will be in F102. For information, or to arrange an appointment, call the Job Service.

Workshop

"Back to School," an all-day workshop for women who are considering entering college, will be offered by the Harper Women's Program Tuesday, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in A211ab. Tuition is $20.50 and includes lunch.

The workshop will include information about admission procedures, uncertainties about competencies, and obstacles revolving around family responsibilities. The afternoon session will include a pre-admission counseling session.

To enroll, students may call the Continuing Education Admissions office, ext. 410.

Concert

The Harper Concert Choir and Harper Community Orchestra will appear in a joint concert on Sunday at 8:30 p.m. in the college center lounge. Featured on the program is the Symphony #1 in C major by Beethoven and the Coronation Anthem #1 and #2 by Handel.

The Concert Choir is under the direction of Jerry Davidson, assistant professor of music at Harper. Professor George Nakas, the conductor of the Harper Community Orchestra, will direct the opening number of the concert, the Beethoven Symphony, written by Beethoven while still a promising music student. The work has become part of the standard literature of contemporary orchestras, but it utilizes the typical classical period instrumentation, rather than the large nineteenth century orchestra called for by most of Beethoven's contemporaries.

This last concert of the season is presented free of charge.

Seminars

The Harper Institute for Management Development is offering several all-day seminars including Coping with Management Stress, Friday, $75; Accounting and Finance for the Non-Financial Manager, May 14 and 15, $25; Warehouse and Distribution Center Operations, May 17, $75; Developing an Affirmative Action Plan,

May 18, $75; Problem Solving and Decision Making, May 22, $75; Productivity Improvement Techniques, May 23, $75.

All seminars will be held in the Board Room of Building A. Tuition includes luncheon, refreshments and all seminar materials.

For additional information students may call the Harper Institute for Management Development, ext. 581 or 582.

Student escort service proposed

By GAIL MILLER

An issue is being made regarding the amount of rape, robbery and kidnapping being inflicted upon students at various college campuses around the country. Although Harper may not have students wandering to and from dormitories in the middle of the night, there are many students equally worried about the safety of Harper's parking lots for students going to and from night classes.

One possible solution which has been proposed to alleviate this is the formation of a student escort service. This service would provide a chaperone for students returning to their cars following evening classes. It would most likely be run from the student center office. The chaperones would consist strictly of volunteers, actively involved in student activities.

One of the service's most staunch supporters is sophomore Dale Markay, a student senate representative. Markay is majoring in general studies. He plans to transfer to a four-year institution to study political science and international relations. Following a summer in Europe, he is also involved with WHCM, Harper's radio station and has been actively seeking support for the formation of an escort service.

The escort service is not a new idea. Many colleges, such as Circle Campus and Northwestern University, have them. It also was not inspired by the killing in Harper's parking lot in March since this was an isolated incident and took place during the day, said Markay.

Markay explained that if enough people are interested in the service to insure its formation, the escort would give people peace of mind. He said that if the program became legit, enough "the school situation" might be enlisted with student senate money for gas.

DALE Markay, student senator, is the driving force behind an escort service for students. (photo by Scott Armstrong)

Markay did warn of possible abuse. "This is not a taxi service," he said. "It is not just a means to take people to their cars. It's peace of mind."

Markay has talked to several authorities on the subject. Harper President James McGraw is said to be the response of the students. Funds are being done both in the Harbinger and on WHCM radio. Student Activity Director Jeanne Fulkerson said the idea sounded good. The school's lawyer said that there are some risks. For example, if something were to happen, the escort service might be blamed.

All in all, though, he felt that the benefits outweighed the possible hazards. Public Safety Chief Kevin King told Markay that he was unsure of the need, but wouldn't interfere.

Markay said that many women have called him to give their support to the formation of the escort service. He said that these women have told him that there are others who feel the same way.

Although there does not seem to be any direct opposition to the act, there are many students who feel that it would be unnecessary.

Many people don't believe that there is a need for such a service. Some have also made alternative suggestions such as better lighting and more controlled surveillance by Public Safety in the evening hours. The deciding factor will be whether or not enough students want the program to make it worthwhile.

Students attend model UN

by CINDY CARAVELLO

"The US abuses its power in the UN," said Carolyn Vaugnet after she and six others from Harper college attended a five-day session this Spring at the Statler Hilton in New York City to serve on the National Model United Nations (NMUN).

The students observed the US and Russia were the two countries that seemed to be the most influential in the UN.

The students from Harper represented a small, oil-producing country in Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates. The model delegates to the country met with many of the problems that the Arab country is now faced with. "I learned how difficult it is to work with different countries," said Sheryl Reynolds, one of the participants in the Political Science Club sponsored trip.

The students began reviewing literature on UAE in late January so that they would be up to date on what was happening in the country they were expected to represent.

Before going into the NMUN meetings, the Harper delegates were given time to meet and talk with the actual UAE ambassadors to the US. The students then split up into their seven different committees which included the Social Humanitarian and Cultural Committee, the Economic and Social Committee, the Trade and Development Board, the Special Political Committee, and the Political Security Committee. Dale Markay was the head delegate for the general assembly.

The model UN delegates found out that in order to get ahead they had to "round up their support" and "get their own seat."

"It was a challenge to put yourself in another country's position," said Carolyn Vaugnet.

Reynolds said that the trip helped them to "gain further understanding of the UN." They learned how the different countries cooperate with each other. Mike LaVarey, the club's treasurer, said that the $2,000 needed for the annual trip was paid for by the Harper and $500 was donated by community groups.

HARPER POLITICAL SCIENCE students temporarily changed from more students in United Nations Ambassadors as part of a national Model United Nations in New York City.

Finals: how to study for exams

(com) This, indeed, is an unpleasant time of the year for most students.

Final exams are approaching. Most students are trying to get caught up with their work. Many students are concerned about the exams, many are developing anxiety, some are feeling extreme pressure.

Preparing for tests
"Obviously the most important thing to do is to have set up a regular study schedule during the semester. That is probably the best way to reduce test anxiety," says Ron Ragatz, who has led stress management groups.

"Set a reasonable amount of time for each subject" on your study schedule, he advises, "and stick to it."

Rich Gross, an assistant director of a university learning center, said a student should "come up with a list of the kinds of things you have to do to study for each class."

Ragatz says a student must honestly evaluate what he needs know about each subject, and what he needs to know for the final exam.

When preparing for the final exams, experts say students should schedule ample relaxation time in order to get the most out of studying and to reduce the anticipation, pressure and anxiety that students experience before exams.

"By allowing yourself relaxation time, getting a good night's sleep, I will help the studying that you have already done," Ragatz says.

"For me, it would be something physical like jogging."

Students tend to put too much pressure on themselves before a test, making preparing for the test more of an ordeal than it should be.

"Students make themselves more anxious by saying 'I've just got to pass this test.' When you do that, you go beyond the point of being productive," Ragatz says.

A student, he says, should tell himself something rational and constructive such as "I know this test is important and I want to do well."

However, Ragatz says if a student can constructively challenge himself to perform well on an exam, it can help him.

If you are the type of person who can respond to this type of challenge without being inefficient in studying, and without becoming anxious, then it is okay," he says.

"I think it is most for people to challenge themselves."

Gross said students should forget problems they have had earlier in the semester while preparing for the final exam. "Don't cry over spilled milk, over the fact that you didn't study enough during the semester," he says.

"That isn't going to help you now, even though it may be true," Gross says.

Gross says worrying about the problem only gets in the way of useful studying for the exam.

Some students come to college, see the problems the new environment creates, and try to adjust their studying habits to meet it. Some students never correct their study skills problems. Others adjust easily to college studies.

Each individual has his own response to the high level of college studies, and each individual must develop his own approach to studying and test preparation.

Taking the test
"It is important that you allow yourself 10 minutes before a test to relax," says Ragatz.

"Find something to do, go for a walk, find something to look at in the Union."

Ragatz says University counselors are there a precursor to students who get too tense just before a test.

The students are told to relax at their machines, take deep breaths and clear their mind.

For students who have an hour or two between two exams, Ragatz says it is simple for students to clear up concerns about the first test by checking answers. "If you need to clear your mind from the last test, that's great."

He also feels students can do an overview study of the materials for the second test, or study a particular point. But use much studying right before a test, would be damaging.

"Taking tests is a skill that isn't taught to people. Some learn to do it, some have more difficulties than others."

"Get to the test early, if possible."

Get yourself relaxed, familiar with the room. Collect your thoughts.

Many times a student will look at the test and be shocked by the type of questions they see. The result can be a blank out, where the student panics and can't remember.

the class material.

"Blanking on a question is a normal occurrence. It happens in everyone in college," Gross says.

Assure yourself that you studied the material. Realize that drawing a blank is normal. Do the questions that you know. Get the flow of the test," he says.

Working questions that you know tends to relax you," he says.

Gross says if you are blank on a question, as you proceed throughout the rest of the test you will begin to recall information pertinent to the question. When that happens, the student should make notes in the margin of the test to use when finally answering the question. When handling an essay question, Gross says "the first thing to do is answer the question in the first sentence. Then spend the rest of the time developing the answer."

When students write essays, he says, "they get so lost that they often forget to answer the question."

Don't make the instructor work to find the answer."

After wading through dozens of essays, the instructor will be pleased to find one that gets to the point right away. "Imagine how stated the instructor would be to find the answer in the first sentence," says Gross.

And if the student runs out of time, at least he knows he answered the question. Many students run out of time before they turn up.

Read the question carefully. If it asks to compare and contrast two points, don't simply describe them," Gross says.

Generally, he says, students who know the answers to an essay question don't have to write a quick outline of the answer before writing it.

But if a student draws a blank on the essay, trying to develop an outline would help him remember the material he studied.

Gross says there is almost a science to answering multiple choice questions. "We have a whole mini-program on that during the semester," he says.

There are ways you can analyze multiple choice questions," says Gross.

He says that on a standard multiple choice test, you should read each question very carefully, and pay close attention to modifiers such as always, maybe, sometimes and never.

Gross says to expect one of the answers to be a total throwaway, one answer to be obviously wrong.

For both multiple choice and true and false questions, he says "your first impression is usually more accurate than later impressions. You are more likely to change a right answer to make it wrong than the other way around."

On true and false tests, he says, many students mistakenly perceive a pattern of answers. The think 'I've had too many true's, so this must be false,' says Gross.

Qualifiers are crucial in multiple choice questions, he says. "It is very rare that something is always true or always false."

For both multiple choice and true and false questions, he says "your first impression is usually more accurate than later impressions. You are more likely to change a right answer to make it wrong than the other way around."

Harbinger honors

Female, male 'Athlete of the Year'

Kris Krueger

Kris was a main force for Harber's women's tennis the last two seasons.

She qualified for the national tournament the past two seasons in singles and doubles. In 1977 she was the only player to qualify from Harber of the NCAAA Region IV Tournament to qualify for the national tournament. She was the MVP for that year's squad.

Kris was elected captain of the 1978 tennis team which captured the state title and qualified as a team for the NCAAA.

Her record for junior college play was an outstanding 10-1 and her team to a third placed finish in the Cio Turner Invitational.

Kris teamed up with Mary Beth Pritch to win the NAC conference Region IV and state titles. She was a member of the first place team, first place doubles team and qualified for the national tournament for the second straight year in the Sectional tournament.

Kris, with the rest of the team, heads for Waco, Texas in hope of national title May 14-18.

Neil Schmidt

What is left for Neil Schmidt?

Harper's quarterback the last two seasons he was named 1st team All-NAC conference, 1st team Region IV allstate and was the first player from the state of Illinois to be named NCAAA 1st team All-American at quarterback. This season he led the Hawks to their first conference championship, first state championship, first bowl game, the Midwest Bowl, and eighth in the final NCAAA national poll.

Neil a graduate of Forest View came to Harper after attending that State for a year and became a starter late in his first season. On the first play he was in, Harper scored and it was a good sign of what was to come.

Neil was equally adept at running and passing and could always be counted on for a crucial first down.

This year he led the Hawks in scoring with 66 points, and scoring the most points in a game with 18. His most significant contribution was that he had a hand in 23 of Harper's touchdowns, either passing or running.

Mike Reif

Mike Reif and wrestling go together like ham and eggs. Frank and beans and all those other things that are natural winners.

When one talks about the Harber wrestling team one also has to mention Reif in the same breath.

Reif went as high as a junior college wrestler could go, winning the NCAAA national championships at 143 lb to achieve All-American status.

"Mike was one of the hardest workers and best wrestlers I've ever had," said coach Norm Loveless. "Mike worked so hard he deserved to win."

Reif was two-time All-NAC conference, his first year he was state champ and his year he finished second.

The Wrestling High School graduate, completed an outstanding record of 78 wins and only 14 losses making Harper a dominant force in wrestling in the state of Illinois.

"Mike never gave up on the mat, he kept coming at them, giving 100 percent all the time," said Loveless.

Next season Mike will parlay his success on the wrestling mats of the University of Nevada-Las Vegas where he received a full NCAAA scholarship and now goes on to claim a championship in NCAAA's.

NEIL SCHMIDT led the Hawks football team to its first bowl game, the Midwest Bowl, this year. Because of his excellent performance at Harper and that of Mike Reif, both have been named the 1979 Harbinger "Athlete of the Year."

New faces to lead teams

New faces will be leading Harper's baseball, track, golf and cross-country teams next year.

John Greff, associate dean of Physical Education and developing a physical fitness laboratory in Bldg. M.

He led his team to four Skyway Conference titles and two NAC championships while compiling an impressive 61 wins and only 19 record losses over eleven years.

He led the Harper track team to almost the equivalent record with 58 wins and 21 losses, and the Hawks always placed high in the state meet and nationals.

John Eliausk after nine seasons in stepping down as the baseball coach to devote more time to his football coaching, repositioning and teaching interests. He has led his team to an excellent overall record of 157-91.

Since the conception of the double-elimination format for sectionals Harper has always been in the finals and in 1977 they won the national championship and placed fourth in state.

Coordinator of men's athletics Roger Bechtold felt that golf was too time consuming and needed to give more time to the athletic program and basketball.

His golf teams won three NAC championships, and a second place in the state tournament with an overall record of 131-27.
